SMITH CLARIFIES STAND ON FARM RELIEF PROBLEM

Democratic Nominee Declared That Without Control of Exportable Surplus, Which is Not Acceptable to Mr. Hoover, There Can Be No Adequate Farm Relief—Promised Labor a Definite Remedy by Law to End Existing Evils Restricting Free Speech, Free Assemblage and the Rights of Peaceful Persuasion—Accused Mr. Hoover of Failing to Make Himself Clear on Various Issues of the Campaign—Asked Why Charles E. Hughes Had Not Accepted the Republican Candidacy.

NEWARK, N. J., Oct. 31—(AP)—Gov. Alfred E. Smith tonight declared Herbert Hoover's proposal for a special session of congress to tackle the farm problem "seems to be a surrender for the purpose of securing votes" and demanded to know what could be accomplished at such a session in view of the republican nominee's position on the farm question.

The democratic standard bearer in an address prepared for a one speech drive into New Jersey argued that Mr. Hoover's opposition to the "underlying principle behind the remedy of farm depression" was well known and said his rival for the presidency "had refused to accept the principle of the control of the exportable surplus." He added that without such control "there can be no adequate farm relief."

Besides taking his opponent's position on this issue, the governor promised the workmen of the nation, if the democratic party were placed in power, in regard to the use of injunctions in labor disputes a "definite remedy by law" would be provided to preserve the constitutional guarantees of individual liberty, free speech and free assemblage.

The democratic nominee also accused Mr. Hoover of failing to make his position clear on various issues in the campaign.

"I have made myself perfectly clear," he said. "The man who has not made himself clear is Mr. Hoover."

Hughes Only One Making Fight

Declaring he took as the text of his address the statement that "you can fool some of the people all of the time, all of the people some of the time, but you cannot fool all of the people all of the time," the nominee asked why Charles E. Hughes had not accepted the republican candidacy.

"He is the only one who is making any fight," he declared. "What are we up against. The same old thing that we have suffered for eight years: a candidate for the office of the presidency of the United States who is unable to talk for himself."

The governor contended that as an "indication of the desperation of the republican party on the farm question Gov. MacMullen of Nebraska had hurried to Washington and urged the republican nominee to make a promise to call the congress into special session in order to handle the farm question.

"What would be accomplished at an extra session of congress in view of Mr. Hoover's well known opposition to the underlying principle behind the cause of farm depression," the governor asked.

"He has refused to accept the principle of the control of the exportable surplus, without which control there can be no adequate relief."

The nominee added he had no doubt the talk of an extra session would be regarded by the farmers of the country as one more promise that will produce no results.

The democratic nominee also contended the republicans were attempting to fool labor. He said the opposition party had declared in its platform that:

"We believe that injunctions in labor disputes have in some instances been abused and have given rise to serious questions for legislation."

Fouling Working Man

He argued this to him constituted a "glaring example of attempting to fool the working man." He said the platform also contained a sentence pledging the republican party "to continue its efforts to maintain the present standard of living and high wages."

"No pledge is made to pass the legislation," he added.

"If the democratic party is entrusted with power under my leadership, you have my assurance that a definite remedy by law will be brought forth to end the existing evils and preserve the constitutional guarantees of individual liberty, free assemblage and speech and the rights of peaceful persuasion."

The nominee said he had favored legislation that would remove all unjust discrimination against women so far as property rights or privileges are concerned and had amended the civil service rules so as to give them absolute equality in examinations for public office.

"So far as the nation is concerned," he continued, "I favor the equality of women with men in all political and governmental matters, and I favor an equal wage for equal service whether rendered by a man or a woman."

Tackling the immigration question, the nominee again said an effort had been made to "misrepresent his position. He quoted the democratic platform as saying that "laws which limit immigration must be preserved, full force and effect."

"I stand squarely on the declaration," he said, "I shall do nothing to impair or weaken these laws."

Wages Raised Under Dem. Rule

The governor said he charged Hoover's statement that: "Real wages and standards of living of our labor have improved during the past seven and a half years of republican rule than during any similar period in the history of this or of any other country," and declared, "the present comparatively high scale of wages and standards of living were set during the war under the administration of Woodrow Wilson."

The democratic nominee said he favored adoption of a government program to prevent the suffering and enormous losses of unemployment; adoption of a scientific plan whereby during periods of unemployment appropriations shall be made available for the construction of necessary public work; and also approved of an immediate and thorough study of the modern methods of industry to the end that a constructive solution might be arrived at to absorb and utilize the surplus human labor released by the increasing use of machinery.

The governor reiterated his position on the tariff and said the working man would have nothing to fear from democratic success on this score, and added business, whether big or small, likewise would have nothing to fear.

GOV. SMITH BETWEEN WALLS OF HUMANITY IN NEWARK

NEWARK, N. J., Oct. 31—(AP)—Welcomed to New Jersey by a torch light parade, Governor Alfred E. Smith, tonight, in the same hall where his rival for the presidency spoke earlier in the campaign, accused the republican party with attempting to fool the American people on farm relief, labor, tariff, prohibition and a number of other issues.

Upon crossing the Hudson River from his home of New York, the democratic nominee passed over more than 12 miles of highways in Jersey City and Newark between lines of persons who illuminated his pathway by red and white flares.

The governor was welcomed to 113 Regimetal armory of the New Jersey National Guard with shouts, cheering, the tossing of papers and the shrieks of horns.

All seats in the 113th New Jersey National Guard armory were filled several hours before Governor Smith was scheduled to go on the air at 9 p. m. A few persons had been in the building since 10 o'clock this morning.

The building has an estimated seating capacity of 11,000.

Newspaper men entering the sections reserved for them found nearly every seat occupied by spectators and it was with difficulty that sufficient space was cleared for the 50 or more reporters.

On the platform near the speakers table was a broom of somewhat large proportions. The handle was painted red, white and blue, and on it were the words: "Al Smith" attached was a card reading "J. V. Gasbar, 8 Greenwood Place, Utica."

There was nothing to suggest the purpose of the broom, but one person on the platform came forward with the suggestion that it was symbolic of a "clean sweep" for the democrats.

At 8:49 p. m. a roar was heard from the outside announcing the approach of Governor Smith.

Noise Making

By the time the nominee reached the platform, the noise making machinery, both natural and artificial, was working to perfection.

Bits of paper were tossed into the air. The band blared away with the "sidewalks," and Halloween devices were brought into play all over the hall.

The din seemed to grow space when the governor threw a kiss to a woman in the press section.

While the uproar was at its peak, the nominee picked up the gift broom on the platform. He looked it over and waved it to the crowd, which already was testing its lung power to the utmost.

In the midst of all the hubbub, the band played the "Star Spangled Banner." It had partly finished the anthem before many in the audience heard it above the din.

Governor Moore of New Jersey, after an attempt at quieting the crowd, then shouted out a few words which ended: "I now present the next president."

Walking to the microphone, Governor Smith held up a hand for silence. He obtained this speedily. But only for a second as the crowd broke into cheers when he turned to greet the widow of Grover Cleveland.

Hughes All Right, But Mistaken

At the outset, the democratic candidate mentioned the name of Mr. Hughes and a chorus of boos came from the audience. The governor asked his audience to refrain from booing, saying: "Now, let me ask, please. That the time on the radio be not taken up that way. It does not benefit New Jersey with respect to a man like Governor Hughes. He is all right except he is mistaken. I will develop that. You can let me do the job."

The governor's speech tonight was the last he will deliver outside of New York between now and the end of the campaign. He has two more speeches scheduled but both of these will be made in home territory. One in Brooklyn Friday night and the other in Madison Square Garden Saturday night.

TELLS OF ATTEMPTING TO BURN HERSELF ALIVE

LAKE BLUFF, Ill., Oct. 31—(AP)—Sticking steadfastly to a fantastic story of self-immolation as her life ebbed away in a Lake Forest hospital, a 30-year old girl tonight provided for the authorities an unfathomable mystery by her almost unbelievable tale of attempting to burn herself alive in the furnace of the Lake Bluff village hall to prove to herself her spiritual exaltation.

The girl, Miss Elfrieda Knaak, attractive book agent and Sunday school instructor and former university student and school teacher, was found yesterday in the basement of the Lake Bluff police station, her clothing burned and her arms and legs charred to the bone.

If the girl maintains her story to the end, and doctors tonight said she cannot live, there is only one hope of solving the mystery surrounding her act, and that in itself is a mystery. During half-conscious intervals today the girl muttered the name of a woman who she said "can explain all." Her questioners, however, were unable to understand the name she tried to pronounce and she relapsed into unconsciousness before she could repeat it.

The body was partly hurled by leaves about 150 yards from the highway, off a wagon path which had been separated from the highway by a barbed wire fence.

The automobile, whose tracks were found on the wagon path, apparently was driven through the fence, entered the path, and turned near the spot where the body was found to drive away.

Hoover Expects Rep. Victory Next Tuesday

Republican Nominee Will Leave Today For Four Day Journey Into the West.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31— (AP) — Firmly confident that he will win if the people who believe with the republicans go to the polls, Herbert Hoover tonight went into the home stretch of his race for the presidency.

On the eve of his departure from Washington for the long journey to his California home to vote, the republican nominee reiterated his New York declaration of a week ago that he expected his party to emerge victorious next Tuesday.

"We shall win this election without any question of doubt if the people who believe with us go to the polls," the nominee said in response to a question at his final press conference before he begins the westward trip.

"How big is that if?" a correspondent inquired.

"There is nothing to be added to the first statement," Mr. Hoover responded.

Late today a letter from Secretary Mellon to James Francis Burke, general counsel for the republican national committee, was made public at the Hoover headquarters in which the secretary of the treasury said that the records of the bureau of internal revenue showed that Hoover had filed income tax returns yearly since the enactment of that law and that he had paid his taxes in accordance with those returns. The letter was in response to one from Burke in which he propounded that question.

The nominee said goodbye today to many prominent republicans, including William J. Donovan, assistant attorney-general; Ogden Mills, undersecretary of the treasury, and Theodore Roosevelt, Jr. Late in the day Chief Justice Taft visited Hoover's home to tell him goodbye.

A round of farewells will fill his day tomorrow. After visiting the headquarters of the republican national committee in the morning, the nominee will call at the White House to say goodbye to President Coolidge. At 5 o'clock he will board his train for the four-day journey into the west.

The remaining five days of the campaign will see him in action five times. Beginning with a speech at Cumberland, Md., late tomorrow, the nominee will make addresses in Louisville, St. Louis, and Pueblo, Colo., on his way across the continent. His final speech of the campaign will be made over a nation-wide hookup on Monday night.

Mr. Hoover will be accompanied by Mr. Hoover, their sons Allan[illegible] of his personal staff, several friends and a group of newspaper correspondents on his western journey.

Among the members of his party will be Dr. Hubert Work, chairman of the republican national committee; Ralph E. Williams, of Portland, Ore., vice-chairman of the national committee, and George Barr Baker of New York.

At St. Louis the nominee will deliver the principal speech of his westward trip. He will discuss his views on farm relief and inland waterways.

INSANITY DEFENSE OF MURDEROUS STUDENTS

ATLANTA, Ga., Oct. 31—(AP)—Insanity as a probable defense for George Harsh, 19 year old college student who police say confessed to a series of holdups involving two slayings, was indicated today when it became known an alienist had visited athe youth in his cell at Fulton Tower.

Harsh, with Richard Gray Gallogly, also a college student whom police say he named as confederate, has been named in two indictments charging murder in connection with the slaying of S. H. Meek, a grocery clerk, and Willard Smith, a pharmacist, during attempted holdups.

Dr. Frank Eskridge, Atlanta alienist, visited Harsh yesterday, it became known today, and spent some time with the youth and two attorneys who accompanied him, but none would comment on the conference.

BELIEVE BOMB WAS PLACED BY RELATIVE

BUFFALO, N. Y., Oct. 31—(AP)—The bomb that killed Frank Mirolla today when he stepped on the starter of his automobile, is believed by the police to have been placed by a relative or a friend of a girl with whom Mirolla is alleged to have been intimately acquainted a year ago. A relative of the girl, whose name the police refused to divulge, was taken into custody tonight for questioning.

The explosion hurled Mirolla through the open door of the garage, wrecked the car and building and shook houses within a radius of a block. Mirolla's death was almost instantaneous

Mirolla was arrested a year ago on a charge preferred by a girl. He was held for the grand jury and subsequently indicted, but the indictment was dismissed because of lack of corroborative evidence.

It is thought the accident occurred shortly after 6 o'clock and the Zaglio family remembers hearing a commotion in front of their house at that time, but due to Halloween activities they paid no attention to it.

Dr. MacCracken's View

NEW YORK, Oct. 31—Identification of the Protestant church with Volstedism and the anti-Catholic movement of the Ku Klux Klan in the present presidential campaign was decried last night by Dr. Henry Noble MacCracken, president of Vassar college, in a radio speech here. Dr. MacCracken exhorted New York "to maintain its ancient honor of kindly toleration."

Dr. MacCracken declared that while the only real issue of the campaign was the church in politics, the question was not a partisan one. He cited with approval the warning issued by Herbert Hoover against this peril, and also the views of the democratic leader, Colonel E. M. House

GRAF ZEPPELIN WAS OVER HOME PORT 10.50 P.M., E.S.T.

Made 4,003 Miles in Eastward Flight in 69 Hours—Created New Record by Dirigible Eastward Across the Atlantic —Flew Above Heavy Rain Clouds After Passing Central France—Officers Kept the Airship Headed For Friedrichshaven by Means of Their Instruments and Radio Directions

ZEPPELIN LANDED AT 1.06 A. M., E. S. T., TODAY.

FRIEDRICHSHAFEN, Nov. 1—(AP)—Completing the first round trip commercial trans-Atlantic flight, the Graf Zeppelin landed at the airdrome here at 7.06 a. m. today (1.06 a. m. eastern standard time), with passengers and mail from America.

FRIEDRICHSHAFEN, Nov. 1—(AP)—The Graf Zeppelin arrived over her home port at 10.50 p. m. eastern standard time. She had completed the first round trip commercial air crossing of the Atlantic.

The largest airship of the day had left Lakehurst, N. J., at 1.54 a. m. on Monday and thus completed her homeward flight of 4,003 miles in 69 hours. This was little more than half the time she required on her eastward flight when she flew 6,000 miles by the Azores route.

The Graf Zeppelin established a new record for eastward flight by a dirigible across the Atlantic. The British dirigible R-34, in 1919, made the only previous eastward flight from Roosevelt field to England in 75 hours.

With the approach of the dirigible the population of the town, swelled many times its normal size, was aroused by volleys of saluting shots. The people rushed pell mell to the airdrome where the crews of the Zeppelin works were already assembled at the hangar.

The airship, however, did not go directly to the field but cruised about over the town. It was raining but there was no wind. The ship was expected to land at about 11.30 p. m. E. S. T.

Not all of the thousands who had gathered to welcome the dirigible heeded the salvos of guns to tell them that the ship had successfully completed her voyage. Despite the rain which had been falling all night many persons had assembled sleepy in order to make a pilgrimage to the airdrome where a huge crescent of humanity had formed as early as four a. m. local time.

Large details of police and several companies of soldiers held the crowd in check when the Graf Zeppelin suddenly hove in sight. It was flying very low and fast from the northwest with bright lights shining from its cabin windows.

The airship, after allowing the cheering thousands a brief glimpse of her great form, rapidly passed out of sight and then reappeared a little later over Lake Constance.

Throughout the town the church bells were ringing frantically and a cannonade of saluting shots was being fired constantly.

Numerous searchlights played upon the silvery sides of the dirigible as it passed over the town.

CONSTANTLY CHECKED POSITION BY WIRELESS

LE BOURGET, France, Oct. 31—(AP)—At 5 p. m. eastern standard time the Graf Zeppelin was 60 miles east southeast of Paris, flying above the clouds. It had asked by radio for its position three times within an hour.

Parisians who had hoped for a glimpse of the great airship were disappointed for it passed well to the south of the capital, heading northeast. The motors were faintly heard as it flew above the clouds, passing Orleans and then Troyes in the upper Seine valley.

It constantly checked its position by wireless with air officials at the flying field here. Despite the fact that the heavy rain clouds shut out sight of the earth, the dirigible's officers kept her headed for Friedrichshafen by means of their instruments and radio directions.

ALL GERMANY FOLLOWED PROGRESS OF THE ZEPPELIN

BERLIN, Oct. 31—(AP)—All Germany tonight followed eagerly the progress of the Graf Zeppelin as it sailed over France. The last 900 miles of its long journey were not expected to be easy as central France was reported to be under heavy rain clouds and Dr. Hugo Eckener must apparently slip home between two low pressure areas.

Continued atmospheric disturbances today rendered communication with the air liner difficult. Even the powerful Nordeich station had the greatest trouble to establish contact.

Friedrichshafen, however, was bathed in bright moonlight with a light breeze blowing over the field where landing crews stood by with powerful searchlights.

The city of Bremen was thrown into a fever of excitement early this afternoon by a report that the dirigible intended to drop a bale of cotton there. The citizens crowded the roofs and other vantage points until it was realized that the report was without foundation.

Clarence Terhune, the St. Louis boy stowaway, has a great reception waiting for him. The only embarrassment he is likely to face in choosing between the movie studios, cabarets, menageries and fashionable department stores, all of which tell him to name his own terms for his services. Several hotels have invited him to become their honorary guest. Friedrichshafen authorities have been instructed to treat him with the utmost consideration.

SPEEDED ACROSS FRANCE FOR HER HOME PORT

PARIS, Oct. 31—(AP)—The homeward bound German air liner, Graf Zeppelin after a record-breaking run across the Atlantic, was back in Europe tonight headed for Friedrichshafen where she was expected at daybreak. It was the second time that she had defeated the stormy Atlantic and crossed it safely.

The huge airship, which had taken more than 111 hours to make the westward crossing, from Friedrichshafen to Lakehurst, N. J., crossed the French coast line near Nantes this afternoon and at 1.43 p. m., eastern standard time flew over the city at the mouth of the Loire speeding directly across France for her home port.

It was 1.54 a. m., eastern standard time when the dirigible slipped away from Lakehurst on Monday and just 69 hours and 46 minutes later she sailed majestically over the French seaport on the western coast.

The best previous dirigible run across the Atlantic was made by the British ship R-34 on her homeward trip in 1919. On this trip the R-34 took 63 hours and 13 minutes to fly from Roosevelt field to Clifden, Ireland, while her total time to her home port in England, was 75 hours. It probably will take the Graf Zeppelin about 75 hours also to reach Friedrichshafen.

The third day's flight of the air liner found her making fast time off the coast of Europe. Taking the northern route instead of the southern one on which she had made her voyage to America, the Graf Zeppelin was about 500 miles off the coast of southern Ireland Tuesday night. Then she turned in a southerly direction and sped toward the bay of Biscay which she entered about 6 o'clock this morning. From then on her course was charted by various ships which sighted her and reported her flying low and fast toward the coast. It had been blustery in the bay early in the day, but conditions improved as the day wore on and when she crossed the coast line conditions were favorable. There was a fair northeasterly breeze, but the ship was sailing along at a rate between 50 and 60 miles an hour.

Darkness had just set in when the Graf Zeppelin hove into sight. Her lights were ablaze and she sailed steadily above the city at a height of approximately 1,000 feet. She was flying directly east, on a course which would carry her straight to Friedrichshafen, which is on the same degree of latitude as Nantes.

A few minutes later the homing voyager passed over the populous suburb of Latremissiniere. It was just as the shops and plants in that industrial place had closed their day's work. Sirens and horns shrilled a screeching welcome to the great aircraft which dipped a few hundred feet and then made a half circle as if in acknowledgement.

Then the ship turned her blunt nose eastward again and was soon lost to sight.

The night was dark and cloudy, but there was no rain. The course which the dirigible appeared to be following was straight across France.

JOHN J. RASKOB SENDS LETTER TO HUBERT WORK

NEW YORK, Oct. 31—(AP)—John J. Raskob, democratic national chairman, today made public a letter he had sent to Dr. Hubert Work, republican national committeeman, inclosing documents which he said showed direct connection between republican campaign officials and the distribution of pamphlets attacking Governor Smith on the grounds of his religion. A copy of the letter went also to Herbert Hoover, Mr. Raskob said.

"Many of those associated with the republican party and the republican national committee," the letter said, "have been engaged in the despicable practice of inciting religious bigotry in our country through promotion, the preparation and circularizing of scurrilous and scandalous literature and false and misleading statements about the Catholic religion, because it happens to be . . . the faith of Alfred E. Smith. . . .

"Throughout the campaign, I, as chairman of the democratic national committee, have endeavored to conduct a fair fight, attacking your organization, party and candidates on issues, and avoiding scurrilous personal attacks."

The letter was accompanied by enclosures which included a photostatic copy of a letter described as having been written on Oct. 12 by Senator George H. Moses of New Hampshire, chairman of the republican eastern advisory committee, and addressed to Zeb Vance Walser, at Lexington, Ky.

REPORT OF BUSINESS ACTIVITY IN NEW ENGLAND

BOSTON, Oct. 31—(AP)—New England business activity in September was practically the same as during August, the monthly review of industrial and financial conditions in the New England district issued by Frederic H. Curtiss, chairman and federal reserve agent of the Federal Reserve bank of Boston, says.

Although the level was more than two per cent above that which prevailed during the period April to July, it was less than the rate for February or March. The index for September was about three per cent lower than for the corresponding month a year ago.

The average daily consumption of cotton by New England mills during September was the smallest for this month for ten years but there was an increase between August and September. Prices of raw cotton and cotton goods have shown a tendency to increase during recent weeks. Wool consumption for September increased over August by more than the usual amount.

The average daily production of boots and shoes gained over the previous month and also was larger than during the corresponding month a year ago. The value of new building contracts was the largest on record.

Between Aug. 15 and Sept. 15 there was an increase of 1.9 per cent in the total number of workers employed in identical manufacturing establishments in Massachusetts

"MANSFIELD LOOP" ROAD FAST NEARING COMPLETION

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Oct. 31—The new "circle" drive from Mansfield Center and return through Warrenville. West Ashford and Storrs is now beginning to draw considerable attention as the state highway being laid over the circuit nears completion. But a few miles from West Ashford to a point west of the Mansfield Farm House remain to be surfaced and as this has practically all been graded and made ready for the top dressing it is expected that the work will be completed before the snow season. While affording an unusually beautiful drive of some 25 miles the new circuit is important from a commercial viewpoint. It affords easy access to Willimantic which is the shopping center for the districts along the new road. The stretch from Storrs to Warrenville will be linked with a new highway from Warrenville to Phoenixville and affords a much shorter route between such points as Springfield and Boston via Stafford Springs and Putnam. The new link being built from North Coventry to Mansfield Depot is also designed to relieve traffic from the present highways from Hartford and points south and west to Boston or Providence via Putnam. The small rivers and brooks crossing the path of the new highway have been spanned with attractive concrete bridges. The highway itself, which departs considerably from the line of the old country road, runs through what was virtually virgin woods, following a course as direct as possible and opening new avenues of scenic beauty.

Conn. Mother Was Right

Within a few months there will be no more feverish, bilious, headachy, constipated, pale and puny children! That prophecy would surely come true if every mother could see for herself how quickly, easily, and harmlessly the bowels of babies and children are cleased, regulated, given tone and strength by a product which has proved its merit and reliability to do what is claimed for it to millions of mothers in over fifty years of steadily increasing use.

As mothers find out from using it how children respond to the gentle influence of California Fig Syrup, by growing stronger, sturdier and more active daily they simply have to tell other mothers about it. That's one of the reasons for its overwhelming sales of over four million bottles a year.

A Connecticut mother, Mrs. John Scully, 49 Glendale Ave., Hartford says: "Before my daughter, Evelyn, was a year old, she began having constipation. I decided to give her California Fig Syrup and in a few days she was all right and looked fine again. This pleased me so much that I have used Fig Syrup ever since for all her colds or little upset spells. It always stops her trouble quick, strengthens her, makes her eat."

Always ask for California Fig Syrup by the full name and see that the carton bears the word "California." Then you'll get the genuine.

CHILDREN MAKE MERRY WITH HALLOWEEN PRANKS

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Oct. 31—Tonight was a spooky night in Danielson. Scores of children contributed to the creation of this impression. The shades of night had barely fallen when the first of these joyous little celebrators were abroad in the land, and their numbers increased as the evening wore on.

They paraded in many sections of the borough Sheeted or masked, carrying pumpkin moonshines and other devices intended to send cold shivers running up and down one's spine they made the most of their opportunity to observe Halloween.

They organized impromptu parades, in some instances beating on pans or other articles capable of producing plenty of noise Their elders derived no small amount of enjoyment over their antics, seeing to it, however that the demonstration ended reasonably early.

Tonight, in numbers of homes here, was marked by private Halloween parties and there were those who went from town to enjoy Halloween dinner dances of an elaborate nature at inns at no great distance from Danielson.

This afternoon Chief John McFarland made an exhaustive but fruitless search for one of a group of boys who threw a stone that went through a rear side window of a big closed car driven by Cosmer A. Young of Mechanic street as the machine was going through Water street near where that thoroughfare enters Franklin street. Fortunately, no one in the car was injured. Chief McFarland went immediately to where the incident occurred. He ascertained that the boys ran up a drive that runs from Water street to the southerly end of the White Row after one of them had thrown the stone, but no one that Chief McFarland interviewed could give him any information relative to the matter.

The matter becomes of more than passing interest because of the fact that stoning automobiles is no innovation in that section of Danielson. It has happened so many times and there have been so many complaints about it in the past two or three years that the police would welcome some information that would put a stop to the dangerous practice.

A joint meeting of the Tri-Y and Hi-Y was held last evening at the Congregational parish house, this being the first meeting of the kind this season. Prior to the joint meeting separate meetings had been held. The joint gathering resolved itself into a Halloween party that was highly diverting Some of those participating were in costume. Garbed to represent Harold Lloyd, the film star, Miss Lillian Brown was given a first award for her cleverness in imitating a nationally known figure. Bertram Hammond likewise won a first honor for his inimitable get-up that might be described as a representation of a blushing flapper. There were games and charades followed by dancing.

At their next meeting the members of the Tri-Y will receive new members and elect officers for the ensuing year.

ONLY $442 RAISED AS RESULTS OF TAG DAY

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Oct. 31—Mrs. Susan Armington, treasurer of the Danielson Civic federation, said this afternoon that the results from Saturday's Tag day effort show contributions of $442. While this sum does not approach the $600 or thereabouts raised in last year's Tag day, it is regarded as generous and the federation is very appreciative. The members are particularly grateful to Powdrell and Alexander, the Goodyear Miller and the Assawaga company at Dayville for permission of workers to enter the mills and secure contributions from the employes and the same also was true at the plant of the Jacobs Manufacturing company here.

Among other things the Danielson Rotary club has planned to do is to make it possible for a large number of boys to learn how to swim during the fall and winter season. The lessons are to be given in the pool at the Plainfield Community house. Last evening several of the Rotarians furnished their private cars to convey 30 boys to Plainfield, and in the pool the boys had their first lesson under the instruction of William Scofield of the Killingly high school faculty. It was stated this morning that it is hoped to have as many as 50 boys taking swimming lessons within the next few weeks.

Patrick Riley, Attorney E. L. Darbie and Frank J. Gorman, as a special committee of the town, have been in conference relative to obtaining the services of a certified public accountant to audit the books of the town of Killingly for a period of six years back, as provided by a vote of a recent special town meeting. An outcome of this meeting was to invite such an accountant to come to Danielson, look over the books and make an estimate of what the audit is to cost. The town has made an appropriation available of $2,000 for the work.

There is considerable evidence of a revival of the turkey raising industry in this section of Windham county. Flocks are becoming more numerous and are quite plentiful this year. From appearances it would seem that the growers are giving turkey raising a gradual tryout, limiting flocks to from a dozen to 25 birds. It so happens that at least one flock has been brought to maturity this year within the limits of the borough, and all of the birds have done well. Pointing to what the turkey raising business may again become in nearby territory it may be mentioned that over at Chepachet, a half hour's ride from Danielson there is a flock of upwards of 400 turkeys, and they are thriving.

Women party workers, real active lieutenants, will aid in getting out the vote of the republicans and democrats in next Tuesday's election in Killingly, taking a more active part than ever before in a campaign. They will have their assignments to get a certain number of women voters to the polls, and have given assurance that they will do efficient and effective work. Women also will be numbered among the election officials, but this has been the rule for several years past and will not be so much of a novelty as seeing them actually engaged in getting the voters to the polls.

Today is the first day of the eleventh month, and if you make your first deposit in the savings department of the Windham County National Bank today, you will receive your first dividend December 1st.—adv.

Mrs. L. E. Kennedy is a patient at St. Vincent's hospital in Worcester, not at the Day Kimball in Putnam, as announced in this column this morning.

Many couples appeared in costume this evening at the Halloween dance at Kum-Along-Inn on the West Side.

In addition to the stores, an arcade is promised as a feature of the new business block to be erected on the site of the present Attawaugan hotel. This arcade, it is understood, will be reached through a lobby in the building.

State highway fences are now being put in place along the newly opened route from Main, at Hutchins to Stearns to Reynolds streets.

Many residents of Danielson will be numbered among the congregation at the All Saints day service at Old Trinity church, Church street, Brooklyn at 11 o'clock Thursday morning.

Armand C. Belleville of Bellows Falls, Vt., is spending a few days visiting with friends in Danielson.

Aside from a dance, no special provision has been made for the observance of Armistice day in Danielson. However, those who saw it will never forget the first Armistice day celebration ten years ago in Danielson.

In Killingly next Tuesday the polling places are to be at the town hall in Danielson, at Gingras' former store building in Dayville and at Paine's hall in East Killingly and the polls are to be open from 8 a. m. to 5 p. m.

Dr. Warren A. Tanner of Academy street, convalescing at the Day Kimball hospital after a surgical operation, was able to sit up for a few minutes yesterday for the first time since being stricken with appendicitis.

Only two more weeks remain for those who would retain their present automobile registration numbers for 1929 to file their applications for them with the state motor vehicle department.

Special All Saints service for Thursday and All Souls day services for Friday are to be held at St. James' church. The congregations at these services are expected to be unusually large.

Members of St. Albans' church gathered at the parish house this evening for a get-together supper. After the supper there was a period of entertainment that included a display of the magician's art.

PRE-HISTORIC TEMPLE DISCLOSED IN KENTUCKY

LEXINGTON, Ky., Oct. 31—(AP)—Discovery of new evidence of a tribe of pre-historic Indians in Christian county of western Kentucky is reported by Prof. W. D. Funkhouser and Prof. W. S. Webb of the University of Kentucky, who have been excavating an ancient ceremonial mound. The objects disclosed by the search are among the most ancient ever found in Kentucky, university archeologists declare.

The Christian county mound was 10 feet high and had a radius of about 75 feet. A crew of laborers removed 1,600 cubic yards of dirt before the scientific investigators relieved the workmen for the final excavating.

PUTNAM

SEVERAL LIQUOR CASES BEFORE JUSTICE COURT

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Oct. 31—Court cases built up by recent raids conducted in the town of Thompson by state officers of Danielson barracks were tried in justice court in North Grosvenordale today by Judge P. P. Tourtellotte.

The first case tried was that of Stanley Yesterercs of Grosvenordale, who was charged with owning and keeping intixocating liquors and an actual sale. He pleaded guilty to both charges and was fined $50 and costs.

The second case was that of Leonard Marteil of North Grosvenordale, who was charged with actual sale of intoxicating liquors. Through his attorney Irving H. Miron, of Putnam, Martell entered a plea of not guilty and the court returned a decision in his favor.

The cases of Auroe St. Germaine, Sophie Condos, Peter Condos, all of North Grosvenordale, and all charged with owning and keeping with intent to sell and actual sale were continued until Nov. 7. Joseph Lebeau of Thompson charged with owning and keeping with intent to sell and actual sale was presented and applied for continuance, which was granted until Nov. 12.

Antoinette Komisky, who was arrested by officers of the Danielson police barracks, was also arraigned before Judge Tourtellotte this afternoon, charged with owning and keeping with intent to sell and actual sale of intoxicating liquors. Because of the numerous cases already prepared for court the judge ordered that her case be continued to Nov. 7. She was held under $500, which she later raised.

Gasoline as a slave and menace to society, was clearly demonstrated to the members of the Putnam Rotary club, at their weekly noonday luncheon, held today at the Putnam inn, by Professor Charles Allen, a member of the faculty of Worcester Polytechnical institute of Worcester, and a hydraulic engineer of wide repute.

In his lecture, Professor Allen, through the use of scientific apparatus outlined the safe and useful tasks in which the explosive could play a leading role in accompolishing. His series of experiments also exemplified the destruction that could be brought about by carelessness in use of the refined product of mineral oil. Professor Allen proved to be highly interesting and instructive. Subbo Nickoloff, a member of the Rotary club is a former pupil of the Worcester educator and through Mr. Nickoloff's efforts, Mr. Allen came to Putnam to speak.

The business meeting was called to order by President James F. English and the most important act of the day was the adoption of Walter N. King and Arthur C. Keith, two of the city's leading business men, as members of the organization. Mr. King is a Putnam publisher and Mr. Keith is affiliated with the L. M. Keith Monumental Works and is an associate of Keith's Garage, Inc. Both are members of the Putnam chamber of commerce, Mr. King being its president.

The Cosmos club, an organization consisting of married professional women of the city, held a charity dance last evening at the Putnam Country club. The affair was largely attended and was a success. Decorations at the club rooms were in keeping with the Halloween season and made a beautiful autumn effect.

The members of the clubs are canvassing a milk fund for the city's poor and profit derived from the evening's entertainment will make a substantial contribution to the amount that will supply milk for the needy this winter.

NEW VOTERS TO BE SHOWN HOW TO MARK BALLOTS

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Oct. 31—With the largest number of new voters ever made in Putnam in any one year slated to cast ballots in next Tuesday's election the party leaders are risking no chances of losing any of the ballots by chance of a technical error and to prevent any such instance a class in correct ballot marking will be held in St. John's hall on Providence street, Sunday evening.

The plan of instructing new voters in correctly marking the ballot, so as to vote a straight or split ticket is being sponsored by the democratic town committee, Edmond Dubois, chairman, announced this afternoon. Sample ballots are to be provided and every new voter who remains in doubt as to what way he should mark his ticket, should plan to attend, as any error in the marking of the ballot will result in it being discarded.

There are about 700 new voters enrolled on the caucus lists of the town this year, who will vote for presidential choice for their first time, and many street arguments, which are frequent, indicate several of the new voters are uninformed as to the correct tactics to exercise in marking their ballot.

As this campaign comes to a close, interest is at its highest point, in the city and town and there is little doubt but what every registered voter will make it his duty to go to the polls to express his presidential choice, regardless of whether he is afforded transportation or not. Both parties have expressed themselves as to providing transportation to draw out every voter in the community. Those who are employed outside the city are requested, to leave their names with the town committees as to where they will be on election day, so the registrars may direct an automobile to transport them to the polls.

In Putnam as well as surrounding districts, the novelty of the continental type telephone is attracting much attention. The local telephone company is supplanting a number of the present desk phones for the foreign type of combined receiver and transmitter.

The epidemic of measles that was reported to be existing within the city limits appeared to be somewhat curbed this week, according to a health report received by Health Officer Peter A. Gardner today from the state department of health. Mr. Gardner said today that the statement indicted no new cases reported and a number of the first cases have been crossed from the list.

It was announced this afternoon by the Cargill Council Knights of Columbus and the Israel Putnam lodge of Odd Fellows that the second annual winter indoor sports tournament between the two faternal orders will open on Thursday evening, Nov. 15, at the K. of C. rooms and will continue each week throughout the cold weather season.

H. H. Ellis, director of the state trade school, is away on his annual vacation.

One thousand members in the 1928-29 quota of enrollments asked for the Putnam Chapter of the American Red Cross and a drive is soon to be launched in an effort to push the Putnam allotment "Over the Top." The annual roll call will be made in the form of a house to house canvass. Teams consisting of a number of workers have been appointed to secure the subscriptions and the following public spirited men and women have been appointed as chairman of the various teams: Team 1, Mrs. E. C. Morse; team 2, Miss Jennie Willis; team 3, J. J. Dupre and Charles A. Richard; team 4, Miss Ellen Wheelock; team 5, Mrs. Iver S. Nelson. Martin B. Robertson is chairman of the general committee and Miss Emma Roberts is chairman. The drive will officially begin on the week following Armistice day.

A special mass meeting in the interests of the Red Cross will be held at the Congregational church on the evening of Armistice day at which there will be an address by the Washington national headquarters of the American Red Cross.

Last year the membership quota assigned to Putnam was not so large as the 1928 list and every subscription was obtained and it is believed that the cause will be recognized by every citizen of the community.

A death in Putnam on Tuesday was that of Mrs. Alida Beauregard, of 2 Milton street, who succumbed after a short period of illness. Mrs. Beauregard is a native of Canada, having been born there on Oct. 20, 1878. She has lived the greater part of her life in Putnam and was widely known in the north end of the city where she lived.

About 125 members of the Ladies of Ste. Jean Baptiste gathered at a Halloween social held Tuesday evening in the Foresters hall on Marshall street. The evening's entertainment was most delightful there being two prizes awarded to the possessors of the best costumes that were in keeping with the season. The first prize was given to Mrs. Omer Maynard, who was attired in a costume of a fairy princess, while the second went to Mrs. Julia Caisse, who donned the most hideous, yet the most original. The hall was prettily decorated with silhouettes of black cats, bats and witches, which were all in keeping with the origin of the party. The enjoyable night came to a close when the committee in charge of refreshments served a supper at eleven o'clock.

The board of assessors will close their session of receiving tax notices from residents of the town subject to real and personal tax, on Thursday, Nov. 1. At the close of business today it was reported that about 1000 registered taxpayers had failed to make out and file their applications, which represented a deluge of those desirous to make last minute returns to avoid paying the additional sum of ten per cent.

During the hours of the session of the board of assessors held today delinquent taxpayers stormed the doors of the municipal building to avoid the last day rush which will come tomorrow. All property owned, which is not included in the return notices and which is later discovered by the board of assessors, will also be subjected to the additional amount of ten per cent, according to a statement from Arthur C. Tourtellotte, a member of the board.

Putnam motorists who filed application to the state department of motor vehicles at an early date are already in receipt of the 1929 registration plates. In several instances in the city, automobile owners stated they had received their new plates and will be ready to place their cars on the highways at the stroke of twelve o'clock on the evening of December 31, 1928. The new plates are of light maroon background with white numerals and may be easily read.

In the cause of a more efficient service line gangs of the Southern New England Telephone company were engaged today in stringing the small cables along Pleasant and Russ streets that will soon house the telephone wires of subscribers located on the streets. During the past few days the linemen have been setting up new telephone poles in various sections of the city to encase the open wires in cables.

It was observed today that officials of both major political parties in the city are circulating among the foreign speaking voters propaganda in favor of their candidates written in the native tongue of several races, especially among the Polish. Reason for this is familiarize the naturalized citizens with the pointers of the two candidates, Hoover and Smith.

During its 73 years of success in the treatment of colds, throat troubles and as a body builder, Father John's Medicine has come to be recognized in a great many hospitals and charitable institutions as having great value. Because it is guaranteed free from alcohol or drugs in any form, doctors recommend it.

Father John's Medicine is a high grade preparation of Cod Liver Oil with other valuable ingredients. It builds new tissue and strength and gives power to resist illness.

Doctors have known the value of cod liver oil for a great many years and have used it freely in their practice. Modern research has determined the reason for its value, and given it the name of vitamins.

SPECIAL MEETING ON ELECTRIC RATES

Apparently Mayor Robbins isn't satisfied with the response which has been made by the board of gas and electrical commissioners to his communication asking that a public hearing be held upon the new rates which that department has put into effect. He finds that there is a growing demand for the calling of a special city meeting at which the public will be given a chance to express itself and he has decided to act in accordance therewith. He does not accept the talk given under the auspices of the board as a compliance with request for the hearing which he made.

It is the belief of Mayor Robbins that opportunity should be given "for general expressions concerning our municipal plant's future welfare, its present management and the desires of the voters relative thereto."

The announced intention of the mayor to call a special city meeting follows the effort which the board is apparently making to dodge such a meeting. The mayor from all indications doesn't believe that the suggestion made by the board meets the requirements, and perhaps he feels that the graphic charts and data, which the board is prepared to submit, doesn't meet the situation any better than the charts and the data by which the existing commercial schedule was drawn up and which is already undergoing a downward revision.

From the announcement that has been made by Charles S. Reed of New York, the spokesman for the board, the board recognizes that the new rates are not what they ought to be. That upholds the contention that has been made by so many in the demands presented to the Mayor. The mayor believes that the whole matter should have an airing.

SMITH, RASKOB AND THE TARIFF

Chairman Raskob of the democratic national committee once more confuses the situation as to where Candidate Smith stands relative to campaign issues.

Much has been said about the tariff, although the democrats have tried to create the impression that there need be no fear of such action as that party might take in the event it was successful. Mr. Raskob in his latest statement indicates that the tariff should be left to a commission, whose position would be as independent as that of the United States supreme court. In other words he would deny the people the right to express themselves upon the tariff at election time.

That was the interpretation placed upon the statement made by Mr. Smith in setting forth his tariff views, but when attention was called to what it meant and that it would deny the people the right to express themselves upon it he declared he didn't mean anything of the kind. Yet in the face of that Mr. Raskob, who is running the campaign, says that is what ought to be done.

There were the days when Mr. Raskob and Mr. Smith were expressing almost opposite views in regard to farm relief and the equalization fee. There was the night when Mr. Smith went over his head on the waterpower question and now Mr. Raskob and Mr. Smith are talking differently about the tariff. Or, is it really so that they both think that the people, through their representatives in congress, ought not to have anything to say about the tariff?

Mr. Hughes has claimed that Mr. Smith is making a sham battle on the wet issue. It rather looks as if similar tactics were being employed concerning the tariff by Messrs. Raskob and Smith for Senator Simmons of North Carolina, one of the authors of the Underwood-Simmons tariff bill of 1913, and a member of the senate finance committee, declares "I am opposed to a protective tariff, and, if it becomes my duty, I will have to report a measure according to the platform of the democratic party which is against a tariff for protection."

Thus according to a leading democrat in the senate, one who would deal with a tariff, the democratic platform is at odds with the proclaimed attitude of Messrs. Raskob and Smith. There is no such question in regard to the republican party, its platform and its candidate.

CONNECTICUT'S DUTY

When Governor Trumbull spoke at Naugatuck he again dwelt upon the marked difference in the method of running the state governments in New York and Connecticut and the effect upon the people of the respective states.

While he had previously dealt with this situation he brought in as a rugged supporter of his own views the report of the national industrial conference board concerning the fiscal problem of New York state and from this non partisan source showed the advantage of the sound, businesslike administration which Connecticut has been receiving and should insist upon keeping.

Where New York has "forced up taxes until their burden has become an item of business cost which cannot be overlooked and has resulted in a debt burden that will make difficult any reduction of the tax burden in the near future," Connecticut has been operating under a pay-as-you-go policy with the result that it is today virtually out of debt and getting the best kind of results, a careful handling of income and expenditures without piling up a state debt and interest account.

The tax burden in New York state considerably heavier than in the average of all states, is the logical result of New York methods, while the board's report shows that "the farmers of New York state are considerably overtaxed as compared with other economic groups in the state. It was also effectively pointed out by Governor Trumbull that New York also exacts an income tax from its citizens and quoted the report to show the part which elements of extravagance and inefficiency played in the conduct of that state's governmental functions.

Connecticut has every reason to enthuse over the excellent manner in which the state government is run, and to such an extent that it ought to roll up a big majority in its insistence that it continue for the next two years.

Along with the election of the republican state ticket there should be the same emphatic demand that Frederic C. Walcott be our new United States senator, that the present congressmen be returned to Washington for the support which they can be relied upon to give to a republican administration. In this respect Connecticut's duty is clear cut.

INDIAN SUMMER

According to a quite generally held idea, this is the month of Indian summer. That short season, an unusually warm day or two in contrast to the frostiness of those preceding it, has been talked about since the end of August. As we went from cold to warm in that month, and more particularly so in October, there was common reference to the probability that Indian summer was with us.

Those days which were regarded by some as Indian summer were characteristic of the period, perhaps a little too warm for the time of year to be normal, but while they stood out prominently in September and in October it is highly probable that they will also be experienced in November. That at least is anticipated and that is the month which has long been regarded as the time for Indian summer.

Those who have sung of Indian summer tell us that it comes when there is "just frost enough to crisp the ground of a morning and warm traces of benignant sunny hours at noon" and when there is that soft, hazy atmosphere that "fills the sky through which the sun, shorn of its beams, rises and sets like a globe of fire."

Not until within a day or two have we had a frost that would crisp the ground, but now that that additional sign of the approach of winter has become evident it will be proper to look for the brief but much talked of Indian summer. We have reached the month that should produce it. We are bound to be restless and unsatisfied until we get it. According to one almanac we are told that commencing with Saturday and running through election day it will be "warm for the season." Such following cold frosty mornings that we have been having would answer well to the requirements of Indian summer.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The thin ice season has opened. Seven children were drowned while skating in Norway.

The election may be all over in a few days but the shouting will continue indefinitely.

The man on the corner says: Isn't it about time the weather prophets told us what to expect on election day?

Connecticut isn't going to go in for an experiment when it can get a true and tried certainty by electing republican candidates.

The strong part of the plea in the south to "stand by the faith of the fathers" is that it is found necessary to offer such a reminder.

From some of the predictions made by Chairman Raskob the idea would be gained that he had not heard of the way the election went in Maine.

Chairman Raskob has long been claiming Pennsylvania for the democrats. The democratic director of finance in Delaware laughs at it, and knowing what we do about republican majorities in Pennsylvania we think the latter is justified.

ALFRED E. SMITH'S AGRICULTURAL RECORD

Governor Smith's claim that he understands the farmers' problems—claims which he repeated and re-emphasized on his recent tour of the western agricultural states—are disproved by his record in New York, declares Hon. Leigh G. Kirkland, of Randolph, N. Y., chairman of the agricultural committee of the New York state senate.

The truth is that the governor has not only failed to show even a perfunctory interest in the farmers' welfare, but he actually has been hostile to the entire industry.

Speaking at Oklahoma City and bidding for the support of the farm states the democratic nominee made these absurd statements:

"The agricultural interests of the state of New York know I understand their problems. . . . I have cooperated with them to the last degree, gave them cooperative marketing associations, the construction of roads, and highways leading to the markets; state subsidy recommended by me as far back as 1920 for the improvement of roads to bring the farms closer to the center of consumption."

These claims were made by the governor in a section of the country which could not have been expected to have an intimate knowledge of his record as chief executive of New York and even less precise knowledge of his attitude toward farmers and farmers' problems. The first significant point in refutation of the governor's interpretation of his own record is that he has never been able to carry more than 13 of the 57 upstate rural counties. If he has been a friend of the farmer, the agricultural communities never have so demonstrated by their votes. Moreover, his connection with matters concerning the farmers of his own state shows these things:

(1) He supported the movement to make co-operative agricultural associations amenable to the anti-trust laws,—a movement which would have killed the co-operative system in the state.

(2) He harrassed the dairy interests to the advantage of the city of New York, and he made an astonishing recommendation to the legislature that milk be declared a public utility and its production, distribution and price be fixed by law and brought under the state and municipalities in the same manner as water.

(3) He campaigned for many years to abolish the state council of farms and markets and to substitute in its place a single Tammany-appointed commissioner who would have complete jurisdiction in matters pertaining to agriculture.

What He Favored

Improved highways and co-operative marketing associations—those were the only points favorable to farmers which Governor Smith mentioned in his speech at Oklahoma City. Even the New York state democratic committee in a campaign pamphlet could produce only a pitifully short list of his activity in behalf of the farmer. Here they are:

He encouraged improvements for the New York state fair.

He signed the largest appropriation ever made for the extermination of tubercular cattle.

He appointed a commission on rural motor express routes to promote the use of motor truck transportation. (It is well to recall that, during his temporary retirement after having been defeated in his second race for governor, the democratic nominee was connected with a large trucking corporation in New York city).

He signed a bill giving New York state a co-operative marketing system.

He advocated and signed bills providing for improved highways.

This is the governor's record on agriculture as he likes to have it presented. But there is a great deal on the record that Governor Smith has failed to mention—his attitude on co-operative marketing is one item for instance.

The first co-operative law was passed in 1918 and approved by the then republican governor, Charles S. Whitman, and the bill which Governor Smith signed in 1924 was after co-operative marketing had become established and was known as the standard co-operative act. It was for purpose of creating uniformity of law between states. This law was not essential for the farm organizations, and they were not particularly concerned regarding it although they approved it.

Governor Smith did sign the largest appropriation bill ever passed to reimburse farmers for the killing of tubercular cattle, but the state by police and legislation was obliged to make this expenditure.

The state sanitary code now provides that raw milk sold shall be from tuberculin tested cattle. The state cannot do otherwise than appropriate such amounts as required to pay for destroying infected live stock.

What He Opposed

When he was elected in 1918, Governor Smith immediately joined the movement for the repeal of the Donnelly act, which exempted the Dairymen's league and other co-operative associations from the restrictions of that law. This exemption is a principle recognized by the United States department of agriculture, the United States co-operative marketing law, the republican party and its nominee, Herbert Hoover. It is one of the underlying necessities in the solution of the farm problem. Nevertheless, the governor opposed this exemption, and he failed to remove it only because a republican legislature in 1919 informed him that no such repeal would be passed.

Defeated in that movement, Governor Smith turned to the dairy interests. He appointed two commissioners, both Tammany democrats, to investigate the milk situation, and a third commissioner, George Gordon Battle, another New York city democrat, (now one of the leaders in the Smith-for-president drive) to investigate the whole subject of agriculture. Late in 1919, Mr. Battle returned a report which contained the astounding recommendation that milk should be declared a public utility, that the state should take over the regulation of the entire dairy industry, should fix prices and establish regulations regarding its distribution. Governor Smith not only gave his approval to the report, but he preached its doctrines. In November, 1919, he gave an address in which he declared that the state of New York "must say what the price of milk is going to be" and that the legislature must pass a law declaring that "the production and distribution of milk . . . are a public function."

Milk

In his annual message to the New York legislature in January, 1920 he repeated that the state must declare the "production and distribution of milk to be a public utility." He went over the ground once more in January, 1920, when he transmitted to the legislature a special message dealing with the report of the fair price milk committee of the city of New York. And when the republican legislature refused to indulge in this bit of state socialism, Governor Smith issued a statement in which he said:

"It is a matter of great regret that the majority of the senate has seen fit to defeat the bill to provide a commission to regulate producing, transportation and distribution of milk."

When Governor Smith assumed office in 1919 he found the state's official activities in connection with agriculture directed by the council of farms and markets. That council was composed of eleven members, one chosen at large, one (ex-officio) the commissioner of public markets of New York city, and one each from the nine judicial districts of the state. All the members, with the exception of the representative from the First Judicial district, which is located within Greater New York, and the commissioner of markets, live in rural communities. They serve without salary; their interests are the interests of a prosperous agriculture.

Wanted to Abolish Council

Governor Smith decided to abolish the council and to substitute a single commissioner to be named by the governor. When George Gordon Battle undertook his inquiry of the whole agriculture industry, the governor advised him to look into the operations of the council. Mr. Battle obliged, and—remarkable coincidence—he echoed the governor's suggestion. He, too, urged that a representative council be abolished and that the Tammany governor be allowed to choose the dictator of New York's farms. Year after year the governor has urged this measure, and year after year the republican legislature has refused to turn the state's agricultural activities into such obviously political channels. This is one reason for the governor's bitterness toward the republican legislature.

The governor's opposition to the council became so insistent that in a special message to the legislature on March 5th, 1923, he did not find it necessary to disguise the fact that his enmity was due to the fact that it was controlled by agricultural interests. He said:

"Somehow or other the agricultural interests of the state have always seemed to believe that the functioning of this department belongs peculiarly and particularly to them, and persuaded the legislature that there should be established over the department a regency similar to that which exists in the department of education. . . . The attempt to keep all agricultural interests strictly under control of their own representatives is almost like the establishment of an agricultural soviet."

His Record

This, then is the governor's record on agriculture; he believes that farmers should not have exclusive control of agencies which treat of farm matters; he believes that the production and distribution of milk is a public utility and that prices for dairy products should be regulated by the state; he believes that farmers' co-operatives should be subjected to the anti-trust laws which are in force against industrial and commercial combinations.

That is the governor's record. It is the record he failed to mention in his tour of the west.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Un-American and Unpatriotic

Mr. Editor: As commander of the Department of Connecticut, Disabled American Veterans of the World War, and speaking in behalf of the many members of this organization in this state, I wish to emphatically object to the unpatriotic effort of the unnamed group which sponsored the advertisement appearing in the Hartford Courant on Sunday, in which the tomb of the Unknown Soldier was shown, with the caption "Who Asked His Religion?" A democratic speaker's statement followed.

Coming as it does, in the midst of a political campaign, such an anonymous advertisement, which seeks to make political capital out of a sacred shrine, is detestable, and a blasphemy which should be resented by every fair-minded citizen. Certainly, it represents nothing but an effort to inject into the election period an unfortunate and ill-timed appeal to prejudice and sentiment.

The veterans of Connecticut, I hope, will repel against such cheap, political tactics. Anonymous advertising of a political nature, which goes as far afield as this advertisement does, and incidentally takes liberties with a sacred American shrine, should have no place in any campaign. The implication that the sacrifice of the Unknown Soldier was, or is, a political asset, and that the veterans of the war, or any other persons, should be swayed by such trickery, is un-American, and unpatriotic in the fullest sense.

Will you be good enough to see to it that the sentiments here expressed find their way into your paper as a vehement protest against a sly and deceptive bit of campaign trickery, which should prove a sharp boomerang to its originators.

THOMAS S. McLAGAN,
State Commander.

Hartford, Oct. 30, 1928.

Big User Likes Rates

Mr. Editor: After hearing the various opinions about the change in electric rates, it was with fear and trembling I opened the new bill, expecting staggering figures, but it was a very happy disappointment, and in consequence I feel bound to say my bit in favor and praise of the powers that be who have given the electrical consumers situated as I am, the new rates. I have a small apartment and use the usual electrical appliances with an average number of lights, but my chief joy is an electric stove and fireless cooker (not purchased from the department), upon which I do all the cooking for my family.

The bill reads 140 KWH, which at 10c a KWH would have been $14.00, but with the new rate it is $5.50. I wish everyone could feel as satisfied as I go and that's why I'm strong for the new rate. Read hope. It means

A SATISFIED CUSTOMER.

Norwich, Oct. 31, 1928.

Injustice to Poor Men Overlooked

Mr. Editor: According to the speaker who appeared for the gas and electrical commissioners, the board has shown that its new rates for commercial lighting are unjust. There is going to be a correction.

Unless I am greatly mistaken, the board must also have come to the realization that the new rates for residential lighting are unjust to the little consumer. Did the speaker declare that this injustice was going to be corrected? Not so you could hear him!

Instead of declaring that the poor man was going to get a correction for his relief we learn that while he experiences an increase he's got to stand it. His kick doesn't amount to much. They do not care whether they give him service or not. If he does get it he's got to help pay for reducing the bill for the big user. He's got to dig down for more money each month for little or no electricity in order to help his better-fixed neighbor to get off cheaper.

I am glad to see that Mayor Robbins doesn't intend to be flimflammed by the gas and electrical commissioners. More power to him.

SQUARE DEAL.

Norwich, Oct. 31, 1928.

Wanting It All

Mr. Editor: Now that 25 of our leading merchants have filed an injunction against the sales department of the gas and electric department, I think, to have everything as it should be, the druggists should file one against department stores selling patent medicines and other drug store sundries at cheaper rates.

Grocers against drug stores selling groceries, jewelry stores against furniture stores dealing in jewelry, restaurants against drug stores serving lunches and undertakers and embalmers against furniture stores running undertaking parlors as a side line, etc.

But I suppose it's the way of the world—everyone trying to grab what they can while going through—and yet someone said: "Man wants but little here below."

No, they don't want a little; they want it all.

FAIR PLAY.

Norwich, Oct. 30, 1928.

Why Take a Backward Step?

Mr. Editor: Very many people speak as their inclinations lead them. They see what they want to see. Those who think prohibition is a failure can bring certain evidence to try and prove their case. Those who, like myself, want to support and maintain the present prohibitory law see entirely the other way. One thing we who wish prohibition to continue have many hard and cold facts to sustain us in our position. I am reading Professor Feldman's book, "Prohibition, Its Economic and Industrial Effects." It is a dry, scientific study of the ten years' operation of the law. It is not an emotional outburst of rabid temperance sentiment but a calm, reasoned argument based upon well ascertained facts. In every instance his statements are corroborated by excerpts from letters received from the management of great industrial plants or taken from the United States census reports. Hard, cold time-tested results are here set forth. In his study of the economic results of prohibition he quotes from a Missouri coal mine official from whom he got a signed statement. A part of it runs like this: "I have traveled for 30 years the same territory and today it is a safe conclusion to state that where there is one drink taken now there was a barrel drunk before. Living conditions, morals and the welfare of the different communities are better off." The same testimony is given by all the men of intelligence and moral competence. Why take a backward step? Let us hold to what we have and seek for more of the same thing.

REV. JOSEPH COOPER.

Norwich, Oct. 30, 1928.

Smith the Super-Man

Mr. Editor: The writer has been very interested this campaign in reading in various periodicals of how very much superior Governor "Al" Smith is to any of the opposing party and it has been a pleasure to hear during the last week or two how he surpasses any and all other democrats. It is only a short time ago that we read that Smith was the equal of Jackson, the hero of New Orleans, and that "the Sidewalks of New York" were just as great and important as the battle field of New Orleans in fitting a man to be president, and late, still another of "Al's" buglers tells the world that he is superior to Wilson, to Lincoln, to Jackson and to Jefferson. Why he is head and shoulders above all these is not said, in fact, needless to say though 10 or 12 years ago such an utterance would have been nothing short of treason. Superior to Jefferson, the founder of democracy, and to Wilson, "who kept us out of war!"?

There is one other whom I haven't heard rated as inferior to "Al"—Washington, "the Father of His Country"—but of course I have not read all that has been said about Governor Smith, so I will let Washington's utterances show his inferiority, when he said at one time: "The basis of our political system is the right of the people to make and alter their constitutions of government; but the Constitution which at any time exists, until changed by an explicit and authentic act of the Whole People, is sacredly obligatory to all"; while "Al" and his friends say, maybe not in so many words, that any part of the Constitution that they don't like is to be ignored or flouted, even if not actually broken, as it often is, and no real effort should be made to enforce or support such laws.

Norwich, Oct. 31, 1928.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON Oct. 31—Although President Coolidge had, up to this writing, limited his active support of Candidate Hoover to his stintie to the Bay Staters, folks familiar with the inner workings around the White House profess to see Coolidge strategy and campaigning theories underlying the type of appeal Mr. Hoover has elected to make to the voters.

The president is known to have advised the candidate during their talks at the summer White House in Wisconsin just after the nomination to conserve his health and no so seldom in about the country speech making. He is also understood to have pointed out to his former cabinet officer who was making his first try at vote getting that the one certain factor to be expected in any campaign was evidence of political ingratitude.

Harking back to the president's own campaigning methods through nearly a quarter century of running successfully for office, these observers point out two other aspects of the Hoover procedure which might well flow from Coolidge advice. It has always been the Coolidge way to camouflage so as virtually to ignore the actions and doings of his opponent. He has never believed in getting into verbal sparring matches and betherins about answering every attack made upon him. And so far as the record of the Coolidge administrations go, the president has plainly indicated that he feels it needs no defense or explanation but speaks for itself.

Silence Coolidge Policy

In that connection Secretary Mellon's counter blast at Governor Smith over the latter's assault on "Coolidge economy" now seems to have been very unwelcome to the White House.

There are also indications that White House influence with the republican candidate himself and with national committee campaign strategists has been consistently exerted against anything approaching a debate with the Smith forces over any of the charges that have been or may be hurled at the candidate or the party up to election day. The fact that from the outset Mr. Hoover has followed a line of strategy closely paralleling these known Coolidge views is used to support the theory that the president is filling a far more important advisory role in the campaign than appears on the surface.

Smith-Hoover Streets

It develops that Washington is already provided with streets or byways named respectively "Hoover" and "Smith". They are very insignificant thoroughfares in the suburbs but the capitol is at least prepared to show it was ready for any outcome. There are in fact two streets officially named "Hoover," one designated as a "place" while the other is a road winding round "Hoover Hill" an old time landmark. "Smith place" is the only official recognition of that name, but there are two narrow byways known in each neighborhood as "Smith Row."

SHOWS NORWICH ROTARY HOW IMMIGRATION CHANCES

Michael Kley, manager of the immigrant service and citizenship bureau of the Metropolitan Insurance company, was the speaker at the noonday luncheon of the Norwich Rotary club held Wednesday at the Wauregan hotel. His topic was "The New Immigrant and the Old World."

The speaker related interesting details about immigrants who have been coming from the days of the Pilgrim Fathers when the number was small, to the years befors the immigration laws were passed, when the total was over a million a year. He gave facts and figures that showed the response to the call of America by those across the seas.

"In 1917," Mr. Kley said, "America began to check up on those seeking admission to our shores and passed the literacy test law. The first restrictive immigration law followed in 1921, for equalization purposes and showing preferences to the people of northern and western Europe. In 1924 immigration was restricted in two per cent. of nationals of any country as of the census of 1890."

As a result, according to the speaker, within the last two years a selected class of foreigners has been admitted to America, the large majority being between the ages of 16 and 44. Eighty-eight per cent. of those who came over were examined on the other side, thus avoiding disruption of families barred because the quota was filled. Ellis Island is no longer the "Isle of Tears," he said, only four out of every thousand arrivals at the port of New York were barred last year. The speaker gave an interesting description of the character and complexion of the present immigration.

Mr. Kley pointed out that 307,255 immigrants came to these shores last year and that eight races, Mexican, German, Irish, English, Scotch, Italian, Scandinavian and French, made up 83.4 of the total immigration for the year. Europe sent us 158,513 immigrants last year, of which over 90,000 came from Germany, Great Britain and the Irish Free State. From the American continent, which is not restricted by the quota law, 144,231 immigrants were admitted, Canada sent us 73,154 and Mexico, 59,016. Mr. Kley brought out the interesting fact that 87,508 of the year's immigration were destined to relatives in the state of New York, 20,461 to Massachusetts and 5569 to Connecticut.

The speaker said that about 30,000,000 people have come to these shores since the earliest days. The federal census of 1920 listed 14,000,000 foreign born in the United States and since then about 5,500,000 immigrants have arrived. These people contribute to the economic, financial and cultural development of the nation. It is our duty to encourage their effective assimilation into our social body, he declared.

Norwich had a population of 22,304 in 1920, Mr. Kley continued. It is now over 25,000. According to the 1920 census 5,701 of the population were foreign born, over 3,000 non-citizens and 1,200 adult illiterates. The efforts of the educational agencies of North Adams are reducing these figures, he added.

A new federal census is to be taken in 1930, and Mr. Kley expressed the hope that the literacy and citizenship status of Norwich in the new record will show marked improvement. He suggested that the Rotary club sponsor a movement to encourage foreign-born residents to attend English classes, study American government and institutions and become citizens.

Mr. Kley closed his address with a graphic impression of Europe, using a map for illustration.

At the business session of the Rotary club meeting today President E. W. Jewett presided and Nathan A. Gibbs and Arthur M. Brown acted as song leaders. Benjamin H. Palmer, Jr., in charge of the program for the month of November announced his program as follows:

Nov. 7—Meeting to be in charge of H. B. Cary, chairman of the vocational service committee. The principal speaker will be Calvin V. Brown who will speak on "Your City and Your Business." The song leader will be Walter E. Turner.

Nov. 14—Meeting to be devoted to the Boy Scouts. The speaker will be a Boston man interested in scout work. Weston C. Pullen will be the song leader.

Nov. 21—Meeting to be in charge of John J. O'Rourke, chairman of the civic affairs committee. The speaker will be a man qualified to speak on the educational facilities of Norwich. The song leader will be C. A. Gager.

Nov. 28—Business meeting. The speaker will take "Thanksgiving" as his topic. The song leader will be Flint Brayton.

Two new members, E. Arnold Smith and John P. Morley, were extended the right hand of Rotary fellowship by President Jewett.

WEDDING.

Gow-Curnane

A wedding of much interest in Boston during the past week was that of Frederick W. Gow and Hazel Marie Curnane, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel B. Curnane of Madden, Mass. The marriage ceremony took place in the Sacred Heart parish and was followed by a reception in the Hotel Somerset, Boston, to which invitations had been issued to almost 200 guests. Among those present were Gov. and Mrs. Fuller, Col. and Mrs. Gow of Boston and Miss Margaret J. Murphy of Central avenue, this city. Mr. Gow is a cousin of Mrs. Fuller.

LAUNCH TREADWAY INN PROJECT WITH ORGANIZATION FOR CAMPAIGN

Fifty leaders among Norwich business men, representing the backbone of the city's financial strength, met at the chamberof commerce rooms Wednesday night to definitely launch the Norwich Inn project which will assure Norwich and its vicinity one of the Treadway System inns located on the property of the Norwich Golf Land company immediately adjacent to the Norwich Golf club house.

Amid great enthusiasm the group constituted itself as a general committee under the chairmanship of William G. Park, president of the Norwich Golf club, and accepted the responsibility of a campaign program that involves the raising of sufficient funds by popular subscription within the next few weeks to insure the success of the inn enterprise. During the three hour session a multitude of inquiries were directed at the speakers who are sponsoring the project. They were met in a way that apparently satisfied the keenly interested group.

Announcement was made of the acceptance, by Arthur M. Brown of the chairmanship of the campaign. Joseph C. Worth, president of the chamber of commerce, consented to serve in the capacity of associate chairman, giving the assurance of ably seconding Mr. Brown's activities and directing the work of the campaign during Mr. Brown's enforced absences from the city on legal business.

The working out of the financial program has been placed in the capable hands of Robert W. Perkins, of the Eastern Connecticut Power company who has accepted the chairmanship of the finance committee. These committees will be supplemented by a group of upwards of one hundred live wire men and women of Norwich organized intot hree major divisions under the leadership of division chairmen, divided into team organizations who will be charged with the definite responsibility of interviewing interested citizens and presenting to them the opportunity to subscribe to stock in the inn project.

Walter H. Pitcher secretary of the chamber of commerce, was the first speaker. He reviewed the steps leading to the present state of progress in the inn project. He brouch out facts regarding recommendations made in the Babson survey which laid particular emphasis on the necessity for additional hotel facilities. He stressed the fact that the industrial service committee, in presenting their report, felt that an additional commercial hotel would be antagonistic to the present hotel operators, a fact that led to a consultation with Treadway System representatives successful operators of well located inns in rural districts in New England. The Treadway organization has no interest in commercial hotels but welcomed the odea of developing an inn along the line of other hostelries under their management and control. After a survey of the situation they decided that the ideal location for one of their inns would be on the property of the Norwich Golf Land company and operated in friendly association with the Norwich Golf club. This matter finally came to a head after repeated conferences and Wednesday night's meeting was the culmination of the idea and the actual beginning of the practical development of the plan.

Option On Golf Club Property.

The corporation about to be created to conduct the enterprise has an option on the Golf Club property that expires December 31st, which demands a speedy and successful campaign to be able to take advantage of the offer in hand. With the chamber of commerce sponsoring the movement and assuming the expenses of the campaign those interested feel that an ideal combination of circumstances has been developed that will assure a successful conclusion in the hands of Norwich men and women.

Mr. Park announced the organization of the general committee of 60 and added that he had received assurance of co-operation from the few to whom the call for the meeting had been sent who were unable to attend the meeting. He made a definite plea for those interested to lend all assistance in their power towar the success of the endeavor which was pledged. He expressed his gratification of the assurance of co-operation from Campaign Chairman Brown and the others who had already agreed to serve in some capacity which further included Charles W. Taggart who has already performed a real service in his capacity as chairman of the building committee.

Inn Of 70 Sleeping Rooms.

Mr. Perkins went into great detail as to the financial plan which has been carefully worked out in the best interests of all the contracting parties. He disclosed that a very careful investigation had been made of all phases of the enterprise; that the type of hotel had been thoroughly canvassed and that hotels visited which are operated under the Treadway system show a success in every venture.

The figures he presented show that the cost per room will be about $4,000, which will make the total cost of the hotel structure as planned for Norwich amount to about $280,000 allowing for a planning of 70 sleeping rooms.

The financial plan as projected will preserve the present status of the golf club without an increase of dues, but with many added opportunities for additional revenue. The finance committee suggests improvements to the present quarters of the golf club which will be taken under consideration by the building committee.

Mr. Perkins further announced the securing of an option on six additional acres of land that will round out the tract now owned and controlled by the Golf Land company and which will enhance the value of the present site considerably.

Norwich Location Superior.

Joseph A. Peck, vice president of the operating company the Consolidated Hotel Service, which operates Treadway System hotels arrived from New York with all sorts of informative material which he proceeded to lay before the thoroughly interested groups. Mr. Peck stressed the fact that every one of the hotels under Treadway management for one year or more shows better than 6 per cent. on the investment. He declared that no location they now have is a sgood as Norwich that none of their inns are situated near a city of this size and expressed the belief that the city itself will produce a large proporation of the revenue. He assured those present that the Norwich inn would be the center for dinner parties for a radius of 30 miles or more and he showed the advantage of the long golf season here and the value of the relationship between the hotel and the golf club, which he regards as a great asset for the inn. Mr Peck emphasized the fact that it would be a mutual enterprise with the hotel helping the inn and the inn helping the golf club. Actually one group working for a common result. He told of the reasonable rates for Treadway inn accommodations and several men present rose to testify as to their experience along this line and the satisfaction they enjoyed fro mtheir visits to Treadway Chain inns.

Mr. Peck reviewed briefly the history of the Treadway development which began with the Williams inn financed by the alumni of Williams college eleven years ago, to the last inn established at Middlebury in a town of 2,00 which is in successful operation after a period of less than one year of existence. All the Treadway Inns show an equaly remarkable development in the way of successful operation. The Treadway System is to design, construct and operate the hotels under their management, taking advantages of wholesale buying of equipment and supplies and conducting the whole chain in a spirit of strict economy coupled with the use of the best materials and food supplies. In short, he said, the Treadway Inns have achieved a success that augurs well for the Norwich enterprise which is so soon to be presented to the citizens of Norwich for their consideration, approval and support.

DISCUSSES THE CANDIDATES FOR PRESIDENTIAL ELECTION

Building a better world, the instrument of politics, the presidential election and the signing of the peace pact at Paris were the topics interestingly discussed by Mrs. Marian Gaylord Atwell of New York city Wednesday evening at the Wauregan hotel at the second of the series of talks being conducted by the Women's City club. The various subjects were capably handled by the speaker and the touches of humor interspersed throughout her talk were greeted with laughter, as a number of them were at the expense of women. The speaker was introduced by Mrs. A. N. H. Vaugn, chairman of the current events committee.

Dealing with the topic, Building a Better World, Mrs. Atwell asked the question, What are some of the signs that tend to show that a better world is in the building? The speaker referred to the peaceful and orderly manner in which the election at Honduras was carried out, the peaceful conditions existing between the United States and Mexico brought about by Ambassador Morrow, Colonel Lindbergh and the American children and the improved conditions in the far east. The speaker also spoke of Dr. Eckener placing the wreath on the grave of the Unknown Soldier at Arlington, which pointed to the fact that the war hatred had died out. By the peace pact of Aug. 27 at Paris practically all the world renounced war, said Mrs. Atwell, with the closing statement, "We certainly are justified in believing that a better world is in the building."

Taking up the subject, the Institute of Politics, Mrs. Atwell spoke at length, explaining that the institute was started at Williamstown eight years ago and had been attended by all sorts of persons including representatives of governments of Europe, college professors, lawyers, doctors, etc., all supposed to be experts on certain subjects. She told how the school was conducted, what topics had come up for discussion and spoke of the work of a number of the foreign attendants.

In speaking of the campaign, Mrs. Atwell, said in part: It is the most extraordinary and interesting campaign, because the country is so alive. The young and old, rich and poor, are interested. They are discussing the various issues, prohibition, the protective tariff, etc. They are all going to school. Unusual features of this campaign are the principles, the platforms, the issues, and the shifting of votes. Because of the shifting of votes no one knows what the outcome will be.

Why should I vote for Mr. Hoover? Because Mr. Hoover is a candidate of the republican party. Because Mr. Hoover as secretary of the commerce has revolutionized that department by his efficiency and engineering ability. Because of his knowledge. Because he believes in high protective tariff. Because he doesn't believe in the remission of the war debts and for his stand on immigration.

Why should I vote for Mr. Al Smith? Because he is a democrat. Because I believe that party is a great power. Because he believes so in the people. Because he is frank, candid and courageous in the campaign. Because he made one of the best governors of New York. Because he is willing to admit his ignorance and call into consultation wiser men.

Why should I vote for Mr. Thomas? Because I am a socialist. Because he is a graduate of Princeton university and other colleges. Because he has the eloquence and humanity of Mr. Smith. Because he is a combination of the other two candidate. Because of his broad human touch I, as a socialist, will vote for Mr. Thomas.

I met Mr. Thomas the other day and he said that he knows that only a few will vote for him, but he believes that the small group of which he is the presidential nominee may be the nucleus of a large party.

But of the other two candidates, which ever man is elected, he will be a fine and strong president. There has not been a time when two candidates have been more evenly matched. All the world is watching this election. Everyone is going to vote early.

The aim of the nations, which signed the peace treaty at Paris in August, was to abolish war for all time and bring peace. The signing of the treaty was the "key block" to do away with war and bring peace. The goal is in sight, concluded the speaker.

DRAWS TWO FINES FOR MOTOR LAW VIOLATIONS

Found guilty on two charges, failure to grant the right of way and without having his operator's license with him, Joseph A. Gernhard of Colchester was fined a total of $13 and costs, $10 on one charge and $3 on the other charge, in the city court Wednesday morning. He was summoned to court Tuesday night, following a collision at Otis street and McKinley avenue. The other machine in the accident was owned and operated by Christopher Barry of No. 37 Reynolds street.

BRINGS FORECLOSURE SUIT ON GRISWOLD FARMS

Foreclosure of a mortgage for $1,000 on two tracts of land in Griswold is sought in a suit brought in the superior court by Agnes Walsh against Nick Juroch, both of Griswold. The land is on the road from Pachaug to Honeyville, one tract consisting of about 35 acres and the other of 11 acres. The mortgage was originally given July 16, 1923 by Joseph Glowacki, who sold the property about a year later to Victor Sorokolitt, who in turn sold it to Juroch on Aug. 5, 1925. Sorokolitt claimed $700 mortgage on the premises.

YANTIC GRAIN CO. BUYS IN ROCKVILLE

The Rockville Milling company, which for the past 25 years has been owned and conducted by Sherwood C. Cummings, has been sold to the Yantic Grain and Products company, which has a main office in this city, and has 11 stores. The transaction includes the property, the mill, the store house and tools. The new concern takes possession today (Thursday).

HALLOWEEN CELEBRATORS HAD MERRY EVENING

Haloween was celebrated Wednesday night by the younger generation, who were out in force in comical and grotesque costumes. Throughout the evening the streets were filled with youthful celebrators who, in numerous cases, made general nuisances of themselves. There was the usual ringing of door bells, rapping on windows, carrying off of gates and almost everything that wasn't nailed down.

The police received many complaints from exasperated citizens, asking them to chase youthful troublemakers from their premises. Motorists complained early in the evening that in Norwich Town two oil barrels were placed in the highway, leaving just room enough for machines to drive between them. Police headquarters notified Constable Lucius A. Fenton, who put a stop to the dangerous form of amusement.

In some sections of the city ash barrels and garbage containers were upset and their contents liberally sprinkled on lawns and driveways. One of a group of boys, in their "teens," equipped with a whistle such as used by the police, took particular delight in blowing it as motorists were passing up and down Broadway and at Shannon corner. Hearing the whistle, numerous drivers stopped their machines, thinking it was a police signal. Another group in the center of the city had a dummy figure of a man which they planted in the path of automobiles, causing cautious drivers to come to a stop.

Pumpkin moonshines were not as numerous on the streets this year as in past years.

During the early evening a complaint was made to police headquarters that a $75 window had been smashed by celebrators at the Osgood Memorial parish house at Park Congregational church. Officers were sent to investigate and when they arrived discovered that the window was intact. A peculiar way in which lights were reflected from the window gave the complainant the impression that the window had been smashed.

The trolley car which left Yantic at 11:30 o'clock arrived in Franklin square at 11:55 o'clock with a large barrel tied on the rear. The trolley crew was evidently unaware that the barrel was riding on the rear fender.

Tells Dyspeptics What To Eat

Strict diets are often unnecessary to stomach trouble. While some foods do produce excessive acidity and many stomachs do generate "too much acid" causing gas, sourness, bloating and after-eating pains, the trouble may be safely and quickly corrected by the use of a good alkaline. Bisurated Magnesia—powder or tablets—is ideal for this purpose. Just a little after meals neutralizes all the excess acid, prevents souring, breaks up gas and ends indigestion. Favorite foods no longer upset stomach and digestion is easy and painless. It will do all this for you or money back. Reliable druggists everywhere sell Bisurated Magnesia with this guarantee.

PERPLEXING POLITICS BRINGS SUSIE OUT OF HER RETIREMENT

An apparent indecision as to which presidential candidate to vote for in the coming election has brought out our friend Susie who has been in more or less retirement since early in the summer. Her perplexity over the situation is not new but it shows how the minds of the new voters are working. Her letter follows.

Dear Ed: Gosh, its been along time since I wrote to you last. You know between taking care of a man alleged to be my husband, listening to radio political speeches so full of mud you wanta wash out the loudspeaker after they are over, and trying to dope out whether your electric light bill is going to show a win or a loss I ain't had much time to push a pen. Say Ed, as I don't get out much nowadays I gotta a lotta questions to ask you. You don't need to answer 'em right out in public but you can drop me a line some day when you got time.

Who are you for Smith or Hoover and why? Now I don't know that's sort of personal and ain't none of my business so you don't need to get peeved or you don't have to answer if you don't want to. But I ain't quite clear on this presidential stuff myself. My father is for Hoover and Ma is for Smith and they ain't spoke to each other since last month. Pa sits down in front of the radio and when Smith is speaking Pa just keeps saying "Baloney" and when Hoover is talking Ma says "Blah." 'Course I know when the election's all over one of the other's going to say "I told you so" and that ain't going to set well with the other. As for me I kind of between the devil and the deep blue sea, I can't side with ma without getting pa riled up and vici versa. And to tell you the low down on it I'm kind of muddled up as to who to throw in with, Smith or Hoover. I hear a lotta radio speeches but they don't mean much. One side says the other is all wet and if they get elected the country's going on the bum. Then the other side says that ain't so and starts in to tell how crooked the other side is. Do you know any more than me?

Then Ed, what is a political rally? Is a republican rally just for the republicans and a democratic rally just for the democrats to bolster up their courage and keep 'em from backsliding or is it for everybody with the republicans trying to win over the democrats and the democrats trying to win over the republicans? If it's the last I think it's kind of a flop and waste of money. You could count the democrats that go to a republican rally on your fingers and the same way when the democrats hold a rally. I had a night off a while ago and I went to a democratic rally. As I was going in to the hall I saw a republican office holder and I says to him, "Are you going to the rally?" He says, "Oh, My Gosh, no if I went to the rally and any republicans should see me they'd say I was a turncoat." Say Ed, if you don't go to the rallys of both parties how are you going to know which is right? Why wouldn't it be a good idea to hold a get together and have the speakers from each side, a sort of debate. Of course you had better furnish the speakers with sixteen ounce boxing gloves in case things get too hot so they wouldn't do no damage to each other. Might be well to furnish the audience with gloves too.

It's got so now that when the boy friend comes strolling in asking for salt port or beefsteak for a blackened glimmer I know he's been doing one of three things, arguing politics, arguing about the electric rates or drinking fighting liquor. He ain't so marked up when its the last.

Speaking about electric rates there's a trick situation for you. The rates is lower but the bill is higher, which ain't so hot. When, under the old rate I paid $1.90 a month and then after listening to all the benefits of the new rate I find my bill is $1.97 I ain't going to dance joyfully down the street shouting for the populace to join me in serenading the G. and E. department for their great work in helping suffering humanity. Not me, brother, not me. Looks to me like there's a catch in it somewhere's cause my neighbor who had five rooms like I got says she gets a reduction of $1.40 on her bill because she burns more juice. Guess the only way to get the benefit of the reduction is to spend more money, ain't that a hot one? I burn all the juice I want and don't need no more but do I get a reduction—not much, I pay 7 cents more for my kilowatts. Somehow it seems like there's couple of inequalities crept in somewhere. Seems like my seven cents went to help pay for Mrs. J's electricity. They tell me that the reduction cuts down the department's revenue $17,000 annually but they hope to make up the difference by selling more juice and more electrical doo-dabs, etc, which by the way, means more commission for the salesmen. Gosh, there's a thought, maybe I could get the boy friend a job selling curling irons and electric flats. Speaking of electrical flats the married men prefer electric flats to the old fashioned kind, cause friend wife thinks twice before heaving a flat iron what costs four or five bucks. It didn't hurt the old ones to heave them round the house, but the electric ones ain't so rugged.

Now Ed, I'm kinda in a fog on these two questions. I don't know whether to vote for Hoover or Smith, seeing its my first chance to make use of the vote. Politics ain't in my line. Now as for the electric rates would you advise me to go and buy a electric washing machine, new vacuum cleaner and a electric refrigerator and keep my light burning all night to get the benefit of that reduction. Or would it be best to go along as I'm doing now and pay the extra seven cents. I think by paying the seven cents each month I'll be ahead at the end of the year.

Well Ed. I gotta stop now. If you get a chance write me about these things. Here's hoping either Smith or Hoover is elected and you get a reduction in your electric bill.

Yours as ever,

SUSIE.

YALE MAY PLAY AT CHICAGO IN 1931

CHICAGO, Oct. 31—(AP)—Yale may come west for a football game with the University of Chicago in 1931.

Amos Alonzo Stagg, director of athletics at Chicago, today said he would accept the contest, if offered, but that he has had no correspondence or negotiations with Yale athletic authorities. The report was started in New Haven today, but Yale authorities withheld comment.

If the game is arranged, it would be the first time a Yale eleven has ever left the Atlantic seaboard.

The movement for a Chicago-Yale contest is being sponsored by the Yale club of Chicago, Stagg said. Henry Gardner, president of the club, told alumni at a meeting yesterday he had high hopes that Yale would appear on the Chicago gridiron in 1931.

Stagg, a graduate of Yale, was a football and baseball star on old Eli teams nearly 40 years ago.

MEEHAN HAS NEVER COACHED UNDEFEATED TEAM

NEW YORK, Oct. 31—(AP)—If the New York university football team keeps on as it has started and achieves an undefeated season its coach, Clark Meehan, will have a hard time believing the feat has actually been accomplished. Meehan has been associated with college football for 12 years, nine of them as a coach, and never has his team gone through a season without being beaten, although on more than one occasion it missed the mark by the narrowest of margins.

The spectre of at least one bad day, one poorly played game, always has bobbed up to spoil a spotless record. To give their popular coach his first unbeaten eleven and at the same time drive home their claim to eastern supremacy, Captain Al Lassman, Ken Strong and Co. must get by Georgetown this Saturday, catch their breath against Alfred the following week, then plunge on past Missouri, Carnegie Tech and Oregon State.

An important part of Meehan's preparation for the Georgetown game, which he looks upon as probably the hardest test on the schedule, consists of efforts to eliminate danger of overconfidence. An effective method is the recital of what happened to other great teams developed under Meehan after they had breezed through to mid season even as impressively as this great Violet machine has done.

The record of Meehan's rare but persistent reverses to which old man Jinx well may point with pride follows: As head coach—

1927—N. Y. U.—Tied by Colgate and Penn State; beaten by Nebraska.

1926—N. Y. U.—Beaten by Nebraska in last game of season after winning eight straight.

1925—N. Y. U—Beaten by Fordham and Rutgers; tied by Columbia.

1924—Syracuse—Tied by Pittsburgh; beaten by West Virginia Wesleyan and by Southern California in post-season game.

1923—Syracuse—Beaten by Colgate although only three points were scored against Syracuse in all other games.

1922—Syracuse—Beaten only by Pittsburgh, tied by Penn State and Brown.

1921—Syracuse—Beaten by Pittsburgh and Washington & Jefferson.

1920—Syracuse—Tied by Pittsburgh, beaten by Holy Cross and Maryland. As field coach—

1919—Syracuse—Beaten by Washington & Jefferson; beaten by Indiana and Nebraska in last 2 games of season As player—

1917—Syracuse—Beaten only by Pittsburgh.

1916—Syracuse, beaten by Pittsburgh, Michigan, Dartmouth and Colgate.

1915—Syracuse—Beaten only by Princeton; tied by Dartmouth and Montana.

SOCCER GAME SUNDAY AT J. B. MARTIN FIELD

There will be a soccer game on the J. B. Martin field this coming Sunday, Nov. 4th, which should prove to be a treat for the fans in this vicinity when the Velvetmen clash with the Highland F. C. of Rhode Island, a team composed of all-star players, some of whom were formerly connected with the Bradford F. C. of the same state. They are coming to Taftville determined to win, but as the J. B.'s intend to put up a stiff opposition the boys are having daily practice sessions in order to be in first class condition for this game. Further particulars as to line-up and starting time will be given in the Saturday morning's Bulletin.

HIGH SCHOOL SPORTS

The annual Academy-Bulkeley cross-country run will be staged this afternoon at New London. A spirited race is looked for as both teams are fairly even on comparative scores. Last year the Academy won the race.

Westerly meets LaSalle Academy of Providence this afternoon at Westerly. This game has quite a bearing on the Rhode Island state grid title.

Billy Tirrell, former Academy quarterback, is now calling the signals for the Wesleyan freshman. He directed the team in Wesleyan's 20 to 0 victory over Amherst '32 last Saturday.

Windham is putting in some stiff licks in practice this week, being intent on stopping the Academy Saturday. Windham is having one of her worst seasons in years, but, as the Academy game is her major one, anything is likely to happen.

The Academy is also working hard. With Capt. Buck LaCroix in action in the backfield from the start the Wildcats will be a tough team to stop. The aerial game is bound to be stressed with LaCroix back. The Brock-Fagan-LaCroix-Marks combination is about the best the Red and White has had in some time.

Thompson Kayoes Gordon

CHICAGO, Oct. 31—(AP)—Young Jack Thompson, Pacific coast Negro welterweight, was awarded a technical knockout decision over Danny Gordon of Philadelphia in the second round of their scheduled ten round bout tonight when Referee Joe Collins stopped the fight to save the Philadelphian from further punishment.

Belgian Team in Lead

CHICAGO, Oct. 31—(AP)—The Belgian team of Debaetes and Declerck, clung to its one lap lead in the six day bike race at the Broadway armory as it reached its 66th hour today.

The Belgians have covered 1 119 miles nine laps and have 66 points to their credit. The 14 other teams were so closely bunched, however, that it was anybody's race. Several riders have been injured and 183 laps stolen.

TALBOT WILL MEET AN UNKOWN OPPONENT AT MONTVILLE TONIGHT

Harold Talbot, the Montville Panther, will not meet Farmer Steve the Pachyderm of Yantic tonight at the Uncas club show at Montville this evening but will take on an unknown in the main attraction of the card, according to announcement made by Promoter Arthur Kumpf (Kid Wilson) last night. However this does not attract from the card in the least as Mr. Kumph promises that Talbot's opponent will compare favorably with the Pachyderm who by his own admission is not in the best condition at the present time. Who this unknown was Promoter Kumpf refused to state but said that his was the same type of fighter as Talbot himself which assures the fans of a real top notch attraction.

Farmer Steve stated last night that he had rather meet the Montville Panther in a Norwich ring rather than at Montville at a time when he was in better condition. He said that he would rather not fight than disappoint his followers by putting up a poor showing because of poor form. It is his public that Steve is thinking about. While the fans are disappointed at not seeing Steve in action they will heartily agree that he is taking the right attitude.

The card for tonight looks like real bang-up good show from all viewpoints. The promoter has arranged a well balanced card with bouts in at least five classes in the eight bouts. The little boys will probably open the show with Baby Joe Gans, the miniature replica of that dusky battler whose name he bears, meeting Young Monty in a return engagement. Those who saw the midgets swapping punches at the Olympic last week saw as nice a bout as can be seen anywhere.

Eddie Sharkey, popular local boy who is coming on fast, is booked to meet Young Dalgalo, the lad with whom he fought a slashing draw. These two bouts alone should make the card a success.

Johnny Emilyia, the heavyweight from Montville, who fought Billy Brush here last week takes on George Carpenter of Willimantic in another feature. Real slugging will be seen in this bout.

Sheik Gudula of Uncasville stacks up against Johnny Brown of New London in a glove throwing free-for-all which again will give the fans plenty of real action.

Toots Gardner of Montville clashes with Eddie Lewis of New London while Malcolm Hoy of Quaker Hill meets Freddy Thomas of New London in two other bouts.

Tommy Spivery of Norwich is slated to box in one bout against some boy not yet selected, Young DeForest of Danielson is sending down four boys who will fill in on the card and one of these lads will probably go against Spivery, one against Talbot and maybe an extra bout will be arranged if the bouts do not go the full limit which it is doubtful if they will. Action is to be expected and knockouts are expected to be frequent in tonight's card.

YALE NOT TAKING ANY CHANCES WITH DARTMOUTH

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 31—(AP)—One of the longest scrimmages held by the Yale varsity was put on today with the staff of coaches taking the ball and using Dartmouth plays against the regulars on the defensive. The session lasted for 55 minutes in which the coaches scored two touchdowns, one by Lee Mallory, end, '28, and Ducky Pond, halfback '25. The varsity was given the ball and managed to even the score.

The first of these scores was made by McEwen, an end, who scooped up a fumble and raced 50 yards. Dunn, second string fullback, crashed the line for the second varsity touchdown. No attempt was made for the extra points. After the workout with the coaches the varsity continued to scrimmage against the freshmen.

The varsity in their scrimmage against the coaching staff showed up well, managing to detect "hidden" plays before they got well started. Coach Stevens directed the coaches at quarterback and did most of the ball carrying.

With Decker the only member of team A in the backfield during the extra long workout, the substitutes used showed up strong in their positions which they may be called upon to fill against the Green on Saturday. Ellis was found at quarter with Switz and Dunn at half and fullback respectively.

Hubbard and Hall were the only regulars missing from the field but both will be ready for the next clash. Both Garvey and Roben appeared in togs although injuries still prohibited them from any hard work. It is considered probable that Stevens will use McEwen and Walke on the wings of the line against Dartmouth as both have showed strength during the scrimmaging this week.

MARSTERS LIMPS THROUGH SHORT SCRIMMAGE SESSION

HANOVER, N. H., Oct. 31—(AP)—All of the Dartmouth regulars who were injured in the Harvard game, with the exception of Shep Wolff, halfback, reported for football practice today, brightening the Green's outlook on next Saturday's Yale game considerably.

Most of the injured players, however, were able only to lope through a light drill. Al Marsters and Fred Brethut, Dartmouth's star halfbacks, were on hand with their injured ankles tightly bandaged and Head Coach Jesse Hawley permitted them to run through a few plays in dummy scrimmage and toss a few forwards before ordering them off the field.

The rest of the squad practiced under the huge floodlights until long after dark.

Hal Booma and Heinz Swarthout, the varsity ends, were able to take part in the practice but Trainer Harry Hillman said both had but a slim chance of playing against Yale. Hawley played Bromberg and Crehan in the varsity guard positions, in place of Lisle and Sherman, to add weight to his line. After the first team scrimmaged against team B, Hawley played his third team against an eleven which donned blue jerseys and attempted Yale plays.

GOOD CARDS TURNED IN AT LOS ANGELES COURSE

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 31—(AP)—Top liners in the southern California open golf championship tournament turned in some good scores today for the second 18 holes round of qualifying play.

Willie Hunter of the Montebello Country club, playing in defense of the open title, turned in the best card of the favored professionals. He traversed the 18 holes in 73 strokes, one over par, which with his 74 of yesterday gave him an aggregate of 147 for the qualifying tests.

Harold Beer, with a total of 148 was four strokes better than any of the other early finishers. May Mangrem had 152. Fay Coleman, southern California amateur champion, had 153.

Mohegans Beat Scouts

The Mohegans defeated Troop 1 Boy Scouts at Chelsea Parade Tuesday afternoon by the score of 6 to 2. Gains were made by Bamber and Whelden, the touchdown being made by a pass from Bamber to Hamill. Agnew and Disco starred for the Scouts. The Mohegans challenge any team in this city averaging 130 to 140 pounds per man to a to a game at Chelsea or Mohegan park grounds, Elizabeth St. Grammar school or Greeneville Grammar school preferred. If challenge is accepted answer through this paper.

Walthour Leads at Detroit

DETROIT, Oct. 31— (AP) —Jimmy Walthour and his team mate, Frans Deulberg, went into the lead tonight in the six-day bicycle race at the Olympia arena here.

The combination crowded the French team of Cugot and Blanchonet out of first place in a series of ten sprints, in seven of which Walthour and Deulberg gained points, while the Frenchmen scored only once.

OPENING NIGHT AT OPERA IN CHICAGO

CHICAGO, Oct. 31—(AP)—The time stained auditorium, associated for third of a century with Chicago's musical accomplishments, tonight resounded for the last time to the thunderous applause of an opening night at the opera.

In the grim, antiquated theatre that next year will be displaced by a huge skyscraper on Wacker drive as the new home of the opera, the Chicago Civic Opera company opened its seventh season and the eighteenth season of a resident company here by presenting "Carmen."

Among those with parties in the boxes for the opening were Mrs. Edith Rockefeller McCormick, Mrs. Robert Sullivan, John T. Ryerson, Mrs. Hugh McBirney, Ira Nelson Morris, the Frederick T. Haskells and the Robert J. Thornes.

Maria Olszewska, sensational prima donna, contralto of the Vienna state and convent garden operas, made her American debut in the title role which gave her the best possible opportunity to display her remarkable vocal and dramatic talents. In addition Alice Mock, a young Oakland, Calif., artist sang the Micaela in her first American appearance. Rene Maison gave his first Chicago performance in the role of Jose and Cesare Formichi appeared here for the first time as Escamillo.

Applause, loud and tumultuous greeted those making first appearances and the other members of the cast as well.

Native Belgian to Speak Here

Suzanne Silvercruys, now Mrs. Henry Farnam, Jr., of New Haven and a naturalized American citizen, who will speak in the town hall of Norwich, on Saturday evening, November 3, is a native of Belgium. In her girlhood she lived through the horrors of the late European war. A sculptress of note, her bust of Herbert Hoover has been placed in the library of Louvain. Mrs. Farnam was associated with Hoover in feeding the women and children of Belgium. She was a close friend and ardent admirer of Cardinal Mercier and shared with him his profound enthusiasm and appreciation of Herbert Hoover whom he characterized as a great humanitarian. Mrs. Farnam wears the jeweled emblems of Chevalier de l'Order de Leopold, the Queen Elizabeth medal and the medaille commemorative and the medaille de la victoire. When Mrs. Farnam spoke recently before a large gathering in Hartford she evoked tremendous enthusiasm. She has a delightful enthusiasm. She has a delightful voice with a slight French accent and charms her listeners by the force of her magnetic personality and her sincere conviction as well as by the simplicity with which she tells her dramatic story.

The meeting on Saturday evening is open to all and it is an opportunity none should miss.

COLLEGE PIANO TEACHER JOINS COMPOSERS' RANKS

There is on display at the Connecticut college library a collection of books and papers published in New London between the dates of 1716 and 1839.

This interesting exhibit calls attention to the fact that old New London has long been a center of creative activity. Many poems have been written here, many pictures painted and many songs sung.

Music has always been written at Connecticut College. The inspiration of the site very naturally compels the sensitive soul to break silence, whether its language be music alone or poetry or both. The most notable musical composition which have recently appeared, emanating from Connecticut college, are two by William Bauer, associate professor of music.

A New York firm has just published "Innamorata" (Barcarolle) which is described as "a delightful song without words, in 6-8 time, allegretto. This melodious composition, with its richly harmonized accompaniment, could be rendered effectively by a string-quartet, the second violin and viola playing the treble of the piano part, and the 'cello playing the bass." Not much before this the American agents of a London firm brought out a "Te Deum Laudemus" by the same author. It is written for chorus, solo and organ, in the key of E flat. Mr Bauer has been teaching piano at Connecticut college since its opening in 1915.

POETRY

Jack Frost

The door was shut, as doors should be,
Before you went to bed last night;
Yet Jack Frost has got in, you see,
And left your window silver white.

He must have waited till you slept;
And not a single word he spoke,
But crept
Stealthily o'er the panes and crept
Away again before you woke.

And now you can not see the hills
Nor fields that stretch beyond the lane;
But there are fairer things than these
His fingers traced on every pane.

Rocks and castle towering high;
Hills and dales, and streams and fields;
And knights in armor riding by,
With nodding plumes and shining shields.

And here are little boats, and there
Big ships with sails spread to the breeze;
And yonder, palm trees waving fair
On islands set in silver seas.

And butterflies with gauzy wings;
And herds of cows and flocks of sheep;
And fruit and flowers and all the things
You see when you are sound asleep.

For creeping softly underneath
The door when all the lights are out,
Jack Frost takes every breath you breathe,
And knows the things you think about.

He paints them on the window pane
In fairy lines with frozen steam;
And when you wake you see again
The lovely things you saw in dream.

—Gabriel Setoun.

A Toast in Autumn

This last pale water-lily leaf I shape
Into a cup and fill it at the springs
And drink a toast, O season of the wings
Departing, and of frail designs that drape
This beauty soon to tremble in the rape
Of roistering winds! To each flushed leaf that flings
Itself against the haze, to downy things
Air-tossed, I drink the gestures of escape.

Then, having drunk to these, I fill once more
The fragile cup with this imperishable
Bright water, and I drink to things that stay;
These cobweb ladders slanting to a store
Of ruddy fruit, these secret seeds that fell
Upon the great breast, to be tucked away.

—Glenn Ward Dresbach, in Poetry.

Not long ago Deacon Miller bought a horse and buggy and took his wife out one Sunday for a drive. They came to our neighboring town of Oseo and saw a sign which read "Speed limit, fifteen miles per hour."

"Here, ma," said the deacon excitedly, "you take the lines and drive, and I'll use the whip. Maybe we can make it."—Life.

Five years ago Rex de Spain of Dallas, who lived in Dallas at that time, visited T. A. Pinkerton at Haskell, Tex. While in swimming Rex lost a signet ring with his initials on it. He entertained no hopes of ever finding it. De Spain, who now lives in Abilene, was a guest of Pinkerton a few days ago. Again, while in swimming, Mr. De Spain was enjoying a mud fight with several boys when he picked up a handful of mud in two feet of water near the bank and felt some hadd substance. On examination he found it to be the lost ring.

The mandarin cloak, an indispensable part of the dress of Peking gentlemen for centuries, is regarded unfavorably by the nationalists as a symbol of monarchical days, and it appears that styles in dress for men will be radically changed as a result. A few cases have been reported in which men who wore such cloaks in public were abused, and extremists even slashedtheir cloaks with knives. However, the Shansi garrison commander has warned against such action. He has told enthusiasts they can show their disapproval by more refined means.

WAUREGAN COFFEE SHOP POPULAR WITH NORWICH PEOPLE

The Wauregan Coffee Shop has met instant favor with the people of Norwich as well as with hundreds of people who travel through the city daily.

The Wauregan Coffee Shop, located just to the right of the Main street entrance to the hotel and with inside outlets into the hotel proper, is decorated in antique finish and presents a most pleasing atmosphere throughout.

Directly in the center of the coffee shop is the large horseshoe counter, finished in black and orange. Placed conveniently about this counter are low comfortable stools which assures every patron of the shop all the comforts of chairs.

The former lunch bar, located in the hotel proper, connects with the new coffeee shop. This is now nicely fitted out with tables and booths. An entrance from the lobby of the hotel affords patrons entrance to this room, which has been especially designed for more private patrons.

To everyone entering the Wauregan Coffee Shop one thing is instantly fixed in the mind. That is that the shop has been designed and furnished for quick and efficient service. Quick and efficient service plus delightful and properly cooked foods at popular prices is the policy of the shop. Norwich people have learned this already and the management of the hotel invites others to visit the shop and become acquainted.

Burgess Bedtime Story

Happy Jack Decides to Move

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

Who seeketh with an open mind
A just reward will surely find.
—Happy Jack Squirrel.

Happy Jack the Gray Squirrel was feeling very unhappy. He was unhappy because he was worried. Here was winter coming on, and, although he had done his best, he had very little food laid up. You see, there was a shortage of nuts and acorns. So he and Rusty the Fox Squirrel were looking forward to a hard winter.

"I don't know what to do about it," said Happy Jack. "I don't see how we are going to live here possibly. There certainly will not be any more food in the winter than there is now. As a matter of fact, there will be less. We'll starve before the winter's over. It seems to me that there is only one thing to do."

"What is that?" inquired his cousin, Rusty the Fox Squirrel.

"Move, and keep moving until we find a place where there is food enough," replied Happy Jack.

Rusty rubbed his nose thoughtfully. "That isn't a bad idea," said he. "I've thought of it myself. The trouble is, I don't know where to move to."

Happy Jack fluffed out his big gray tail. "I know where I'm going to move to," said he.

"Where?" demanded Rusty.

"I'm going to move over into Farmer Brown's dooryard," replied Happy Jack. "There is always food around Farmer Brown's house. Farmer Brown's Boy won't let me starve. I don't like to leave the Green Forest, but I've just got to do it."

"Where are you going to make your home over there?" demanded Rusty.

"I'll find a place somewhere," said Happy Jack. "Yes, sir, I'll find a place somewhere. Perhaps I can get into the barn. I've got a good set of teeth and I guess I can get in somewhere."

Rusty shook his head. "I'm going farther than that," said he. "I'm going to make a long journey. I'm going to keep going until I find a place where there's plenty to eat. I'm going to move along south. I guess I can pick up enough to eat day by day as I go along, and some day I'll find a place where I can find enough to store up for the rest of the winter. Good-by Happy Jack."

"Do you mean you are going to start right now?" demanded Happy Jack.

"I know where I'm going to move to," said he

"That's what I mean. Good-by!" cried Rusty, and was gone.

"Well," said Happy Jack to himself, "Rusty certainly knows his own mind. It didn't take him long to make up his mind what to do. I'll follow his example. I'll go right straight over to Farmer Brown's."

So Happy Jack started for the edge of the Green Forest where it joins the Old Orchard. It occurred to him that he might find a good home in the Old Orchard. He had lived there once before. When he reached the Old Orchard he went straight to his former home, or to where his former home was. It was no longer there. The hole had been filled up, for Farmer Brown and Farmer Brown's Boy had been cleaning up the old trees in the Old Orchard, cutting away the dead wood and filling up the holes.

"Ufuh!" exclaimed Happy Jack. "I guess I'll have to hunt around a bit." And this he began to do at once. He was more worried than he would admit. It hadn't occurred to him that he wouldn't find that old hollow tree that he had used before. From tree to tree Happy Jack went. Nowhere was there a place for the home of a Squirrel. That is, nowhere was there a hole in a tree big enough for a Squirrel.

Under low tariffs, low wage rates allow European manufacturers to send goods into this country at lower prices than Connecticut manufacturers can compete with.

High protective tariffs equalize the difference in wages, and Connecticut industries have no decrease in production.

Competition with foreign products means curtailed business and decreased wages.

For 70 years the Democratic party has been for low tariffs. The Democratic candidate for president is for a "competitive" tariff. The Democratic party is committed to it in its platform. The non-industrial South controls the Democratic party in Congress.

The Republican party has been for high protective tariffs for 70 years.

Don't go backward. Don't swap for "something just as good."

Connecticut's future business existence, and the welfare of her workmen, are dependent upon Republican tariff protection.

DECLINES OF 2 TO 12 POINTS IN WIDE RANGE OF ISSUES IN STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK, Oct. 31—(AP)—Extensive distribution by pools turned the prices downward on the stock market today, declines ranging from 2 to 12 points in a wide range of issues. "Bulls" took the situation in hand toward the close, and a number of losses were diminished and a few specialties lifted to new high levels. The selling again indicated that large operators are lightening their holdings in preparation for any eventuality contingent to the national election. While the opinion prevails in Wall street that whatever the outcome business will continue to make steady progress, seasoned operators know from past experience that the market becomes ultra-sensitive to psychological factors at election time.

The decline was at all times orderly, and at no time could be characterized as a sharp break. The performance of General Motors, which sagged more than 3 points at one time in heavy liquidation, was somewhat surprising in the face of the statement by President Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., that the directors would announce a "pleasant surprise" at next week's meeting. A stock dividend, however, has been commonly talked of and largely discounted.

The credit situation developed many favorable aspects, the call money rate holding at 7 1-2 per cent. all day, despite month end and dividend and interest disbursements, most of which comes tomorrow, now estimated as high as $400,000,000 in contrast to only about $150,000,000 last year at this time. Bankers interpreted this as indicating that the federal reserve brokers loans figures tomorrow will show a substantial reduction. Another indication of this is that banks have been paying pf their indebtedness at the federal reserve.

One of the most important developments enhancing the industrial outlook was the announcement that the Pennsylvania railroad will electrify its entire service between New York and Wilmington, Del., this is most extensive railway electrification project ever undertaken, and will involve the expenditure of about $100,000,000 during the next few years.

The steel trade reviews were again highly favorable, reporting impending purchases for railroad requirements, offsetting the seasonal decline in automotive activity. The Iron Age composite price for finished steel stood at the highest figure since June, 1927, and the pig iron composite crossed $18 a ton for the first time in a year.

Steel shares were again generally heavy, however, U. S. Steel responded slightly to the excellent third quarter earnings report announced after the close of the market yesterday, then encountered selling pressure. Ludlum was an exception, making an extreme gain of 5 1-4 points on announcement of a pooling of patents with the Krupp interests of Germany.

A strong feature of the session was American Type Founders, which soared more than 10 points to a new high at 137 1-2 on announcement that the earnings for the year ending Aug. 31 were at the rate of $14.13 per share in contrast to $9.88 per share the previous year, American Radiator rallied 9 points to a new peak at 170 1-8 and International Nickel forged ahead 8 points to a new high price at 191 Commercial Investment Trust was again in demand, registering a new record price in a gain of more than 5 points, and Holland Furnace and Life Savers also touched a new top.

The coppers rallied, Anaconda touching a new high at 89 7-8, while Greene Cananea and Kennecott made gains of about 2 points. Cerro de Pasco made a 3-point gain then lost it.

Adams Express was a spectacular performer, soaring 28 points, and closing 18 points up while American Express surged ahead 10 points.

Warner Brothers shares were again strong on reports of good current earnings, pushing up 6 and 7 points, while Keister Radio touched a new top at 68 1-4, up 3 points Radio Corp. also went ahead then fell back for a net loss of 4 1-2 points.

In the motors, Briggs rallied 2 points but Chrysler lost 5 points, later gaining 2 1-2, and Motor Products lost 6 points. Jordan sold at low as 11 5-8, in contrast to its recent high at 19 1-2.

DuPont dropped 12 points at one time, but reduced its loss to 7 points. A. M. Byers, Delaware and Hudson, General Electric, Industrial Rayon, Jewel Tea, Macy & Bro., F. G. Shattuck, Otis Elevator, and White Rock were among shares declining from 2 to 6 points. Victor Talking Machine dropped 10 points, and closed 5 1-2 points down. Barnsdall A made an extreme loss of about 3 points, which was reduced to 1 1-8.

The commodity markets were steady. Wheat was firmer on commission house buying and covering and cotton improved on reports of cold rains in the south.

Foreign exchanges were generally steady, sterling cables hovering near the gold import mark, with the result that an additional shipment of about $2,500,000 from London was announced. Yen again declined, touching 46.60 cents, down 30 points.

COMPRESSED AIR WHISTLE TO BE TRIED OUT THIS WEEK

WESTERLY, R. I., Oct. 1—The 8-inch chime whistle recently installed on the new Westerly Central Fire station on Union street, to be operated by compressed air, will be tried out from the station some day at the end of this week. The tanks have been filled with air and tested for leaks which might develop in the piping.

Friday night a joint installation will be held by Harold W. Merrill post, No. 16, American Legion, and its auxiliary. State officers of the two organizations will be present. The installation will take place at 8 o'clock in the Legion quarters in the Treggis block. The committee in charge has arranged for refreshments and an entertainment. Wednesday evening the auxiliary gave a Halloween social for both the Legion and auxiliary.

The following transfers have been recorded in the office of Westerly town clerk:

Oct. 30. Abbie J. Eldred, Riverside, East Providence, to Charles M. Lamb and wife, Edith T. Lamb, as joint tenants and not as tenants in common, land with buildings and improvements on the south side of Atlantic avenue, Misquamicut Beach, adjoining lands of John D. Nichols and bounded easterly by land of Annie G. Morse.

Oct. 30 Ella F. Talbot to LeRoy B. Talbot and wife, Evelyn I. Talbot, land on the east side of High street, adjoining lands of the heirs of John R. Macomber.

The Eastern Shore Bridge tournament is to start Monday, Nov. 5 in the rooms of the Westerly Square and Compass club, Potter-Langworthy block. According to the schedule adopted each Square and Compass club player chooses a partner and the teams are turned over to Capt. George E. Broughton. The captain then selects a set of six teams to represent the club each week, every team signing having an equal opportunity to play. After ten weeks of play a cup will be presented the winner. There is now in progress a S. and C. club bridge tournament between teams captained by Edwin K. Parker and George E. Broughton, play being held Tuesday evenings.

Under direction of Chief of Police Thomas E. Brown and with the cooperation of A. L. Leon, engineer for the Westerly highway commissioners, workmen and officers were engaged Wednesday in marking white traffic lines on Main street, near the intersection of Union street. A large center line has been painted along Main street where motor traffic conflicts with that passing over Union street, recently widened and to grade lowered, with a resulting increase in speed by passing motor traffic.

DEER HOLDS UP PARTY BOUND FOR LEDYARD SUPPER

Five Aunt Sarah Peabody Club members went to Ledyard Tuesday evening by automobile to attend one of the famous chicken pie suppers. Berand Carson was at the wheel. Half way up the roads were rough from the hard rains during the summer and Mr. Carson was only making 15 miles an hour when he saw a large animal in the road like a city cop doing traffic duty. Stretch Morrison said "Look at the Ledyard cow," but they found out it was a 200 pound deer. It kept coming toward the lights and did not run out of the way or seem afraid. The deer would not budge and all the time the suppers were on the table getting cold although Mrs. F. Burton saved them for the Noank lodgemen. It was 30 minutes before that deer jumped over the stone wall. Mrs. Burton had sold the suppers, thinking that the no-tobacco users were not coming. They had to wait until Miss Nellie Green saw how much chicken was left and two legs were short, the waiter having lost them on the way to the church. But it was a good supper and the Halloween pumpkin pie made up for the missing chicken legs. The pumpkins were picked from the garden of F. Allen and it only took two pumpkins to make 28 pies—one weighed 26 pounds, the other one 22 pounds. After getting supper, the crowd went over across the green to Grange hall where the dancing took place, with the Quaimbaug orchestra of Mystic stepping on the gas. It was cold in the hall and the drummer had his over coat and gloves on while beating the drum, but the dancers found it all right. During intermission Jesse Bernett made a speech telling about the coming election. "After reading the papers and getting the views on both sides, I find, ladies and gentlemen that this will be the closest race in the history of the voters, between Al. Smith and Herbert Hoover. Think before you cast your vote in Ledyard next week; put on your glasses and put an X for the best man." After Mason Fine was given a real oration. Burke Gowell came out in his Halloween clown suit and made the crowd laugh with his jokes. He also sang 'She Was a Real Sweetheart to Me," while Happy Nuse tickled the ivories. It was a late hour when the party got back to the fishing villages after a jolly evening spent in Ledyard.

Miss Emma Gauthier of Mohtville is visiting in the village for a few days.

Miss Nora Dooley has returned to Westerly after visiting Noank friends.

MASKED VISITOR COMES TO SURPRISE DANCERS

Over 225 came to Corona hall Tuesday evening and attended the big masquerade dance, the largest crowd since the hall was opened. The hall was decorated with Halloween crepe paper in orange and black. Russ Singing orchestra of New London played for the dance and 80 couples were dressed in rigs from a tramp to a bride. While the dance fans were enjoying their jazz a clown came into the hall and had the people guessing. He went around the hall several times and his large feet, pulling stunt caused many a good laugh. Before the grand march he went out and no one knows yet who he was. At 10 o'clock a march was played by the orchestra and the line was led by Roy Abate and Miss Irene Moore. The three judges were ready to pick the best looking costume, also the funniest. As the orchestra played dance music around the hall the 'dudes' matched three times. Miss May Pollard of Mystic had a wedding dress and veil and was carrying bridal flowers. She was a lean year bride. The judges gave her a $2.50 gold piece for the best costume. Miss Mabel Ellis was dressed as a dude, sporty, like a fellow who might lose on a Spark Plug horse at a race. She won a $2.50 gold piece for having the funniest costume. Floor Manager Roy Abate announced to the dance fans that they have not seen anything yet. "Come to our next dance and see a surprise that the committee has up its sleeve!"

Mrs. Angus MacLeod was a recent caller in New Haven.

Palace Theater.

"The Mating Call," which comes to the Palace theater today is another sensational Thomas Meighan vehicle and, like "The Racket," his previous offering, is one of the best pictures of this masterful star's brilliant career.

Action, suspense and heart-throbs are reeled off in rapid and convincing continuity in the newest Meighan picture.

Adapted from the widely-read novel by Rex Beach, "The Mating Call" is a scintillating and fast-moving romantic thriller, a brilliant film version of a superior story.

Clever direction by James Cruze and the excellent acting of the star and his fine supporting cast combine to make "The Mating Call" one of Meighan's best and one of the best screenings of the year.

A sensational angle of the picture, a bold bit of filmization, is the realistic portrayal of the activities of a band of masked members of a secret society. This is the first time that a producer has had the daring to reproduce with such amazing fidelity the intimidating methods of hooded terrorists.

Evelyn Brent and Renee Adoree share honors in the feminine department providing Meighan with double support in the leading lady division.

R. S. Fessenden, Shrewsbury, Mass, says: "I will tell or write my full experience with Lithiated Buchu (Keller Formula). "Sparky" caused much merriment and was represented by Miss Doris Lund and Elinor Howard. After judging was over a number of Halloween games were played and enjoyed. # LAWYERS SEE REASONS WHY HOOVER SHOULD BE ELECTED PRESIDENT

The National Hoover-Curtis Lawyers' association has been organized under the auspices of the republican national committee with George E. Beers of New Haven the vice president for this state and Edwin W. Higgins of this city, the county chairman for New London county.

The national organization is headed by Elihu Root as honorary president, with Nathan William McChesney as its president. The purpose and object of the organization is to present to the country from the standpoint of a lawyer the reasons why Herbert Hoover should be elected president and the principles of the republican party sustained.

Mr. Higgins has furnished the association his views on the coming national election and the candidates of the two major parties in the following statement:

"The real issue in this campaign is the tariff, although it has been obscured somewhat by the inclusion of matters that should have no part in determining a national election.

"Compare the record of the republican party on the tariff with that of the democratic party and it will be found that the enactment of a democratic tariff has always been followed and accompanied by a suspension of industry, low wages and general business depression. The World war just saved the country from the depressing effects of the Underwood tariff law.

"The advent into business of the government, whether it be in oil, water power or the exploitation and sale of other natural resources and of farm products will kill individual initiative and not in the last analysis work to the advantage of the great mass of our people. Gov. Smith has not been compelled to think for himself in his 25 years of public service. The Tammany organization has done it for him. He lacks in breadth of experience. He does not think in terms of the national welfare. Standing on a platform dismembered by his own declarations within 24 hours after it was adopted, he presents now a sorry figure trying to reconcile dry North Carolina with wet New York city and the public records of some of his supporters with the general welfare of the average citizen. Hoover is synonymous with high character, a patient forbearance and self-control, a wide experience in national, international and even homely every day domestic problems. He offers a constructive program of progress without equivocation. He has the capacity, knowledge, experience and disposition to fulfill the pledges of his party. The electorate will not be blinded or confused by a negative attitude of carping criticism. Mr. Hoover will be triumphantly elected, as he deserves to be."

SALVATION LETTER CAMPAIGN MEETING WITH APPROVAL

Arthur M. Brown, chairman of the Salvation Army campaign which is being conducted under the method of a letter campaign, reported Wednesday that the appeal is meeting with a favorable response. It is quite evident that those who have spent considerable time in previous years in personal solicitation are very much in favor with this new method, Mr. Brown reported. Already many of the previous campaign workers have sent their personal contribution to John R. Tarrant of the Bankers Trust Co. who is treasurer of the fund, which shows their sympathy in the letter campaign system. ### DR. MAURICE ADELMAN SAVES INFANT'S LIFE

Concerning an unusual surgical operation the Providence Journal of Tuesday had the following in reference to Dr. Maurice Adelman, well known in Norwich, who frequently visits Rutherford C. Plaut:

Unable to breathe through its larynx from the day of its birth two weeks ago, a baby at a Providence hospital is not only still living but has shown gains more encouraging than those registered by the normal infant among the 200 born each month at the institution.

Performing a delicite tracheotomy, one of the staff surgeons cut an opening in the windpipe and inserted a tube in the larynx to make breathing possible. The first days were critical, but the infant soon began to prosper under the special care and feeding necessary every three hours. Although most babies lose weight in their first week which they regain in the second to equal the weight at birth, this handicapped baby picked up in the first week.

DON'T FUSS WITH MUSTARD PLASTERS

Don't mix a mess of mustard, flour and water when you can relieve pain, soreness or stiffness with a little clean, white Musterole.

Musterole is made of oil of mustard and other helpful ingredients, and takes the place of mustard plasters.

Musterole usually gives prompt relief from sore throat, bronchitis, tonsilitis, croup, stiff neck, asthma, neuralgia, headache, congestion, pleurisy rheumatism, lumbago, pains and aches of the back or joints, sprains, sore muscles, bruises, chilblains, frosted feet, colds of the chest (it may prevent pneumonia).

USED SPINAL ANESTHETIC IN BACKUS HOSPITAL OPERATION

Michael O'Connor, inmate of the almshouse, had a leg amputated at the W. W. Backus hospital Monday. The amputation at the knee, and Mr. O'Connor, who is 70 years of age, is reported to be resting comfortably.

A spinal anesthetic was used during the operation it being the first time this form of anesthetic was used at the hospital. It is expected that the spinal anesthetic will largely replace the general anesthetic in use at the present time. Through the use of the spinal anesthetic the patient remains conscious, as the anesthetic numbs only that part of the body in which the operation is performed.

CHARLES E. HUGHES TELLS WHY HE PREFERS HOOVER

In Quoting Gov. Smith's Definition of a "Stand-Patter" as "a Man Who Did Not Want to Take a Chance on Anything," Mr. Hughes Described Hoover as a Builder, an Engineer of Progress, But Not Willing to Gamble With the Nation's Future—Without Disparaging the Ability and Achievements of Gov. Smith, Mr. Hughes Asserted as Between Smith and Hoover, He Prefers Hoover.

NEW YORK, Nov. 1—(AP)—Charles Evans Hughes, speaking tonight in Brooklyn, hailed Herbert Hoover as "the apostle of co-operation" and "an engineer of progress," and asserted that "republican success on election day is the best insurance policy we can write."

Quoting liberally from Mr. Hoover's writings and public statements, and from the campaign speeches of Governor Smith, the former secretary of state said this election "is a choice between two men. I have not disparaged the ability or achievements of Governor Smith. But as between Smith and Hoover, I prefer Hoover."

Condemning campaigners' attacks on Hoover's Americanism, he declared, "any intelligent person who attempts to decry his Americanism deserves the scorn and contempt of all fairminded persons. As a candidate for the chief magistracy of the nation x x x he stands out conspicuously superior. His rejection would be a national calamity.

"The keynote of Mr. Hoover's program is individual opportunity as opposed to unnecessary governmental control. His purpose, in his own words, is 'to build in this nation a human society, not an economic system. We wish to increase the efficiency and productivity of our nation, but its final purpose is happier homes.'

"It is in the light of the necessity of conserving the freedom of honest enterprise that Mr. Hoover deals with the fundamental needs of labor. x x x The real protection of labor is continuous employment. x x x That he regards to be a problem of national concern, and he has shown that it is one which government may aid in solving.

Quoting Governor Smith's definition of a "stand-patter" as "a man who did not want to take a chance on anything," Mr. Hughes said, "Mr. Hoover is not a stand-patter. He is a builder, an engineer of progress. x x x But he is not willing to gamble with the nation's future.

"I believe it is the American taxpayer x x x the business man, who sees no reason for taking a chance x x x with the uncertainties of democratic policies, who knows that confidence is an essential psychological factor in prosperity."

Mr. Hughes endorsed the republican nominee's tariff policies and questioned Governor Smith's ability to force his own tariff views upon a hostile congress. "In tariff matters," he said, "it is not simply actual measures that count but agitation and uncertainties which disturb confidence and vex business."

Similarly, Mr. Hughes dealt with Hoover's farm relief and water power policies, quoting from the speeches of both candidates to illustrate his contention that Hoover's views on both issues are "sound and workable." Of prohibition, he said, "it is my deliberate opinion that there is no chance of modification of the eighteenth amendment. x x x I am confident that the country never would accept enforcement by a wet as a test of prohibition."

Replies to Attack

Mr. Hughes, replying to what he described as an attack upon him by a leading democratic newspaper, for supporting Hoover, dwelt at some length upon an intimation in the newspaper that he might have been more active in preventing the transfer of the nation's oil leases under the Harding administration.

Such an implication, he said, "is absolutely false. None of those leases was decided upon in any cabinet meeting. x x x I knew nothing whatever about them. The same may be said of President Coolidge and Mr. Hoover. That sort of calumny affronts the common sense of the American people."

Rebuking attacks upon Hoover's citizenship, Mr. Hughes traced the engineer's career from his Iowa childhood through his work as a young engineer to the stage where Hoover's broadening activities took him abroad "to practice his profession in many countries."

"In all this work abroad" he said, "Hoover personified the intelligence, resourcefulness and humanity of America. Such ability (as Hoover exhibited during the post-war reconstruction of Europe) is not to be held lightly at a time like this. The American people are going to need it, and need it badly." x x x

"Mr. Hoover is seeking not to aggrandize the government, but the individual; x x x to make this government the individual's servant, not his master. x x x It is on this view that he is absolutely opposed to the unwarrantable extension of bureaucratic government. x x x "In his activities he has thrown a welcome light upon departmental aims and practices he believes in the interest of regulation in the public interest. x x x But he desires x x x methods to establish without governmental dictation a more efficient production."

Hoover's view of international peace, Mr. Hughes said is not "simply in the laying down of the arms of nations. x x x International peace must be followed by industrial peace as the essential condition of progress in democracy. His measure of our national prosperity is 'the measure that we may risk through a change in present policies.'"

The nominee's farm relief policy, Mr. Hughes said, proposes assistance by the government, but control of the relief agencies by the farmers themselves. "There is no controversy," he said, between Governor Smith and Hoover on "retention of government ownership of water power sites owned by the state or the federal government. "The test comes" he said, "in operation. x x x If there is any question of importance presented on this subject, it is whether the principle (of government ownership and private operation) shall be abandoned and the path and the state shall go into the business of generating, distributing and selling electric power."

Mr. Hughes endorsed also the candidacy of former Ambassador Houghton, republican candidate for the United States senate, and Attorney General Ottinger, gubernatorial nominee.

"In voting for Herbert Hoover," he said, "we shall do our utmost to promote the prosperity which is the foundation of progress. Republican success on election day is the best insurance policy we can write."

BLIZZARD IS RAGING IN ROCKY MOUNTAIN REGION

KANSAS CITY, Nov. 1—(AP)—Winter loosed a determined assault in the west today, sending a blizzard that gripped the Rocky Mountain region to spread snow and cold in the upper Mississippi valley and southwestern states.

The storm dealt its worst in Wyoming and other mountain states, causing tieup of the trans-continental air mail service, blocking highways and delaying trains.

Heavy snowfall extended eastward into Kansas, Nebraska, Iowa, South Dakota and Minnesota, while to the south rains were general with the prospect that falling temperatures would bring snow to many sections tonight and tomorrow.

The blizzard raging in Wyoming, where wire communication suffered, made it impossible for trans-continental air mail fliers to buck the storm, and officials of the Cheyenne-Denver-Pueblo air route held their planes on the ground upon being advised west-bound ships were down at North Platte, Neb.

Near zero temperatures were reported in the mountains and railroad officials feared that mountain passes would become blocked by snow.

Denver police were asked to search for William Hendricks, 70, missing since yesterday in the storm.

Some highways in western Nebraska were reported impassible, the snow there reaching a depth of six inches. Snow also fell in western Kansas when a high wind brought lower temperatures.

The snowfall in South Dakota ranged from four to six inches and a light blanket was deposited in northwest Iowa and southern Minnesota.

HOOVER HAS PLANNED WHIRLWIND FINAL DRIVE

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1—(AP)—With the long weeks of steady plodding, thinking, speaking and organizing behind him, Herbert Hoover tonight faced toward the Pacific coast and a whirlwind final drive in a plan which will see him deliver four wet speeches and carry him across ten states to his home in Palo Alto, Calif.

The nominee embarked on the last phase of his endeavors bearing the good wishes of President Coolidge and his former associates in the cabinet. During the day he called at the white house for a parting conference with the chief executive and he left with a wish of the president that he might have a pleasant journey to California and a safe return.

Previously he had visited the headquarters of the republican national committee to say good-bye to the workers there.

From the white house, Hoover returned to his personal headquarters on Massachusetts avenue to be inducted in the Pennsylvania society. Sons of the American Revolution and to receive various well wishers, including Secretaries Kellogg and Davis of labor and Justice Edward T. Sanford, of the supreme court.

Between callers the nominee put the final touches to a St. Louis speech and he spent the early afternoon in last minute preparation for the trip.

Mr. Hoover departed at 5 o'clock this afternoon for his home at Palo Alto, Calif.

METHODS OF CAMPAIGN DISGRACE TO AMERICA

WATERBURY, Nov. 1—(AP)—Methods used in the present political campaign "are a disgrace and insult to the American public," Edward L. White, of New Haven, national vice commander of the American Legion, said in the course of an address tonight at the annual installation of department officers of Connecticut.

Mr. White had been called upon to speak as a member of the national organization and he said in part:

"When we went to serve our country in the war no one questioned our religious beliefs. There is a determined effort on the part of members of both parties to becloud the real issues and personalities of the candidates by substituting slander and religious intolerance. The methods used are a disgrace and insult to the American public."

TAFT'S SON-IN-LAW TO VOTE FOR SMITH

SWARTHMORE, Pa., Nov. 1.—(AP)—Dr. Frederick J. Manning, professor of history at Swarthmore college and son-in-law of former President Taft, tonight announced that he would vote for Governor Smith at the coming presidential election.

Dr. Manning who is the husband of the former Helen Taft, made the announcement at the close of a political debate of faculty members at the college.

"I am going to vote for Governor Smith," Dr. Manning said, "because of his capacity for working with men and women even when they opposed and hated him; for what he opposed and is opposing—intolerance, snobbishness, prohibition and so forth and for his understanding and personification of the America of tomorrow.

"Herbert Hoover has shown lack of clear thinking in his treatment of campaign issues in his speeches."

BINGHAM SEES DIFFERENCE BETWEEN HOOVER AND SMITH

THOMPSONVILLE, Conn., Nov. 1—(AP)—Far sighted leadership in aviation was credited to Herbert Hoover by U. S. Senator Hiram Bingham in an address before a republican gathering here tonight as he made a comparison of the interest the contending presidential nominees had in this subject. Gov. Smith, the senator said, "had been accustomed in conversation with friends to laugh off aviation as something not really important commercially."

Senator Bingham has taken for his political subject the personalities of Gov. Smith and that of Mr. Hoover. He said that nothing in the campaign, perhaps, had interested voters more than a study of the character and ability of the two men. Gov. Smith, he said, had charged the republicans with lack of leadership and "had offered himself with great assurance as the better leader."

"Nothing could show more clearly the difference between the two men. Gov. Smith had been accustomed in conversation with friends to laugh off aviation as something not really important commercially. Mr. Hoover had foreseen its importance years before. This far sighted leadership in aviation is only additional testimony to the great constructive genius the engineers of the world long ago ascribed to Herbert Hoover."

DISTRICT ATTORNEY TO BE TRIED FOR BRIBERY

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 1—(AP)—District Attorney Asa Keyes, Los Angeles county prosecutor, caught in an unexpected backwash from the $100,000,000 Julian Petroleum Corporation stock scandal early this year, today awaited trial for bribery in the courts where he has been a familiar figure for 25 years.

Charged with accepting approximately $140,000 in bribes in connection with acquittal of accused officials of the now defunct oil concern, Keyes faced presiding Judge Douglas E. Edmonds, from the prisoner's dock this morning. Close behind him came seven others also indicted for the alleged passing of bribe money.

A plan to have all defendants, including Keyes, plead not guilty and have early trial dates set, went awry at the last moment and on motion of Rex Goodcell, attorney for one of the indicted men, arraignment went over until November 8.

STOWAWAY DEVELOPING KEEN BUSINESS ACUMEN

FRIEDRICHSHAFEN, Ger., Nov 1—(AP)—Young Clarence Terhune, adventurous American youth who came to Germany aboard the Graf Zeppelin as a stowaway, has started to manifest a keen business sense.

Two large American syndicates are reported to have started bidding for the exploitation of this unique young writer, and apparently he has some idea of what he is worth to them.

Besides the offers to write whatever he may regarding his trip, he has received many other opportunities for lucrative employment. He has said nothing to indicate which of them, if any, he will accept.

Must Have Faster Stronger Zeppelins

Decision Arrived at by Dr. Eckner After Round Trip Transcontinental Flight.

FRIEDRICHSHAFEN, Germany, Nov. 1—(AP)—The Graf Zeppelin rested tonight in its home hangar for the first time in many days while its master, Dr. Hugo Eckener, planned mightier and faster lighter-than-air craft for the day when his dream of trans-Atlantic dirigible passenger air service will have become a reality.

"This ship is finished for me as far as general regular passenger traffic is concerned," Dr. Eckener said tonight.

"We must have faster and stronger airships if we want to carry a regular passenger service."

"We have shown that the ship and motors are proof against any weather but we must now set about building a constructionally stronger airship," he declared.

Dr. Eckener said that had the weather been better on the return trip he might have beaten his own good time of just a few minutes less than three days by as much as 15 hours.

The blonde young stowaway, Clarence Terhune, received almost as much attention as did Dr. Eckener. The youth's act has captivated the German imagination and from the time of the dirigible's sighting there were cries for his appearance. The crowd was manifestly disappointed when it was learned he had been spirited out the back door for a conference with the American consul, John E. Kehl.

When he emerged from that, cheering crowds raised him to their shoulders and thereafter wherever he went he was the center of an admiring throng. Young Terhune was noncommittal as to his intentions.

"I'm not worried about the future, though," he said.

Passengers on the dirigible were unanimously enthusiastic over their voyage.

When the Graf Zeppelin was brought to her hangar at 7:06 this morning (1:06 a. m., eastern time), she had completed a round trip across the Atlantic of more than 10,000 miles, with several record-breaking features.

Her crossing from Lakehurst to Friedrichshafen was made in 71 hours and 12 minutes, approximately four hours less than the former trans-Atlantic record, held by the British R-34 from its trip in 1919 over a considerably lesser distance. Actually the Graf Zeppelin beat even its own mark here for it arrived at Friedrichshafen at 4:50 a. m., 68 hours and 56 minutes after its departure from Lakehurst, but awaited dawn to land.

On its trip westward, buffeted as it was, the winds forced the making of even another record—the hitherto by almost three hours of the former mark of 101 hours for continuous flight, the Graf Zeppelin taking 101 hours for the trip.

Then, too, there are the two not-to-be-forgotten features of the trip, that the Graf Zeppelin is the largest ship ever to cruise the air, and that its trip represents the first commercial trans-Atlantic air service.

SHACKLED MAN BRANDED WITH INSIGNIA OF K. K. K.

NEW YORK, Nov. 1—(AP)—A man identified by the police as Frank Kirkpatrick, Germantown, Pa. a suburb of Philadelphia, was found tonight near an old reservoir in the Bronx, his arms and legs tied and with brandings on his chest, arms and legs. The police report described the brandings as representing the insignia "K. K. K."

Stuffed in Kirkpatrick's mouth apparently as a gag, was a pamphlet ostensibly on the subject of Governor Alfred E. Smith and his connection with the Catholic church.

The injured man was taken to a hospital, where his condition was reported critical.

The place where Kirkpatrick was found was at Jerome avenue and 197th street. He lay inside the fence of the old Jerome Park reservoir.

Kirkpatrick was found by two passersby who saw a crouching form moving inside the reservoir fence, his hands tied behind him and his feet bound, Kirkpatrick, bleeding from wounds was trying to crawl toward the fence.

Police said the letters "K. K. K." had been cut about a quarter of an inch deep in Kirkpatrick's chest, arms and legs, probably with a penknife. At the hospital it was reported Kirkpatrick also was suffering from exposure and concussion of the brain from a blow over the head.

Police said the pamphlet which was stuffed in Kirkpatrick's mouth was entitled "intolerance, by an intolerant." Kirkpatrick was said to be a real estate broker in Germantown, Pa.

CRIMES IN CONNECTION WITH CHICAGO PRIMARY

CHICAGO, Nov. 1—(AP)—The trial of sixteen henchmen of Morris Eller, city collector and republican boss of the twentieth ward and his son, Judge Emanuel Eller, on conspiracy charges ranging from vote frauds to murder in connection with last April's primary was thrown into an uproar and halted temporarily today when a woman witness appeared in tears and declared her brother had been kidnaped.

The woman was Margaret Walsh whom the state had expected to be the fourth witness in two days to identify one of the defendants as the slayer of Octavius Granady, Negro politician who opposed Morris Eller for ward committeeman in the April primaries. The Ellers also have been indicted but obtained separate trials.

Three Negroes who were riding with Granady in an automobile on election day had identified Johnny Armondo as one of those who fired the shots that killed Granady and the state had announced its intention of closing its case with the testimony of one or two more witnesses.

At resumption of the trial in the afternoon the Walsh woman burst into the chambers of Judge John M. O'Connor, trying the case, and declared her brother, Lonnie Walsh, had been kidnaped last night. The special prosecutors started an inquiry to learn if her story were true and if it was an attempt to intimidate state witnesses. Later it was reported to the judge that Miss Walsh had been so badly frightened by threats against her that she had tried to commit suicide in the hotel rooms where she was held under guard by the state, and court was adjourned while Judge O'Connor went to the hotel to make a personal investigation.

Meanwhile the October special grand jury called for the records of a non-partisan voters league that canvassed primary registrations in some wards and collected figures indicating that thousands of fictitious names were on the primary records.

B. F. McKeehan, campaign manager for Thomas in the 1927 primary, testified that all the bonds hypothecated by him in local banks for loans aggregating $38,000 were furnished by Dr. Thomas. He said he always "gave the money received to Thomas or Dan Mulligan," and they handled all the money.

PA. STATE LEGISLATURE HELD ON LOTTERY CHARGE

PHILADELPHIA Nov. 1.—(AP)—William B. Smith, state legislator and republican ward leader, today entered $10,000 bail for trial on charges of having supported a lottery which did business of about $200,000 a year.

District Attorney John Monaghan named him yesterday before Judge Edwin O. Lewis, with 14 police and received warrants specifically charging Smith with conspiracy, conducting an illegal lottery, extortion and bribery on evidence uncovered by the special grand jury which is investigating bootlegging gang murders and police corruption.

The policemen implicated with Smith and charged with taking protection money from lottery backers waived hearings today and were released in $2500 bail each.

Smith and the policemen, who include city hall detectives, "specials," and a sergeant, are accused of taking money for the protection of a lottery called the "number game." This lottery was based on the daily reports of certain figures of the clearing house of this city and the New York stock exchange.

PARTISANS WIDE APART IN CLAIMS OF NEW YORK STATE

In Figuring For the 45 Presidential Votes in the Empire State, Partisans Have Worked Out Their Own Answers and Are Hundreds of Thousands Votes Apart—Democrats Believe That Smith Will Receive a Record Smashing Majority of 600,000 in New York City—Republicans Contend That Smith Will Fall to a Low Water Mark of About 300,000 and That Hoover Will Come Down to the City With Twice That Much.

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—(AP)—The simple question whether New York will give its 45 presidential votes to Herbert Hoover or to its own Governor Alfred E. Smith has developed into a complex piece of mathematics at political headquarters here.

For the reason that in every campaign tremendous democratic majorities in greater New York city are pitted against heavy republican margins in the upper counties the state readily lends itself to pad and pencil figuring. It does so now more than ever with not only the normal party strength to be reckoned but also the ability of the rival contenders to crash support in the other's camp. The exact meaning of soaring registration figures, the pulling power of the allied gubernatorial and senatorial nominees and the effect in votes of the clashing opinions on prohibition and religion.

Partisans have worked out their own answers to all these problems and the fact that there are hundreds of thousands of votes apart does not trouble them. It is left to the voter to reconcile the democratic belief that Smith is to receive a record smashing majority of 600,000 in the city with which to overcome Hoover's up-state lead, and the republican contention that Smith will fall to a low water mark surplus of about 300,000 here and that Hoover will come down to the city with twice that much.

Those who talk in figures leave plenty of leeway, however, for the certain miscalculations that attend any advanced disposition of New York's 4,896,276 votes, nearly one-eighth of the potential vote of the whole country. Of the total, 2,029,514 are in the five counties that make up greater New York city as against 2,855,662 in the remaining counties. More than half the gain of approximately one million over four years ago was recorded in this city, and since both parties energetically spread the populace to register both now claim a major share of the new votes.

Democrats who have fought through five gubernatorial campaigns with Smith and who pair of them cannot accept any suggestion that the state will not make sure him its support. They declare the party organization is stronger than ever and they point to scores of volunteer Smith clubs up state that never existed before. They are tremendously enthusiastic also over their prospect of a victory to be shared by Smith and his friend and advocate, Franklin D. Roosevelt, nominee for governor. Workers at headquarters predict unprecedented majorities for both candidates on the theory that each will swing to the other support from large personal followings.

The hopes of republicans are equally high, and aside from the confidence they draw from the record of repeated republican victories here in national elections they cling to the argument that Smith as a presidential candidate cannot command the support of thousands of republicans who voted for him vs governor. In addition they have nominated for governor the state's attorney general, Albert Ottinger, the only candidate of his party who pulled through in the democratic victory of two years ago and regarded as their best drawing card.

Although Governor Smith rarely has carried more than a few of the up-country counties he has found notable support in some of the larger northern cities and in the light of their increased registrations it is to them that his forces are looking for votes with which to combat Hoover on his own republican ground. They have particularly high hopes in Buffalo Rochester, Syracuse and the capital city, Albany, which is normally democratic. But the real fight will be waged here in the crowded precincts of greater New York, comprising the counties of New York, Kings, Queens, Bronx and Richmond.

It is here that the issue will be won or lost, among the more than two million voters, some of whom are partisans of that much discussed political organization, Tammany Hall. Only in two of the counties, New York and Bronx, is Tammany a power, however. The other three hold more than half the city vote and it is among them that the Hoover forces have been making great efforts. They have become so encouraged that they talk now of carrying Richmond and paring down to a minimum Smith's lead in Kings and Queens counties. The situation in Kings, the largest voting unit in the city with 710,000 votes, is receiving the close attention of the Smith forces, as witnesses the governor's plan to speak in Brooklyn before winding up his campaign here in his home town. The republican nominee for lieutenant governor, Charles C. Lockwood, opposing the democratic Herbert H. Lehman, is a resident of Brooklyn and his large personal following there is being depended upon by the republicans to cut into Smith's support.

Against the fact that Smith has rolled up his winning majorities in the New York counties lies the evidence of the presidential records that all of those counties were carried four years ago by Coolidge. Then as in other years Smith ran well ahead of the national ticket, and in the one year he lost the governorship in the Harding landslide of 1920, he was almost half a million votes ahead of Cox and was defeated by about 75,000.

It is the Smith pulling power that is being depended upon to overcome anti-Catholic sentiment that has come to a head since his nomination for the presidency. While the governor is calculated to hold those who always have supported his prohibition views, there are some observers who predict that the vote will split almost solely on religion—for and against Smith because of his Catholicism, and for for him in protest against religious tolerance. There has been considerable private talk on the religious issue throughout the state some of it getting before the public, and there also has been agitation among Ku Klux Klansmen who have held periodic meetings.

One factor upon which the Smith forces are depending is his endorsement by the State Federation of Labor. It pledged its support some time ago after it had been told by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, that the governor had been a friend of labor and that undoubtedly the working man would know how to reward his friendship at the polls.

NOMINEE SMITH SCENTS VICTORY IN THE AIR

NEW YORK, Nov. 1—(AP)—With election day almost at hand, Gov. Alfred E. Smith is confident that the succession of crowds which have cheered him from the Atlantic seaboard to the Rocky mountains can mean only one thing — victory.

"It is in the air," he said today in discussing with press correspondents the many ovations he has received during the campaign.

"Were you over in Jersey last night?" the democratic nominee asked the correspondent who had brought this question and receiving an affirmative answer, he added:

"There was something doing over there, wasn't there? It's in the air, it is the same all over."

The governor's conference with the press was one of several interruptions in a day spent behind the closed doors of his suite in the Hotel Biltmore preparing the last three speeches to be delivered. One of these will be delivered in Brooklyn tomorrow night as a climax to a day's program which includes a parade up Broadway between New York's towering skyscrapers. The route of the nominee also will carry him over a part of Fifth avenue. The parade will start at the Battery and end up in Central park. Five thousand policemen will be on duty along the line of march.

The second speech will be made in Madison Square Garden Saturday night and the third, which will be his final appeal to the voters, will be delivered Monday night from a radio studio to which only democratic chieftains, personal friends of the nominee and the press will be admitted.

G. N. PEEK DESCRIBED "PURVEYOR OF FALSEHOODS"

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Nov. 1—(AP)—George N. Peek, chairman of the Smith independent organizations committee bore the brunt of an attack by Senator Smith Brookhart of Iowa in an address here tonight. Senator James A. Reed of Missouri, whose address in Chicago this week inspired the attack also was criticised.

Mr. Peek was described as a "purveyor of falsehoods." On him Senator Brookhart laid the blame for Senator Reed's charges that Herbert Hoover during and after the war held down farm product prices.

"The only prices Hoover ever tried to hold down" Senator Brookhart said, "were the prices of the speculators and the gamblers, and every farmer and every laboring man in the country endorses this position, as does every other sensible man unless he gets his information from George N. Peek. That Peek is efficient and highly expert in the line of manufacture and distribution of half truths is evidenced by the fact that the democrats have handed him $400,000 for his wares."

MISS KNAAK HAD PACT TO COMMIT SUICIDE

LAKE BLUFF, Ill., Nov. 1—(AP)—Miss Elfrieda Grace Knaak, whose mysterious burning is under investigation, had a pact with some one, whose name she did not disclose, she said tonight when talking to her brother, Elvin, as she lay in a hospital bed near death.

"We had a pact," she said, "but the other one did not go through with it. I went through with it alone." Later she added that she "didn't think the other girls would put it over on me."

Although authorities investigating the case, particularly the physicians, are beginning to accept the theory that Miss Knaak burned herself, Alvin and other relatives insist she was the victim of an assailant.

HELD FOR QUESTIONING CONCERNING GIRL'S DEATH

STAMFORD, Conn., Nov. 1—(AP)—While preparations were going on for the funeral in Ansonia tomorrow afternoon of Miss Olga Bayes, 20 year old stenographer, police were holding tonight Paul Lambert, former journalist and college graduate, for further questioning into her untimely death resulting from a chance acquaintance with a stranger in an automobile.

LIQUOR WAS CONCEALED BEHIND PACKING CASES

DARIEN, Nov. 1—(AP)—Sergeant Amos Anderson of the Darien police, known the length and breadth of the state and in Westchester county as the "lone wolf of the post road" because of his ability to spot liquor-laden vehicles on that particular highway, made another haul today. This time his prize was a $50,000 cargo of alleged champagne whiskey and brandy concealed behind several empty packing cases which bore the word "radios."

NEW SILK COMPANY STARTS TO EMPLOY NEW HELP

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Nov. 1—A crowd of employment-seekers gathered at the No. 2 mill of the former Quinebaug-Windham plant for the opening of the new silk manufacturing company's employment office at 9 o'clock. Notices had been sent out to 1,072 persons who had previously registered at the chamber of commerce. The applicants were met by Messrs. Stein and Corn, officials of the Willimantic Silk, Inc., and definite engagements to help were made. The first loom of the new plant arrived here this afternoon on a motor truck. Later in the evening two additional truck loads reached here and the subsequent arrival of three truck loads per day will continue during the next few weeks. The looms are being installed on the fourth floor of the No. 2 mill. Each loom is being equipped with an individual electrical motor. While this work is taking place in No. 2 mill, workmen are renovating two floors of No. 1 mill and old cotton machinery is being removed from No. 2 which is also to be put into condition for the reception of new industries. Out of the entire plant, which at one time was one of the largest cotton plants in the state, there now remain but 40 machines to be dismantled. The new industries committee of the chamber of commerce is cooperating with the Rockville-Willimantic Lighting company, owner of the plant, to secure prospective industries for these mills.

ONE THIRD OF PROPERTY OWNERS FAIL TO FILE LISTS

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Nov. 1—The time limit for filing property lists with the Windham board of assessors, M. Eugene Lincoln, Alexis Caisse and George E. Gifford expired at 4:30 o'clock this afternoon at which time at least one-third of the property owners had failed to file lists. Lists filed from now on will be subject to the levying of ten per cent additional. The assessors claim that it is probably the first time in Windham's history that there has been such wide negligence in filing lists. Basing figures on the grand list of 1927 which showed 3,690 names, the assessors arrived at the fact that but a few over 2,200 or about two-thirds had filed. The assessors are to complete the tabulation and classification of lists in the west and east divisions by January 31, 1929, when the lists then go to the board of relief for final consideration before the tax rate is levied.

Much favorable comment is being heard on the newest publicity endeavor issued by the chamber of commerce to advertise Willimantic as a good place in which to work and live. The city's advantages are enumerated in a four-page folder of neat appearance and full of valuable information. Among some of the pertinent items listed as an appeal to industries of other localities considering making a change are: Six freight lines; complete transportation facilities; a substantial labor supply and agencies offering co-operation to anyone interested in the city. The six freight lines listed out of Willimantic are those to Boston, Providence, Norwich and New London, Middletown, New Haven, New York, Hartford and Palmer, Mass., and Canada. Emphasis is made on the combination truck and boat service from here to Norwich and New London and overnight service to New York in naming the transportation facilities. Bus lines and parlor train service is also mentioned and State Highway Commissioner Macdonald is quoted as stating that "Of all motor routes New York to Boston, Willimantic is the shortest route by one hour." The labor supply is given as normally plentiful and of unusually high calibre. Low living costs and power costs are mentioned. Under the Willimantic's Appeal to Your Help caption are listed the fine churches, Y. M. C. A., theatres, state armory, stores and banks, Building and Loan association, daily paper, hospitals, parks and recreational fields; outstanding Elks' Home, Masonic building, many fraternities and modern well-equipped hotels. The folder concludes by listing the following agencies offering co-operation: The chamber of commerce, Earl J. Arnold, secretary; the Rockville-Willimantic Lighting company, John F. Ahern, general manager; The Rotary club, Gerard E. Loiselle, secretary; the Exchange club, Arthur E. Morrill, secretary.

Although Halloween "pranking" in the village of South Windham was not so severe this year that, as last year, state police officers had to be summoned, the practical jokers had their fun, nevertheless. This morning a table was missed and found on the roof of the fire department quarters. Likewise a beach was on the roof of Harrington's store and several fence gates were located. There was no report of real damage however and many residents who took stock today were breathing a lot easier than one year ago. The local youngsters confined themselves mainly to wearing costumes and the time-honored trick of ringing doorbells. In some instances, however, the jokes were carried too far when the air was let out of automobile tires, and the valves damaged in some cases.

Rev. Felix O'Neil of Stafford Springs read and defined poetic compositions written by himself in an interesting talk at the weekly meeting of the Willimantic Exchange club held Wednesday evening. ## "OVER THE COUNTER"

Dear Dot:

You asked me to "get a line" on what the boys are wearing and I must admit that I enjoyed the task. Of course the place I went to find out was Hurley's Boys' Store and you should see the wonderful stock they have! That surely is the place to go to outfit the boys if you wan the job well done.

Now for Sonny they had some dandy little Jersey Suits with Overcoats and Hats to match. The Overcoats include the Germania Chinchillas, that are so popular and durable. They showed me the socks that would go with such an outfit and they were certainly attractive. These outfits come in sizes up to eight years and cost about $10.75. Can you imagine togging Sonny up for the meagre sum and yet having him dressed in the height of fashion? They also have silk and wool boys' underwear and Dr. Denton's Sleeping Garments.

If Dick Jr. is in the market for some new "duds" they have some clever looking suits with two pair of golf pants. These come in all sizes up to fourteen. Or perhaps he will want the more popular model suit with one pair of golf pants and one pair of long pants. The latter are to be had in sizes from 14 to 18. They have stunning looking overcoats too, in the three button double breasted style with convertible collar. For sport wear, of course they have the lumber jacks in leather and wool and reversible corduroy—plaid on one side and corduroy on the other.

In Hurley's Boys' Store you will find a corking assortment of shirts, blouses, flannel shirts, neckwear, cotton and wool golf hose, leather coats (black and mahogany colored and wool lined) not to mention a complete stock of gloves and mittens. The pajamas they have for boys are sure to please cause they are "just like Dad's."

Now Dot, I think this takes in everything you may possibly need for little Sonny or young Dick and if I have missed out on any little thing you will surely find it in Hurley's because they have just "Everything for Boys." Go there on your next trip to Willimantic and see if I haven't recommended the proper place.

Devotedly,
JANE.

It was presented to Charles II of England by the merchants of Amsterdam as a memento of his sojourn in the Netherlands during that period when kings were unpopular in England. The book, which is six feet tall, is in excellent state of preservation.

J. H. Lewis, of Ontario Cal., kept his vow made fifty years ago. At that time Lewis graduated from the University of Minnesota at Minneapolis. He told his classmate if he lived he would return to the university for the fiftieth class reunion. This year he returned to the university for the annual commencement exercises and for the fiftieth reunion of the class of 1877. But it developed into a one-man reunion. Lewis was the only one left. All the rest of his classmates have died.

STATE SENATOR AND REPRESENTATIVES

Connecticut is a republican state. This is clearly established by the returns of the past. Connecticut will have a republican legislature the same as it has been doing for many years, to the credit of the commonwealth.

Connecticut needs republican state officials for the continuance of the masterly handling of its affairs. It has greatly benefitted from their administrations and it cannot fail to appreciate the value of retaining methods which have worked so well.

Connecticut certainly should make certain next Tuesday that the republican candidates are elected, but it should be given the proper kind of a backing, through the election of republican senator and representatives in the next general assembly.

As senator from the district made up of the towns of Norwich, Preston and Ledyard, there has been nominated a man from Preston—John H. Richardson—who is an experienced legislator, a man of sound qualifications, a man of ability and a real worker in whatever cause he enlists in. In a republican legislature it is important that this 19th district should have a republican senator if our representation is going to amount to what it should. It must be apparent to the voters of Norwich, Preston and Ledyard that their interests can be better looked after by electing a senator in the majority party of the legislature than by selecting one in the minority. The districts' interests are many. They ought not to be overlooked and they ought not to be entrusted to minority representation. They will be not be if Mr. Richardson is elected. What holds true regarding the district is equally true concerning the town of Norwich. We have for always sent republican representatives but Norwich can depend upon more effective and far reaching service by sending republicans to a legislature which will be controlled by republicans.

The fact cannot fail to be appreciated by the thinking voter. Add to that fact the qualifications of Henry P. Beausoleil and Josiah Greenstein, men who know Norwich and its needs and convincing reasons are obtained for giving them a strong majority in the election on Tuesday.

MAKE THE CONGRESS REPUBLICAN

On the point of making certain that there is a republican congress elected as well as a republican president, Secretary Mellon is absolutely correct. The country needs a republican president because of the policies for which he stands and which he can be relied upon to carry out. But it also needs a republican congress to give the president the necessary assistance in carrying out those policies.

Well does Mr. Mellon say that: Unless the president of the United States has behind him a strong and united majority in congress, he finds himself hampered and often is powerless to carry out his policies by securing their enactment into law. This is particularly true when a majority of the congress are not of the president's own political party.

This situation has been witnessed time and again. It is always well that there should be a proper minority strength in congress, but the most effective and desirable results are certain to be obtained when a president has a congress with a majority of his political party. It operates far smoother than when a congress is engaged in fighting the president on political grounds.

In this connection the duty of the voters of the 2nd district is clear. Not only is it that Mr. Hoover is elected president, but that he can "get on" sending to Washington as senator Frederick C. Walcott as the successor to Senator McLean and electing the five congressmen, which includes Congressman Freeman of this district, about whose backing of sound republican principles including a protective tariff there is no question. They can be relied upon to stand as consistently back of Mr. Hoover as they have back of President Coolidge.

EMERGENCY BOARD'S DECISION

When the railroad employes of Great Northern threatened a strike, one was pulled by President Coolidge, under the provisions of the act which replaced the railroad labor board, an emergency board for the purpose of hearing the facts in the case and reaching a decision as to what should be done.

That board was required to act within 30 days and it has done so. It has made its report to the president and in it recommends that there be an increase of 6 1-2 per cent. in the wages of the employes. In their work the conditions remain the same as they have been. In these working conditions are changed the board believes there should be an increase of 7 1-2 per cent. to the men.

There is nothing obligatory about acceptance of this recommendation by the employes or the railroads. There is a period of 30 days allowed for the consideration of the award during which there can be no change in the relations between the employer and employe. That is regarded as meaning that there can be no strike put into effect during that time.

This one more step has been taken under the existing law which is intended to prevent strikes. It could hardly succeed. Whether it will, or not remains to be seen. The employes refused to accept the decision of the decision board. That is their right to strike is what kept the number of the president and the emergency board and upon the outcome of the latter's work rests the threat, or failure of the law.

ROBERT LANSING

By the death of Robert Lansing, of whom Hitle has been heard since the resignation from the cabinet of Woodrow Wilson over eight years ago, there is removed the secretary of state who served during the period of the world war. He was named to the office that had been held by William Jennings Bryan and upon him fell grave responsibilities in connection with the war insofar as the president permitted him to function.

There has been no period when such conditions were faced. There were the years leading up to our declaration of war, the year and a half following our entrance into the struggle and the period of peace negotiations that followed in which Mr. Lansing was called upon to deal with unusual conditions.

It is by no means a reflection upon his ability when it is recalled that it was the disposition of President Wilson to handle much of the business of the secretary's department himself. That was the responsibility which the president assumed. Reports appear concerning their differences but maybe this does not develop to a serious extent until the illness of the president. Then probably the course of things and the inability to exercise the same clear judgment as in the past the president was much disturbed by what he thought was an effort on the part of the secretary to override his authority and the latter submitted his resignation.

Mr. Lansing was a talented lawyer and a capable secretary of state although his real efforts in that office were more or less submerged by the activities of his chief.

SELF HELP

It is impossible to overlook the fact that democracy has had an election in which there has been an orderly choice of president, and that upon the announcement of the result there has been no decision to contest the result or to start a revolution. It is to the credit of Honduras.

Such has not always been the case in that republic. Like others of the Central American republics it has had its revolutions and its bloodshed. There has been a disposition to pick heads of the government by bullets instead of ballots, and it is a happy augury of the recent election means that these conditions will prevail no more. Probably it is too much to accept such a reform as permanent, however much it might be desired.

On the other hand isn't it possible that Honduras has been taking a lesson from its own experiences in the past and the experiences of other republics where deplorable conditions have developed and the country seriously handicapped through revolutionary tactics? Hasn't, in fact, Honduras been watching Nicaragua and come to the realization of the fact that it is time to free a grasp upon its own affairs without waiting for outside help? Hasn't it been studying the situation and come to the sensible conclusion that it can do those very things for itself?

Honduras is to be congratulated if it has. It is the right thing to do. Good judgment is displayed by its leaders. That is first what such prevail in all of the republics of all times and if it did there would be no need of calling for occasional from the outside.

EDITORIAL NOTES

When it comes to providing the Salvation Army funds many contributors each make it an easy proposition.

Does not experience teach the lesson of not trying to cross a railroad track when a locomotive is crossing the highway?

The man on the corner says: Some people seem to think that health is measured like the circumference of a globe.

Perhaps it would not be good reading to print what the senator from South Carolina is saying about the senator from North Carolina.

LITERARY DIGEST POLL SHOWS HOOVER HAS BIG LEAD IN 42 STATES.

Hoover is shown ahead in 42 states more than two weeks before the regular election. It is pointed out in the current Literary Digest that while ballot cards were sent to the entire electorate, Hoover polls 66.76% votes to Smith's 49.42% or about 4 1-2 to 1, whereas in the 1924 election the ratio between Coolidge and Davis was about 2 1-2 to 1.

Likewise in Chicago, where all the registered voters were asked to respond for their favorite, again Hoover is leading Smith, 69.9% to 71.91%, a ratio of about 6½ to 1, while four years ago Coolidge received approximately 3½ to 1 votes over Davis in the regular election returns, showing a possible heavy democratic trend in the large cities.

The poll indicates Hoover leading in New York state, with a plurality of 215,929 to 185,638 votes, with 31 counties counted. In New York state, where the ballots were sent to every registered voter was asked to vote for the one he would prefer as President. Smith leads his republican opponent, by 140,770 to 105,885, while in 1924 Coolidge carried all five boroughs of the city.

The tabulations show Hoover ahead in Massachusetts, which is considered by many astute political observers as the prize doubtful state of the entire Union, by a margin of slightly over 2 to 1.

The completed returns show Smith receiving about 48 per cent of his support from those who stated that they voted republican in the last presidential election, while Hoover obtains over 75 per cent of his strength from those who professed they were republicans in 1924.

Of the 344,270 who cast ballots in this "straw" election but who did not vote in the official presidential election four years ago practically 60 per cent are voting republican and over 39 per cent are voting democratic in this straw poll.

The Literary Digest states editorially, "whose final results are tabulated herewith, has proved to be the greatest in history with the complete returns some 180,000 votes tabulated, a total of votes received, 2,737,- a total of approximately 19,- ballots sent out, represent a of 14.6 per cent., considerthe average for polls of

The present huge polling list is the largest number of years, founded originally on the telephone books of all parts of the country, expanded, with the elimination of duplications, by the lists of automobile owners of the country, and, in many places, by registration lists.

"The list of Digest subscribers is not included as a unit, as a good many commentators seem to believe, when crediting the whole polling list with a 'highbrow' tendency, and a compensation tendency to minimize the democratic strength by from 5 to 10 per cent.

A Washington Bystander

BY KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1— The good people of Washington, who will be mere innocent onlookers at the election Nov. 6, have already taken steps to "celebrate" election day in a fashion all their own.

Through a committee on representation set up by those citizens who have long been howling with indignation over the fact that Washington residents alone are disqualified as a class from voting, plans have been framed to make the great day of the national election for other Americans a "Humiliation day" for voteless Washingtonians.

Voteless Election Booths

Among other means by which the agitators of votes for District of Columbia residents hope to impress their situation on the country will be the placing of election booths about the city, all to be silent witnesses to the political impotency of this half million or so section of the American people. The booths will be draped in mourning. The "Voteless League of Women Voters," Washington's own special unit of the National League of Women Voters, will take care of this work.

Other methods of propaganda adopted include an airplane bombardment of the city and surrounding environs with "Votes for Washington" stickers, and the letting loose of toy balloons by the thousand, setting forth the same plea. Automobile windshield stickers on domestic and visiting cars are expected to carry on the good work over a wide area. There are to be radio addresses and slogan campaigns in the movie houses with hopes of getting the news reels to spread word of the plight of Washingtonians far and wide.

But how effective all this will be toward promoting a national movement to give Washington a place of its own in national politics remains to be seen. The nation will be so busy that day finding out whom it has elected to the White House that it will not have much time to think dispassionately of the curious condition that deprives the residents of the nation's capital itself of any share in that or any other election. But what the organizers of the campaign hope for is the welding of public opinion in Washington into such a force that congress and the country at large must some day recognize the demand for enfranchisement of the people of a city as large and important as to stand well up among the first score of so of metropolitan communities.

Want Voice in Own Affairs

The immediate demand of the Voteless for Washington movement is limited and the sponsors and other devices for calling "to the attention of the country will show that. It is for the right to vote for president and vice president and for representation of the city in congress. The claim is made that inasmuch as congress is the only board of aldermen or any other form of city fathers' organization Washington has, the people are entitled to have a spokesman of their own in at least the house of representatives. The handling of city affairs is regarded as so important by the house that its rules set aside one legislative day each week for their consideration, yet no representative elected by the people of Washington sits in that body.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Wonderful Scenes Around Norwich.

Mr. Editor: Do you, dear reader, recall at this time what a wonderful day was given to us Sunday, October 21? As I stood looking through the window of my old home at Twelfth street and Boswell avenue and I looked upon the hills beyond and where I used to wander through what I thought was nature's paradise, there came to be the words of John Lubbock where he says: "Those who love nature can never be dull. They may have other temptations. But at least they run no risk of being assailed by idleness or want of occupation. For the love of nature keeps us from thinking. Hope, mean and pelty, thoughts that interfere so much with our peace of mind. And our communion with nature makes living worth while. And makes the world brighter until it seems almost like a fairy tale."

And to the door comes my good brother, George, than whom there is no better boy, and asked if I would like to take a ride out through the country with my friends. I was agreeably surprised when I found who my friends were. For they were also my friends, and they have lived their lives in Norwich. I soon found they were among the ones I knew long ago, —Steve Shea and his brother Tom and also Charlie Pfeifer. Steve and I had much to tell each other for I found he had a wonderful memory. He was very interesting. On we went, many things in company we viewed, but talk about for me too was a great lover of nature and he pointed out many interesting places. We started out in the direction of Taftville and off to the right I could see the memorial to Miantonomo and I recalled the date to them as appears on the stone, 1643. Soon we reached Hunter's road and although the road is not as smooth as the state road yet we are well repaid for any discomfort by the wonderful scenes that unfold before your view. The ride through the native country was worth while. Steve seemed to know each and every place we passed by. At one place he said: "Here is where Mr. Lillibridge lives" and I could see between the trees piles of fine looking apples lying under them and he said, "this is called Sectarian road." Here it is beginning to be autumn and the solitudes has a sentiment its own. In the distance we can see the forest trees and they appear as though they were in flames, with all the colors of the rainbow, for dame nature has been busy and has shown to man all her wonders. She has thrown her glorious banners to the sea as a harbinger of the coming winter when all nature is at rest until spring with its welcome sunshine and flowers. Kind readers, who more in that direction and off the Canterbury turnpike who have further to travel than the children of Yantic and are told they must buy their own school tickets?

The Personal Attitude of Gov. Smith

Editors Since I am a social worker and know how great a factor intoxicating drink is in the tearing down of society and individual lives, I would like to ask you kindly to reprint the enclosed as it enlightens us as to the personal attitude of Al Smith and probable results were he to be elected.

Since Prof. Henry Farnam Jr., is the husband of the Belgian lady who is to speak to us on Saturday evening at the town hall, we will be interested to note his activity.

OBSERVER.

Norwich, Nov. 1, 1928.

The enclosure follows:
Editor of the New Haven Journal Courier Forum.

Sir:—The democrats are apparently trying to secure votes for Governor Smith by getting people active in social movements to write personal letters to others interested in the same fields. Such a letter came to me the other day signed by Miss Lillian D. Wald and John L. Elliott of New York. As there are probably among your readers not a few who have received similar letters, it occurs to me that they and others as well may be interested in seeing my reply. I am, therefore enclosing it, and remain,

Yours very truly,
HENRY W. FARNAM

Miss Lillian D. Wald,
265 Henry street,
New York City.

My Dear Miss Wald:—Your favor of September 29, urging me to cast my vote for Governor Smith, came as a great surprise. I appreciate the progressive work which he has done in the field of social legislation in New York, but on the subject of prohibition his attitude is reactionary, not progressive, and the evils that would surely follow the adoption of his plan for undermining prohibition more than outweigh, in my judgment, any benefits that might be expected from his progressive attitude in other fields. You believe, as I do, in prohibition, and express confidence that Governor Smith will give us a better enforcement of the law than Mr. Hoover. May I state briefly three of the many reasons which compel me to differ from you?

1. The repeal of the Mullan-Gage Act.—In ratifying the eighteenth amendment, the state of New York entered into a solemn partnership with its sister states and with the union, to co-operate in wiping out the liquor traffic. Morally that compact was just as binding on New York as is the obligation to pay the interest on its bonds. Connecticut recognized the obligation, although it failed to ratify. Practically the repeal of the New York act serves as a large part of the machinery on which the amendment relied for its enforcement in that state. By signing the repeal as governor, your candidate has weakened in advance the power of the president to enforce any act.

2. Governor Smith's condemnation of the amendment in his speech of acceptance.—How can he expect subordinates to show any zeal in enforcing an act which their chief himself denounces?

3. His Personal Habits.—On this subject I have no first-hand knowledge, but Oswald Garrison Villard published nearly a year ago in the Nation a very definite statement regarding the number of highballs and cocktails which the governor is in the habit of imbibing daily. The governor has taken pains to ferret out the gossip of women in order to prove that on a specific occasion he was not intoxicated. But he has, as I am informed by the Nation, never denied Mr. Villard's statements; still less sued him for libel. I can see but one inference to be drawn from this.

Do we want that kind of a president if he has become a total abstainer since last November, why does he not say so?

With this background, I cannot see how the election of Governor Smith can mean anything but encouragement of lawlessness. On the other hand Mr. Hoover's record is absolutely unsullied. He is a man of few words, but his every word is as good as his bond. He has proved this by his remarkable business and professional career, which he sacrificed in order to devote himself to feeding the sufferers in the World war. He has never patronized bootleggers and does not drink. He has clearly stated the social purpose of prohibition, so persistently misrepresented by the wets, and recognizes that most of the evils complained of are due to bad administration rather than to prohibition itself. I shall, therefore, vote for him, as will my family.

I have long appreciated and admired your splendid social work. It is on this account that I have taken the trouble to explain some of the reasons which compel me to differ from you, and as the matter concerns many of our old friends whose interests have been the same as yours and mine, I may possibly circulate copies of this letter among them.

HENRY W. FARNAM.

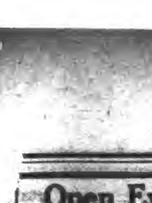
FIND "FRIEND IN NEED"
Mother and Daughter Praise Vegetable Compound



Johnson City, N. Y.—"My daughter was only 20 years old, but for two years she worked in misery. She was all run-down, nervous, had aches and pains and no appetite. I was taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound with good results so she decided to try it. Before she had taken two bottles her appetite was better, she was more cheerful and was able to work. I cannot praise your medicine too highly. It is wonderful for mothers and for daughters. It's surely 'a friend in need.'"—Mrs. L. E. Hall, 223 Floral Avenue, Johnson City, N. Y.

CONGREGATIONALISTS NAMED NAT'L. CONFERENCE DELEGATES

Eleven churches answered the roll call Wednesday at Stonington at the semi-annual meeting of the New London Association of Congregational Churches and Ministers at which Rev. C. H. Ricketts of this city was moderator.

The first business on the program was the election of delegates to the national conference to be held in Detroit in May, 1929. Mrs. Dwight C. Stone of Hanover, Dr. Henry W. Hulbert of Groton and Dr. James H. Weeks of the borough were the delegates elected.

Rev. Walter Vey of Lebanon was accepted into the association. Rev Mr. Vey came from the Westminster West (Vermont) association.

Reports of the churches were read by the Rev. Gurdon F. Bailey of Norwich Town. Twenty-two of the 38 churches responded with reports. The address of the morning session was then delivered by the Rev. J. Beveridge Lee, D.D., whose topic was Ought the Church to Ignore a Great Moral Question When It Becomes a Political Issue? Before the meeting adjourned for luncheon, Rev. A. H. Abbott of this city led a short devotional service.

The afternoon session opened with a song and prayer service, led by Rev. Dwight C. Stone of Hanover. The afternoon address was delivered by Dr. Ioclun Porter of China. His topic was The Present Outlook in China.

The session closed with benediction by Rev. Charles H. Ricketts. About 130 delegates were present at the meeting, representing 11 Congregational churches in New London county. No plans were made as to the time and place of the next meeting of the association.

RECEIVING GOOD RESPONSE TO SALVATION ARMY APPEAL

The Salvation Army appeal committee composed of many prominent Norwich citizens who invariably lend their effort to all activities of a charitable and civic nature are elated at the response which the Salvation Army is receiving through the mail. It was the unanimous belief of the appeal committee that the Salvation Army service in Norwich left an indelible mark upon the heart of a great number of citizens in the community, and therefore a mail appeal is bound to receive generous response. The returns coming in daily into the Salvation Army headquarters, 10 Cliff street, bears out the committee's belief in a most gratifying manner. Some of the contributions so far received come from new donors who could not be reached in former years, owing to lack of time to canvass citizens who surely would have contributed to the Salvation Army if the needs of the organization had been called to their attention. The committee feels great satisfaction that the donations which come in from citizens who contributed in former years are not less in amount, and in many instances are larger, than in former years. Several donations have been brought to the Salvation Army by people who pass the headquarters, and some subscriptions came by mail with the contributor's signature marked "A friend."

Campaign Secretary McCabe wishes to express his most sincere thanks to all contributors who signed their name "A friend" without giving their address. Mr. McCabe, in his gratitude to the Norwich people for their generous support which they give to the organization which he represents, invariably sends a letter of thanks to each contributor whenever he has a return address. All these letters are signed by Arthur M. Brown, chairman of the appeal, who is very much interested in its success. A receipt for the donation is also enclosed with the signature of John R. Tarrant, treasurer of the appeal committee. The names of the contributors are also acknowledged daily in The Norwich Bulletin.

More than 5,000 letters setting forth in a very brief manner why the Salvation Army is in need of a maintenance fund have been sent out. Each letter has a subscription card enclosed and every donation, no matter how small, is gratefully received, and it will go towards helping alleviate the suffering of some unfortunate man or woman who come within the sphere of the Salvation Army service. The following names have contributed in answer to the Salvation Army appeal since the first announcement of the campaign contribution has been made in Thursday's issue of The Norwich Bulletin:

THREE PURSES OF GOLD PRESENTED TO PASTOR AS FAREWELL GIFT

REV. EDWARD C. DUNBAR

A farewell reception for Rev. and Mrs. Edward C. Dunbar was held Thursday evening at the First Baptist church with a large number of the congregation, ministers from the city and surrounding towns and friends of Rev. and Mrs. Dunbar in attendance. Rev. Mr. Dunbar has accepted a call from the Baptist church at Flemington, N. J., and leaves this city Wednesday to take up his duties at the church in that city.

The programme arranged for the farewell service opened with a piano solo, Hungarian Rhapsody, by Charles Hamlin followed by prayer by Rev. Harry P. Brothwell, pastor of the Third Baptist church, Greeneville. The next number was a tenor solo by Fred T. Maples, who was accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Walter M. Cowan. Mr. Hamlin again favored with the piano solo, The Fifth Nocturne, and then another vocal solo was rendered by Mr. Maples. All of the numbers were nicely given and were enthusiastically received by the audience.

During the programme remarks were heard from Rev. Alexander H. Abbott, pastor of the United Congregational church, Rev. David A. Pitt, pastor of the Central Baptist church, and by Rev. E. E. Gates, of Hartford, general secretary of the Connecticut State Baptist association, all of whom spoke very highly of Rev. Mr. Dunbar.

Three purses of gold, the collection of which was in charge of George H. Amburn, were presented to Rev. Mr. Dunbar as a gift of the members of the congregation. The presentation speech was made by Earle W. Stamm. Other gifts received by Rev. Mr. Dunbar included a console set from the girls of the L. W. C., presented by Miss Olive Eathbune, a traveling bag from the members of the Young People's society and a brief case from the Kappa club.

The closing prayer was by Rev. George H. Strouse, pastor of the Bozrah Congregational church, a former pastor of the First church. A social time was then held with the serving of refreshments of cake and ice cream by members of the society class.

Those in the receiving line were Mervin Leming, superintendent of the church Sunday school, Deacon and Mrs. Charles R. Cross, Rev. and Mrs. E. C. Dunbar and Rev. E. E. Gates. The reception committee comprised Mrs. Elbert Bliven, chairman, Walter M. Cowan, Frank D. Davis, Earle W. Stamm, Mrs. Maude I. Wheeler, Miss Bernice E. Willey, Mrs. Frank D. Davis, Mrs. E. L. Bliven and Miss Rose Thornes.

Rev. Mr. Dunbar, who expressed his appreciation and thanks to the assemblage for the gifts in the course of the programme, will deliver his farewell sermon at the morning service Sunday at the church. A recognition service will be held Sunday evening at the Central Baptist church for Rev. Mr. Dunbar, at which the address will be given by Rev. Gurdon F. Bailey, pastor of the Norwich Town Congregational church.

Rev. Mr. Dunbar goes to Flemington, N. J., where he will be pastor of a brand new Baptist church, whose membership is in excess of 400. The membership of the local church is about 250. A successor to Rev. Mr. Dunbar has not as yet been selected.

Rev. Mr. Dunbar, who has been pastor of the local church for about six years, attended Colby college and graduated from Newton Theological Institute. During the World war he served for 18 months in the army as second lieutenant and was located at Camp Devens, Mass., Camps Dix and Lee of Virginia and later at Camp Meade, Md.

He came to Norwich from Littleton, Mass., where he had been pastor of the First Baptist church for one and a half years. Previous to that time he was supply pastor at the First Baptist church at Billericka, Mass., and for several years was pastor at the First Baptist church at North Easton, Mass.

During his six years as pastor of the First Baptist church Rev. Mr. Dunbar has had several calls from other churches, but these have been declined by him. The more recent call came from the First Baptist church at East Greenwich, R. I., in April of this year, and upon the announcement that he had declined to accept the Rhode Island pastorate it was received with gratification by the members of the parish. Many were the expressions of regret heard since Rev. Mr. Dunbar has accepted the Flemington call, one member of the church remarking "that he was the finest minister in the city, in fact in the state."

CANDIDATES OF FIVE PARTIES ON MACHINES

Registrars Tyler D. Guy and Cornelius J. Downes were busy Thursday in the corridor at the court house, in demonstrating the voting machines and will continue that service for the voting public of Norwich this (Friday) afternoon from 1 to 9 o'clock.

There are five rows of party candidates on the machines this year, running in the following order from the top to the bottom: Republican, democratic, socialist, workers and socialist labor.

The registrars called the attention of voters to the fact that the name of the presidential candidate of any party does not appear on the machine, but that there are the names of seven presidential electors for whom the citizen votes, these names being nearest to the party lever which the voter pulls. If any voter desires to split his ticket on the vote for president, it is necessary for him to push up the seven pointers on the presidential electors he does not want to vote for and to push down the seven pointers for the electors that he intends to vote for.

Friday evening at 7:30 o'clock the election officials, moderators, checkers, challengers, machine tenders etc., will be instructed in their duties at the court house.

Frederick Spencer of Montville, was given a 30-day jail sentence in the city court Thursday morning when he was found guilty of the charge of driving an automobile while under the influence of liquor. The machine he was driving upset in Thames street Wednesday after a collision.

PRESENTS INN PROJECT BEFORE LIONS' MEETING

Joseph A. Beck, vice president of the Consolidated Hotel Service, Inc., who operates the Treadway System of Colonial Inns in New England and Florida, addressed the Norwich Lions' club at the Wauregan hotel Thursday noon, on the subject of the projected Norwich Inn.

Mr. Pack presented many informative facts in relation to the project besides answering a barrage of inquiries from interested hearers.

"The Treadway System of Colonial inns," said Mr. Pack, "has been in development for eleven years so that now there are seven hostelries of our colonial type in active operation in various parts of New England with two additional inns in Florida. Of all the inns that have been constructed and operated under Treadway management, none possesses the advantages of held the opportunities of assuring a profitable return in the investments they represent, equal to the contemplated inn at Norwich.

"All of our inns are showing a substantial profit on the investment after one year of operation. Up to now they have all been located in small towns, three of the seven in New England are located in college towns, The Middlebury inn, Middlebury, Vt., Williams inn, Williamstown, Mass., Lord Jeffrey, Amherst Mass. The remainder are in towns ranging from 3,000 population down to the Mt. Holyoke at South Hadley which is on the summit of Mt. Holyoke mountain. The others are the True Temper inn, Wallingford, Vt., Dorset inn, Dorset, Vt., and the Ashfield house, Ashfield, Mass.

"The effect on the community of the operation of these inns has been salutary in all cases. We can definitely trace five major real estate operations as the results of the opening of the Middlebury inn since its opening a little more than a year ago. We have found that establishing Treadway inns has a material effect on the locality in their vicinity. It brings in new interests through attracting desirable class of patrons who become in many instances deeply interested in the community itself. Merchants and tradesmen are benefitted, real estate values are favorably effected. In many cases, sojourners at our inns have found the locations so attractive that they locate their summer homes in the immediate vicinity and enjoy the conveniences afforded by the inn.

"The idea of associating the Norwich Golf club with the Norwich inn is a happy and practical one. The golf club property is the natural spot for our inn of our design and type. In all our experiences we have no situation like it. A golf club immediately adjacent to the inn is an ideal situation. The golf club is allowed to maintain its identity and to enjoy many advantages in the way of increased patronage as well as securing many advantages of convenience and service that will make it doubly attractive to its members and invite additional membership from a large radius. Under this arrangement it is not possible to make the venture anything but profitable. The combination of interest will be helpful to the inn and the golf club alike.

"If small towns are earning profits in the inn investments there is no earthly reason why Norwich investors cannot speedily enjoy the same privileges. You have a wonderful site with the inn so located facing the south, gaining the full advantage of the warm breezes during the cool weather which will prolong the natural season of out-door activities and enjoyment of fine weather. It is a remarkable combination of favorable circumstances that presents no complicated features in the way of competition.

"The Norwich project is primarily in the hands of Norwich investors who will be in control. The Treadway management can never be in control as we operate under contract. Our particular business is to plan, construct and outfit the inn and to administer its operation. The board of directors of the Norwich corporation are the real owners of the enterprise and are in control save as the managers of the inn when it becomes a going concern.

"Immediate sources of income are apparent, aside from the natural patronage arising from the touring public. They include the traveling salesman who motors from point to point and those who have already become patrons of our other inns. The annual boat race will assure substantial patronage. The Connecticut college for Women is a substantial asset through visiting families of the students, Golf club members and their guests will contribute a definite quota of patronage. All this will be supplemented by the opportunities for social affairs that will soon become an attractive feature of the inn's social life if the experience of our other inns will be repeated here. That they will, I have not the slightest doubt.

"A comparison of our rates will show that we have succeeded in furnishing meals and accommodation of a superior quality at an extremely moderate price. Our rates range from $3 to $10 per day, American plan, which contrasted with similar hotels in nearby towns that furnish the same quality of service is extremely low. We have been the subject of wonderment on the part of some of our transient guests as to our ability to furnish the quality of dinner we serve at the moderate price of $1.50. Frankly it is the best dinner that can be served for the money. We know from comparison that it has never been equalled for the price.

"Don't lose sight of the fact that a hotel makes the impression to visitors about the surrounding community. A Treadway inn will furnish an index to the character of the town in which it is located that cannot fail to react favorably. I am sure your investigations will satisfy you that this is a safe investment. Under the plan of operation if we make a success the investors are bound to get theirs. Our participation does not begin until all operating and overhead expenses are met, plus the seven per cent dividend on the preferred stock. After that one-half the profits over and above these expenses go to the inn corporation and the other half to the Treadway system. You can readily see that it is up to us to make the Norwich inn a success in order that we may justify our own liability and invested expense. We bring to you all the advantages of our cooperative buying system which is considerable. We are purchasing simultaneously for all the inns operating under our management. This means purchases in bulk of every item of equipment, food, linens, silver, furniture, etc., which enables us to enjoy all the advantages accruing to such a method. This and many other economics are possible of accomplishment, all of which go to contribute to the probability of profit for the inn corporation.

"My own feeling is that the Norwich inn cannot fail to be successful. All it needs is for Norwich interests to get solidly behind the movement to bring to your city an asset of real value in both financial returns and increased poularity."

President Kopland W. Markoff presided at the meeting which opened with the singing of America. C. E. Carpenter asked the blessing.

Gingerale was provided by the Bishop-Bidwell Company. Mr. Carpenter reported that the Thanksgiving day committee has made arrangements for a turkey dinner for a number of deserving poor boys the day before Thanksgiving. Charles C. Treat, a guest at the meeting, offered to furnish ice cream for the boys' dinner. The offer was accepted and Mr. Treat was thanked by hearty applause. Lyon-Dix was admitted to membership.

E. J. McCabe, campaign secretary of the Salvation Army financial campaign briefly addressed the meeting. Mr. French announced that the reorganization of the old Chealsea Boat club is progressing. Announcement was made by Max Handver that the Lions club has been invited to attend the meeting of the Women's City club at the Wauregan hotel, next Wednesday evening at 7:30 o'clock, when the speaker will be State Highway Commissioner John A. Macdonald. The invitation was accepted.

City Attorney Charles W. Cassidy, who was welcomed to membership in the club, was called on to give a short talk. The meeting closed in the usual form.

READ PAPER ON POET BEFORE WOMAN'S CLUB

At a round table group of the Woman's City club Tuesday afternoon, Mrs. A. N. Foster read a scholarly paper on "Robinson, the Poet of Interpretation."

She gave as her text of the afternoon: "This world is a spiritual kindergarten, where millions of deluded infants are trying to spell G-O-D with the wrong blocks."

"We turn to literature and the drama," she continued, "for this interpretation of life. And Robinson is pre-eminently a poet of interpretation. He takes for his theme the Arthurian legends, and he tells the tales of Malory's 'Morte d'Arthur.' He interprets the motives of Lancelot and Guinevere, with sympathy, understanding and tolerance. Furthermore he does this in such a way that he portrays our own characters and deals in universal truths; and in these poems shines a quality found in the Bible.

"Edwin Arlington Robinson is a New England poet. Born in Maine and educated at Harvard, he lived for some time in Massachusetts, although at present he is living in New York city. John Drinkwater, ranks Robinson as one of our six greatest poets: 'A poet of perception, of exquisite clarity and of piety.'"

Mrs. Foster spoke of her trip to England this summer, and of her visit to Glastonbury Abbey, the burial place of King Arthur. She showed several charming views of the Abbey and cloisters—as well as a small replica of the cross on King Arthur's tombstone.

At the close of Mrs. Foster's talk, Rev. Thomas Van Ess of Boston spoke of the admirable analysis of Mrs. Foster's paper, and of her sympathetic interpretation.

"STOP" SIGNS IN CITIES ARE WITHIN THE LAW

Municipalities have authority to compel operators of automobiles to bring their vehicles to a full stop before entering any street or thoroughfare from another street, by establishing signs or signals which command such a stop, in the opinion of Attorney General Benjamin W. Alling. This opinion agrees with an interpretation of the law previously made by the commissioner of motor vehicles, Robbins B. Stoeckel, who has advised various city officials that "stop streets" do not conflict with the state law providing right of way for vehicles approaching from the right.

City, town and borough authorities have the right, by statute, the attorney general says, to establish traffic routes and provide instructions for their use by direction signals which must be obeyed by vehicle operators. Commissioner Stoeckel, too, in approving their use has held that traffic signals of the kind in question, in effect, substitute for policemen, who, without question, would have authority under the regulations of a city or town ordinance to stop traffic at any point.

"I have never believed in the boulevard system as a universal law," Commissioner Stoeckel has stated, "but I always have thought, and still think, that authorities in charge of traffic ought to have at their command every possible adaptation of a rule or method which might help to meet the problem. It ought to be possible to establish 'stop streets' if that is going to help regulate traffic. I have tried for the past two legislatures to get that authority distinctly written into the law so there might be no question about it. I am going to try again this next legislature."

Attorney General Alling says in his opinion:

"Under existing statutes the authorities of any town, city or borough have the power to establish and enforce ordinances fixing traffic routes and public stands for public service motor vehicles and traffic rules for all vehicles, and another statute expressly provides that on approaching any traffic signal, the operator or driver of any vehicle shall follow the directions as given on the signal.

"It is my opinion that the establishment of 'stop streets' by a municipality is nothing more than the establishment of a traffic rule or regulation and the placing of a traffic signal which requires the operator of a vehicle to stop is a proper regulation of traffic, and further that the operator of any vehicle approaching such a traffic signal is called upon to obey the instructions which appear upon it.

TALBOT WINS ON A FOUL FROM KENERSON IN GRUELLING BATTLE

The second show of amateur boxing under the auspices of the Uncas club at Montville gave to the fans of the village, New London, and Norwich, eight bouts of real old fashioned slugging, pure and unadulterated. It not only furnished four knockouts in the eight bouts, but it gave to fistiania one more fighter whose name will be written on the roles of immortals along with Harold Talbot and Jack Dempsey, etc. This new-comer to our ranks is Eddie Kenerson, and although he lost the fight to Harold by virtue of a foul, he showed to those present that he is just the man that they have been waiting for ever since Farmer Steve decided to stay on the farm.

Steve refused to come out of his retirement, and Eddie was rushed in at the last minute and what a battle he put up. Talbot with his improved stance had Kenerson somewhat at sea at first but from the second round on both lads stood toe to toe and slugged, first one taking the honors and then the other. Harold ever blinking, as is his wont and Eddie with his joyous grin, just threw all caution to the winds and walloped away. Space forbids the details but suffice to say that those who stayed home certainly missed some battle, a battle which alone was well worth the price of admission. Harold won on an unintential foul in the fourth round which made Eddie feel terrible, but he was consoled with the fact that they will be rematched. Talbot has improved greatly and those that have seen him before will hardly know him.

The rest of the card was excellent too. Baby Joe Gans, Norwich's pee wee battler took an easy win from Young Deindre also of Norwich. Gans knew too much for his opponent but the latter stood up well and was fighting all the time. Gans weighed 101 and Dumbra 100.

The second bout was a terrific affair. Billie Smith of Dayville had his hands full winning over Malcolm Hoy of Quaker Hill. Hoy put up a great battle for the first round bringing in his fast right to Smith's face and taking the lead. Smith plugging in, found Hoy's jaw with a hard right and Hoy went down and out in the second round. Hoy tipped the scales at 141 and Smith 140.

With his hard hitting right going in good fashion, Kid Lewis, the knockout kid from New London, added to his list by putting away "Toots" Gardner, the Palmertown favorite. Toots tried hard and sent home some hard wallops but just couldn't stand up under the terrific right hand punches of Lewis, and caved in in the second round. Both weighed 147.

Young Sharkey the Norwich lad who has started off a boxing career with a bang won on a technical K. O. over Joe Bishop of Danielson, which is no mean achievement. Bishop is a crafty boy and a good boxer, but Sharkey after he got started got his right going and had Joe on his knees trying to avoid punishment. It seemed only a matter of another punch, when Referee Connelly using good judgment, called a halt. This makes the second K. O. for Sharkey at the Montville show and already the fans have taken him to their hearts. He weighed 122 to Bishop's 121.

Shiek" Gadula the good looking Montville battler tore Geo. Londgren of New London to ribbons and what he didn't do to George wasn't worth doing. He only missed knocking him out in the second when Geo. went down under a fusillade of blows. Nothing to it but "Shiek" who at 144 pounds weighed three pounds less than Londgren.

Johnny Dosh of Norwich won a decision over Norman Reau of Oakdale, in rather a slow battle of four rounds. Both boys were rather cautious but occasionally slugged away at each other. Johnny tipped Norman over with a straight left in the first and although Reau fought hard to even it up he lost the last round by a margin, which did not meet with the approval of the fans. Dosh weighed 117 and Reau 121.

Kid Lewis went on for the second time against Cliff Martin and although Martin staged a tough battle, Lewis was

BEWARE THE COUGH FROM COLDS THAT HANG ON

Coughs from colds may lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery with two-fold action: soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for coughs from colds and bronchial irritations. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs from colds, bronchitis and minor forms of bronchial irritations, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

When your Children Cry for It

Castoria is a comfort when Baby is fretful. No sooner taken than the little one is at ease. If restless a few drops soon bring contentment. No harm done, for Castoria is a baby remedy, meant for babies. Perfectly safe to give the youngest infant; you have the doctors' word for that! It is a vegetable product and you could use it every day. But it's in an emergency that Castoria means most. Some night when constipation must be relieved—or colic pains—or other suffering. Never be without it; some mothers keep an extra bottle, unopened, to make sure there will always be Castoria in the house. It is effective for older children, too; read the book that comes with it.

GEOLOGY AND THE WORKING FARMER.

(Written Specially for The Bulletin)

As I sit down to my typewriter, this morning, to begin my regular weekly talk with such of my fellow farmers as care to listen, the first thought that comes into my mind is whether any, even of my most loyal readers, will care a copper for anything I may say about farms and farming.

You see, if things go on in their usual orderly course, this talk will appear on Friday, Nov. 2,—only three days before 'lection. Presidential 'lection, too. So far as one may be permitted to judge from his own immediate surroundings, it would seem utterly useless to expect a hearing on any subject but politics

The air is full of politics. The papers are from two-thirds to three-quarters full of politics. You'll hear more politics than anything else on the ball-grounds, at the golf courses, at bridge parties and afternoon teas, even at church suppers and sociables.

When two farmers meet their first inquiry is less apt to be about the price of potatoes or butter than about how the 'lection's going. It's politics here, politics there, politics everywhere, if not farther.

What chance has an old farmer to get a word in edgewise about farming matters? And who'll care a copper what he says, anyway?

Honestly, I'm almost tempted to discard my assigned topic and take a header into the political jamboree, myself. Especially, since I have my own pretty strong convictions as to which of the caddidates should NOT be elected.

But, don't hit me. Or swear at me. I'm not going to do anything of the sort. For two ample and sufficient reasons:

First, We've been for more than 20 years a sort of family party, off by ourselves, never asking or caring what political party any belonged to. And even a menagerie manager knows that, when he's got a tent full of elephants and tigers living together in comparative peace, it's durn bad policy to shove a howling hyena into the inclosure to nip at the heels of either or both.

Second, Even though the majority of farmers, like the majority in other vocations, are all stirred up about party politics, I feel confident there are some farmers, as well as some non-farmers, who have by this time got all the politics into their systems that seem desirable, and might like an occasional change of diet.

Did you ever read "Bert" Taylor's wonderful little lyric, written during a past presidential campaign, when he was editing the "column" for The Chicago Tribune? It's a bit of unusually facile versification, as rollicking as an old tavern "catch," lightly humorous, yet with a pregnant content of really deep thought. I can't write anything of my own similar length half as good or as appropriate. Read it,—just to please me:

"When quacks with pills political would dope us,
When politics absorb the livelong day,
I like to think about the star Canopus,
So far, so far away.

"Greatest of visioned stars, they say who list 'em,
To weigh it science always must despair.
Its shell would hold our whole dinged solar system,
Nor ever know 'twas there.

"When Temporary Chairmen utter speeches,
And frenzied henchmen howl their battle hymns,
My thoughts float out across the cosmic reaches
To where Canopus swims.

"When men are calling names and making faces,
And all the world's a jangle and ajar,
I meditate on interstellar spaces
And smoke a mild segar."

Perhaps there may be a few of my farmer-readers who feel somewhat as "Bert" Taylor did. But we are not restricted to a contemplation of the star Canopus. Taylor's satiation with politics drove his soaring soul out across the cosmic reaches to where that great sun swims in almost incomprehensibly distant space. But our business is the working of soil, dirt, earth. We don't many of us, know the deep secrets of astronomy. But we do know,—or ought to know—a whole lot about the earth we plow and harrow and hoe.

Not only the natural desire to change our fields of thought, but the pressing necessities of our calling should, it seems to me, make us, at least occasionally, very curious about the dirt we work.

Not only how it looks and acts, not only how it responds to this, that or the other treatment, not only how to get the most out of it, but to know what's under it, what made it, how it came where it is, how it came to be made up as it is, etc., etc.

In other words, geology. "Geology" is made up from two Greek words, one meaning earth and the other meaning speech. So that geology means simply the speech of the earth. Certainly, if there is any branch of the human family which should want to know the speech of the earth it is that branch daily concerned in working the soil.

It has often been a wonder to me that so few working farmers open their eyes and ears to the thousands of interesting things the earth is ready to show or tell them if they will only "stop, look and listen."

I'm not thinking about gold or silver or other precious minerals. Such things are not apt to be found on Connecticut farms or in Connecticut hills. Nor am I thinking about the soil content of nitrogen and phosphorous and potash, etc., important as such knowledge is to the judicious fertilization and tillage of Connecticut soils.

I'm thinking about the older and more fundamental things. A fair knowledge of geology would, indeed, be helpful to every working farmer in his seasonal plannings. But that is the grindstone of life which we have to turn, whether we will or not. Aren't there times when we all want to get our noses off that rasping grindstone? Aren't there times when we want to sharpen our wits and edge our knowledge even more than our axes or scythes? All our working life seems to be devoted to the answering of the question How to get the most out of the dirt? But don't there come times when our minds get tired of that ordid demand and want to know the Why and the Wherefore of it all? To such as have intervals of that sort I can't imagine any better diet than an occasional ration of geology.

Every one knows that the soil of his farm is made up from the debris of dissolved or eroded or ground-up rock. It often is practical, crop-growing importance to know what that original rock was and to have a general idea of its chemical composition. As an illustration of what I mean: I have one small lot of perhaps an acre and a half, sloping gradually from both north and south ends to a shallow trough running east and west down its center. Rocky ledges overlook both north and south ends. It took my predecessor many years of test and failure to find out that applications of lime in the form of land-plaster were of no value on the south end of the field. It cost him some money, many weary days' work, and a good deal of disappointment to learn this fact. Yet even the most rudimentary knowledge of geology would have told him the probabilities at a glance. The southern ledge, from which the soil of the southern end of the field was derived, is limestone. Therefore, the soil of that end is naturally over-limed. The northern ledge, from which the soil of the northern end of the field came, is a micaceous schist, without a trace of lime in its composition. It needed lime; the other end didn't.

That illustrates the practical advantage of a smattering of geology to the working farmer. But the working farmer is something more than a valet to his dirt. He is also a man with a man's brains and mind and an insatiable hunger to know. Let me cite, again from my own experience, a very recent amateurish adventure into geologic history.

As I think I have told you, my home lies in a narrow valley between two mountain ranges, varying from 1200 to 2300 feet high. Along the floor of that valley meanders a small stream,—just a "trout-brook," though it used to be ponded to run a couple of small mills. It is but a narrow stream which an agile lad could jump across almost anywhere. Yet there are at various places along its course gravel banks, made up of water-borne pebbles and cobbles and sand, sometimes reaching as high as 40 or 50 feet above the present stream level.

During recent road-making operations, one of these gravel banks had several thousand cubic yards of gravel steam-shovelled out of it. The exposure of the true face of that bank, hitherto hidden by weeds and bushes, showed that it had been made, sometime in the distant past, by a huge and torrential river, running at least 50 feet deep where today only a feeble booklet trickles. One page in the history of untold thousands or millions of years was opened when that gravel-bank was exposed to view. There were layers of big stones such as only a roaring torrent could have rolled before it, alternating with layers of smaller pebbles such as a gentler current might have carried, and other layers of fine gravel, sand and even silt, showing how the stream had changed from a raging torrent to an easily flowing river and then to an almost stagnant seepage. According to the violence of the flow stones, cobbles, pebbles, gravel, sand, silt, had been deposited in the original eddy to make what is now a fifty-foot high bank. It hadn't by any means been a regular change. Layers of sand and silt, deposited gently by almost stationary waters, had, above them as well as below them, layers of coarse gravel and cobbles, showing that the ancient river had swollen and diminished several times, before it ceased to be a river and dwindled to a trout-brook.

Now, I freely admit that this geologic history of a neighboring gravel bank doesn't help me any in raising potatoes on my clay loam. But, several times when passing that exposure on other business I've stopped my old flivver long enough to spell out the gravel-written story. And the very process has helped sweep some of the cobwebs out of my brains. That world is so much the more interesting to me.

I'm writing this just for those who want to know as well as to do. Doing things is mightly essential. But knowing things is even more fascinating.

No farmer has time or leisure to become an expert geologist. There's no chance. But every man needs an avocation as much as a vocation.

And what lies nearer the farmer than the earth he works? What could be more interesting than its age-old story, as told by itself?

THE FARMER.

TO OPEN REPUBLICAN HEADQUARTERS MONDAY

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Nov. 1—Republican headquarters for the closing activities of the campaign are to be opened Monday in the Windham County Savings bank building in the quarters recently vacated by the Eastern Connecticut Power company, it was announced this afternoon by Chairman E. L. Darbie of the republican town committee. The headquarters will be open all day election day, and republican activities will be directed from that point.

Voters who harbor any doubt as to the proper marking of their ballots on election day are invited to visit the headquarters and receive such instruction in this matter as they may desire.

There will be little further election activity in Killingly until Tuesday morning. It was being forecasted today that Killingly's vote next Monday will run far above 2,000. There are well over 3,000 voters registered in the town now and it is hoped to get not less than 2,700 of them to the polls, though that figure may be far surpassed.

MRS. LUCIUS WILLIAMS IS HOSTESS AT LAKE COTTAGE

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Nov. 1—Mrs. Lucius Williams was hostess last night at the Williams cottage on the North shore of Alexander's lake to twenty-four persons, a considerable number of them teachers in Killingly's schools as is Mrs. Williams, at a Raggedy Ann and bridge party.

The setting and the night were ideal for this pretty Halloween event. Harvest decorations, including a wealth of pumpkins, were used to make the cottage interior especially attractive.

The party assembled shortly after 6 o'clock and were served a supper, the menu including Tuna souffle, peas, rolls, pickles, olives, "pumpkin moonshine" salad, baked apples, cheese, crackers, coffee and nuts.

There were six tables for bridge, the high scorer being Miss Rebecca Pease, the low scorer Miss Priscilla Brooks. Honors for her Raggedy Ann costume went to Mrs. Edward Olsson and honorable mention to Mrs. Lucien Lambert. A special honor was Miss Marjorie I. Gaffney's for her Raggedy Andy costume.

Following the bridge period there was dancing and popcorn balls, cheese, coffee and nuts were served.

The guest list was as follows: Misses Esther Mellor, Rebecca Pease, Elizabeth R. Woodworth, Esther Souter, Cora Lutz, Beyrl Proctor, Frances Wheatley, Adah Danielson, Mabel Frink, Louise Perkins, Agnes Jacobs, Marjorie I. Gaffney, Mrs. Harold E. Greene, Mrs. Lester G. Gardner, Mrs. John Marland, Mrs. Thomas Beckett, Mrs. Edward Olsson, Mrs. William Levin, Mrs. Sabin Sayles, Mrs. Arthur W. Logee, Mrs. James Carmody, Mrs. Lucien Lambert.

Once again in the interest of a great humanitarian work it is necessary to call attention to the fact that seals are now being offered for sale here in competition with the tuberculosis seals that are put out here each holiday season. It has so happened in the past that numbers of people believed they were purchasing the tuberculosis seals when buying others that are purely decorative, but bring neither hope nor help to those afflicted with tuberculosis. The chance of making the same mistake again exists this year. Selling of the decorative seals in pursuit of a money-making proposition to those that handle them, often sending children from house to house canvassing for the sale of them in Danielson. It is the desire of the civic organizations here that handle the sale of the Christmas tuberculosis seals that this information be given the public at this time.

STEBBENE AND MURPHY NOT GUILTY OF LIQUOR CHARGES

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Nov. 1—The town court was busy about all day today hearing evidence in two liquor cases developing from raids of about ten days ago. The defendants were Albert H. Stebbene of Danielson and Walter W. Murphy of Dayville. Both were found not guilty of having illegally made sales of liquor. These two accused elected to battle it out in court, and won.

Mr. Stebbene denied that he had ever sold any liquor to Aldeor Blanchette of Voluntown, revealed as an under-cover agent of the state police department who, it now appears, has been at work up and down the Quinebaug valley for weeks gathering evidence of violations of the law among alleged bootleggers.

Likewise, Mr. Murphy denied that Blanchette ever had bought any intoxicants of him, and backed this statement by introducing several witnesses to prove that on the day Blanchette called on his hotel in Dayville Blanchette did no more than buy a pack of cigarettes and was given a glass of water in response to a request.

Attorney Harry E. Back was counsel for Mr. Murphy, and in summing up the case he flayed Blanchette on his past personal record, reciting to the court that he had been accused of theft and hinting that he had been a violator of the federal Mann act.

In finding the accused not guilty Judge W. Fenner Woodward took occasion to remark that the evidence against the accused was insufficient to warrant conviction and entering his opinion that the state should produce more adequate witnesses in proceedings such as these. Other liquor cases pending in this town are to be heard the first of the coming week, it is understood.

Friday afternoon members of the Civic Federation are to meet with Mrs. Henry D. Crosby of Academy street.

A fall registered shoot of the Danielson Rod and Gun club is scheduled to be held at the club's grounds off the Wauregan road on November 4.

A new uniformed official of the borough is A. Putnam Woodward, now fire marshall as well as chief of the fire department. Chief Woodward appeared in uniform for the first time today.

The usual large congregation gathered today at Old Trinity church for the annual All Saints' day service, conducted by Rev. J. Rees Jones, rector of St. Alban's church of Danielson.

Two weeks after a freight car, loaded with automobiles, was sealed in Detroit, it was opened at Spokane, Wash. Sitting in the front seat of one of the cars, lean and gaunt apparently having lived without food or water during the entire trip, a little dog was found. He was weak ever to whine, but he will recover

ONLY ONE COMPLAINT OF HALLOWEEN PRANKS

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Nov. 1—As far as was learned today only one complaint was received by the police relative to a disturbance being caused by Halloween practical jokers. An investigation was conducted by a Putnam police officer, who found that peas had been blown against the window panes, house shutters placed on nearby electric light poles and property of neighbors had been placed on the front door steps. No great amount of damage was caused and police discontinued further investigation.

In several of the business houses of the city this morning sample ballots were on display. These printed ballots are identical to those which will be used next Tuesday in the polls. Various persons gave indication that the split ticket will predominate in Putnam, since the question of how to correctly mark the split ticket was about the only question that confronted the veteran vote casters. A close ticket splitting will be held on next Sunday evening in St. John's hall on Providence street.

Trucks in the employ of the state highway department were applying a new coating of oil on School street, commencing near the telephone office and continuing northwards as far as the intersection of Mechanics street. School street is one of the city thoroughfares which is under state supervision.

Traffic passing on Providence street will be forced to make use of the Main and Bridge street detours for at least another month it was said today by Selectman William P. Warren. The steel beams for use in the re-enforcing of the Providence street bridge are not expected to arrive in Putnam until Nov. 8, and considerable time will be consumed before the structure, now condemned to public passage, will be renovated and opened. Four concrete tiers have been erected under the bridge by the contractors, preceding the arrival of the material necessary to complete the work.

Members of the Methodist church feasted upon venison, Wednesday evening when a supper was served by the members of the ladies aid. The deer was killed within the protection of the law, as it was the hunting prize of J. Herber Marsh, a member of the church, who has recently returned from a big game hunting trip into the interior of the Maine woods.

At St. Mary's church this morning masses were celebrated by the pastors in the honor of the day of All Saints. Each mass was largely attended. During the service prayers were offered for the repose of the departed on the eve of the day of All Souls.

Progress is being made by the landscape bureau of the state highway department and road contractors in removing the eyesores visible along the roadside of the highway from Attawaugan to the Dayville line. The banks are being beautified by coatings of gravel that have been leveled off and soon will serve as beds for plants that will be set out in the spring. The Gammino construction company of Providence are still engaged in the construction of a new concrete bridge over the Assawaug river in Attawaugan. This work was delayed at the opening of the summer season to insure swift work on the highway. The abutments have been laid across the stream, and with the aid of the giant cement mixer, it will be but a matter of a few months before the work is completed.

The "Friendly Evening" service, instituted a few years ago by the Congregational church will be repeated again this year, beginning next Sunday evening, Nov. 4. On each Sunday evening throughout the winter months the church society screens a popular motion picture free of charge. The friendly evening service this year will outstrip the quality of all other productions seen at the church in past years, as the committee has endeavored to and has succeeded in securing some of the best motion picture classics of the year. Kenneth C. Sharpe, church organist will be at the organ each evening. Rev. James F. English, pastor of the church has extended an invitation to the public to attend.

Mr. and Mrs. James Shea are in Utica, N. Y., attending the funeral of Mrs. Shea's sister-in-law, Mrs. Frederick Mason.

PUTNAM, Nov. 1—Six hundred residents of the town of Putnam owning real and personal property failed to make their tax returns to the board of assessors, as they closed their session today. ## a split cylinder block

Will that happen to your motor while you sleep tonight?

IT may come any time—cold that swoops down in the night to ruin expensive motors.

Every year the story is the same. Owners put off getting Denatured Alcohol until it's too late—because they don't want to bother, or feel optimistic, or forget. Cars unprotected—left overnight in unheated garages, allowed to stand outside theatres, parked for an hour or so somewhere, until the mercury drops—and drops.

Next day repair shops buzz with activity, soldering broken radiators, welding split cylinder blocks. And hundreds of owners dig down into aching pocket-books to pay bills that range as high as $400. An unexpected cost—the kind that hurts. The price of a foolish, thoughtless gamble.

Will you be faced by such a repair bill?

It's so simple to avoid it. Stop at your dealer's today and get him to put Denatured Alcohol in your radiator. Don't wait—tonight may be the night.

Use Denatured Alcohol early enough, use it often enough,* use it late enough. It's the one sure way to play safe.

Why every car manufacturer approves

DENATURED ALCOHOL

Denatured Alcohol is the only anti-freeze approved by every manufacturer of water-cooled cars. Most manufacturers approve it exclusively. There are five very definite reasons for that.

1. Denatured Alcohol is more economical. An entire winter's supply costs considerably less than any other anti-freeze.

2. Denatured Alcohol is more convenient to buy. You don't have to shop for it. Any dealer can supply you.

3. Denatured Alcohol does not seep out as other preparations have a marked tendency to do.

4. Denatured Alcohol will not harm your motor. It does not corrode or eat the metal and rubber of the cooling system as many chemical preparations do.

5. Denatured Alcohol is simpler to use than any other anti-freeze. It does not require the special adjustment and tightening of the motor needed with most other anti-freeze preparations.

Let your dealer put Denatured Alcohol in your radiator today (he knows the correct amount), and get from him an additional supply to keep in your garage for emergency use.

Use it early enough
*Use it often enough
Use it late enough

This takes the guesswork out of Anti-freeze protection

The Alco-Tester instantly shows the lowest temperature at which your car is protected against freezing. appeared and filed their notices with the board.

Mehrl Kent, Beausoliel, and Tourtellotte closed their session at exactly four o'clock this afternoon, as was previously announced, with but two taxpayers in their office. During the day several entered the office to file notices, but were not in great numbers as was expected.

The Guerin Mills company, owners of the Beachmont worsted mill and the village of company houses in Mechanicsville, according to letters sent to the few tenants living in the little village, are to dispose of their residential property by offering them for sale to the tenants. Agents of the company are now in the village to dispose of the property. There is no authentic information available, but it is rumored that dwellings not sold at private offerings will later be sold at public auction.

The village of Mechanicsville, is situated in the town of Thompson and grew up about the Sayles mill, now owned by the Guerin mills. The manufacturing plant stopped its wheels a few years ago, and as the majority of the citizens of the community were textile workers and depended upon the mill, were forced to seek employment elsewhere and consequently removed to other cities and towns. The agents of the mill being in the village to dispose of the dwelling houses does in no way mean a sale of the large mill.

Vandale of this city, in St. Mary's church, on Oct. 29. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Ernest J. Boileau, curate at St. Mary's church.

The republicans of the town of Putnam are to afford the French members of their party an opportunity to hear campaign speeches from leading officials of the state delivered in the French tongue, at a rally to be held in St. John's hall on Providence street Friday evening. Attorney Harry S. Gaucher of Willimantic will be the first speaker of the evening. Mr. Gaucher addressed a French-English audience at a recent rally in Putnam and was highly received. Mr. Gaucher is an able orator and has been in demand since early in the campaign.

The committee in charge of the rally have also secured the services of another French republican leader, Hon. Philip Arard of Springfield. Mr. Arard is a former office holder, and will repeat his recent successes as a speaker in Putnam tomorrow evening.

BIG REPUBLICAN RALLY ROUSES ENTHUSIASM

At a largely attended and enthusiastic republican rally held in Finn Opera house, Wednesday evening, the platform was attractive with its settings of wicker furniture, baskets of chrysanthemums, palms and ferns. The American flag was conspicuous, and Hoover pictures bordered the front of the stage. Swahn's orchestra of Norwich gave a fine concert program. State's Attorney Arthur M. Brown was the presiding officer. His opening speech, as were all those following, free from any criticism of any other candidate. He said that this country faces the solution of many economic and national problems, and passions and prejudices should not influence the voters. They should not be swept away by sham issues. His unbiased belief is that Herbert Hoover by education, training and experience can best help in the solution of these problems. He expressed his appreciation of Manager John Barnett's fine spirit in offering the use of the Opera House for the rally. After singing The Star Spangled Banner by the audience, ex-Mayor Norman Stevens of Hartford, who has twice been elected to that office was introduced. Mayor Stevens stated that he appeared not as a seeker for any public office, but because he believed in the republican party and Herbert Hoover, its candidate for the presidency. He believed in Hoover's fitness for president because he understands humanity, is known for his happy faculty of bringing groups together to iron out difficulties with a spirit of cooperation. He understands, through his wide experience in other countries, the aims and aspirations of various peoples. His opinions are given just consideration by all the courts of the world. He is better fitted to work out world peace than any other man in the country.

After a selection by the orchestra, Miss Doris Myott, accompanied by Miss Margaret Jordan sang My Own United States, receiving prolonged applause. Attorney Brown, at this point, paid a tribute to the touch of woman in politics, as was shown in the arrangement of the platform. He then introduced Joseph Kulas of Hartford, who spoke to the Polish people in their own tongue, in a remarkable flow of language, delivered with fervid dignity. Attorney Brown spoke the mind of everyone present when he said it was one of the best speeches he ever heard. Although he could not understand the words, it had wonderful spirit. Mr. Kulas has been appointed in Washington and is an organizer of Polish republican clubs in this state. Mr. Tilon of Hartford spoke in Mr. Erard's place, the latter being unable to be present. He spoke to the French people in their language, another fine speech as was evidenced by their applause.

Mrs. Edith B. Cook of New Haven, a representative to the state legislature and a candidate to the state legislature and a candidate for reelection, said that the most important job in this country is to bring up children for the next generation and the women will have it to do. Hoover organized the Child Health association in this country and it is one of his chief interests. The chairman introduced Robert J. Guy and Mrs. Marie H. Ballou, the two town republican chairmen who are filling their offices so acceptably. He also presented Miss Margery Brewster, the charming young woman nominated for representative. Miss Brewster responded with a few words of appreciation for the honor conferred on her. The singing of America closed the rally.

The Knights of Columbus held their first whist party of the season Wednesday evening in the council rooms with the following winners: Ladies, first, Antoinette Poulin; second, Irene Brisson; consolation, Mrs. Bernard; gentlemen, first, Joseph Couture; second, James Morey; consolation, Eli Perry.

Borough officials are indignant at the lawlessness of children on Halloween. Five police were stationed in the vicinity of Main street, but in the other parts of the town thirteen electric lights were broken, five of them on East Main street. The offer of $25 reward for information for such acts will be enforced regardless if the names of the boys are given to the authorities.

ELEVEN CHURCHES SEND DELEGATES TO MEETING

At the semi-annual meeting of the New London Association of Congregational Churches and Ministers held in the Second Congregational church Tuesday, Rev. Charles H. Ricketts of Norwich was moderator. The scribe, Dr. James H. Weeks, read the minutes. Eleven churches answered the roll call with pastors and delegates. Reports of the churches were read by Rev. Gurdon F. Bailey of Norwich Town. The address of the morning session was delivered by Rev. J. Beveridge Lee, D. D., whose topic was "Ought the Church to Ignore a Great Moral Question When It Becomes a Political Issue?" Rev. A. H. Abbott of Norwich led a short devotional service before the meeting adjourned.

The Ladies' Aid society of the church served dinner to more than 100 delegates. The after dinner speech was delivered by Roscoe W. Vining of New Haven, superintendent of the Conn. Temperance and Anti-Saloon league. Rev. Dwight C. Stone of Hanover opened the afternoon session with prayer. The principal address of the afternoon was delivered by Dr. Lucius Porter of China. His topic was "The Present Outlook in China". The session closed with benediction by Rev. Charles H. Ricketts, Mrs. Dwight C. Stone, Dr. Henry W. Hulbert of Groton and Dr. James H. Weeks were elected delegates to the national conference to be held in Detroit in May 1929.

Richard S. Herman was a visitor in Boston Wednesday.

The semi-annual installation of Nina circle, No. 149, Daughters of Isabella is to be held Sunday, Nov. 4 at 3 p. m. in the K. of C. home. The state regent and suite will officiate. A banquet will be served following the meeting.

Peter Lopes Dead

Word was received here Tuesday of the death of Peter Lopes at St. Michael's in the Azore Islands, Sept. 26th. He was a resident of Stonington and three years ago returned to his native land with his wife. He is survived by a son, John Lopes who was called to the Azores by the serious illness of his father arriving there two weeks before his death.

Edward Farnam of New York is spending a few days here with relatives.

Miss Cecelia Gilmore of Hartford is the guest of relatives in the borough.

An alarm was sounded from Box 18 on Wednesday at 11.15 p. m. bringing out the three companies who were unable to find a fire. The alarm was possibly rung in as part of the Hallowe'en celebration by the boys of the borough.

Preference

I like the plain and common folks
That make the world go 'round,
The cheerful, sympathetic folks
That stand upon the ground,
And never grow to be so wise
That they're above the rest—
The common, good, ambitious folks
Are those that I like best!

They always have a word to lend,
A smile, a friendly hand;
They realize the needs of life;
They seem to understand
Our whims and fancies and desires;
They're glad to lend their cheer
To brighten the unpleasant hours
That we must weather here.

They're neighborly and generous;
They never fear or fret
That some one else is gathering
The needs they ought to get;
They are broadminded people
With sundry cares and trials;
They scatter bliss and wholesomeness
Along life's many miles.

Burgess Bedtime Story

Thoughtful Farmer Brown's Boy

By Thornton W. Burgess

Think of others if you would Find in life the joy you should.
—Farmer Brown's Boy.

Farmer Brown's Boy is nothing if not thoughtful. He always has his eyes open for his little friends of the Green Forest, the Old Orchard and the Green Meadows. So it was that he spied Happy Jack Squirrel in the Old Orchard. He noticed how Happy Jack was going from tree to tree.

"I do believe Happy Jack is looking for a hole in which to make a nest," said Farmer Brown's Boy. "I believe he has decided to leave the Green Forest and come over here. Nuts are pretty scarce this year and I guess Happy Jack has decided that he'll fare better if he stays around here. But he won't find a hole in any of those apple trees. No, sir, he won't find a hole big enough for him to make his home in. Now we'll have to do something about it. Yes, sir, we'll have to do something about it."

Farmer Brown's Boy waited to see if Happy Jack would build a big nest of leaves, as he sometimes does. But that wasn't what Happy Jack was looking for for a home. He could do it if he had to. He likes a summer home of this kind and he could spend the winter in one if it were necessary. But he much preferred to find a hollow tree, or to get inside a building. So he made no attempt to build a nest.

Then Farmer Brown's Boy took a good-sized box, covered it with tarred paper to make it dry and warm, made a hole in it big enough for Happy Jack to use and carried the whole thing out to a maple tree in the dooryard. Up in a crotch of this maple tree he fastened this box so securely that no wind could shake it down.

Up in the crotch of this maple tree he fastened this box so securely that no wind could shake it down

"There," said he to Happy Jack, who was watching from a short distance away, "there's a house for you. If you are a wise Squirrel you'll take possession of it before some one else does."

Happy Jack didn't wait for Farmer Brown's Boy to get to the barn door. In fact, Farmer Brown's Boy had hardly turned his back before Happy Jack was up in that maple tree. First he inspected the new house outside. He went all over it. He didn't think much of that tarred paper. He didn't like the smell of it particularly well. Then he tried his teeth on it and he didn't like the taste of it. Of course, he didn't understand that that tarred paper was to make his house dry and warm and comfortable.

Then Happy Jack poked his head inside. For some few minutes he didn't venture in, but was satisfied just to look around. Then he went in. Once inside, he forgot all about the tarred paper on the outside. That house was just the right size. It wasn't too big and it wasn't too small.

"It's just exactly right!" declared Happy Jack. "I do believe Farmer Brown's Boy put it up just for me. It couldn't be better. All I have to do to make it perfect is to make a good bed in here, and that I'll do right away. I never had a better home."

Out popped Happy Jack, and Farmer Brown's Boy, watching, saw him come hurrying back with some dry leaves which he at once took inside. Farmer Brown's Boy chuckled. "That settles that!" said he. "I've got a tenant for that house right away."

Happy Jack wasted no time. He hurried about this way and that way looking for material for his bed, and it wasn't long before he had that house pretty well filled. "My!" exclaimed Happy Jack, "I'm glad I left the Green Forest!"

Mr. and Mrs. Lewis M. Young and Mr. and Mrs. George W. Dolbeare of Norwich, with Dr. and Mrs. Harvey Irekell of Pennsylvania, spent the past week at their island camps on Lake Mashapaug. Those who have summered at the lake seem to find it hard to leave the pleasant life there. Mr. and Mrs. Grant Foster of Worcester, Mass., continue to return for week ends. G. W. Wellington broke camp recently after a long season, and hoped to come out from Watertown, Mass., for a week end.

Tuesday morning, Oct. 30, was the coldest of the season to date, mercury varying from 16 to 26 degrees, and the ground well crusted in spots. Unprotected cosmos and pansies had been beautiful up to that morning.

Mr. and Mrs. Levi Boynton of Longmeadow, Mass., and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Crosby of Niantic recently visited their uncle, Charles R. Webster, and family.

The schools here were closed Oct. 26, as the teachers, Miss Grace Robinson and Miss Helen Carlson, went to Hartford to attend the state teachers' convention. From Hartford they went to their respective homes in Worcester and Holden Mass., for the week end.

The date for the next meeting of Mashapaug Lake grange is Wednesday evening, Nov. 7.

The local librarian, Mrs. Henry A. Coolidge, in company with Miss Mabel Meyers of the library at Stanford Springs, attended the meetings of the Connecticut Library association Oct. 25 and 26, at the Burroughs library in Bridgeport. This is a new and beautiful building with a staff of 60 members.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Armitage of Ellington were guests of Mrs. Ida G. Moore Sunday last, stopping on their way to attend the funeral of Miss Maria Hiscox in Woodstock Valley. Miss Hiscox was a sister of the late Oliver Hiscox.

Mrs. Howard G. Barber has been spending a few days in Hartford with her daughter, Mrs. Walter Turning, and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Adelbert Agard, their sons, Loomis and Lester, and their daughter, Miss Ruth, were guests last Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Harlow in Westford and of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Buck in Warrenville.

We have long talked of neckwear, headwear and footwear, and now an optician advertises "eyewear." Probably we shall presently have jewelers advertising rings as "finerwear," dentists false teeth as "mouthwear" and druggists cornplasters as "toewear."—Exchange

GREAT INCREASE IN BROKER'S LOANS FAILED TO CHECK RISE IN STOCK PRICES

NEW YORK, Nov. 1—(AP)—The stock market checked its retreat today and again started forward with a firm pace, despite the enormous increase in broker' loans of $181,000,000 announced after the close, which carried the federal reserve total to a new high record of more than $4,900,000,000 in contract to $4,270,000,000 a year ago.

Rumors that the federal reserve figures would show a substantial increase spread about Wall street during the day, but was offset as a market factor by a seemingly inexhaustible supply of call money at 7 1-2 per cent. Some $30,000,000 in loans were called during the day, but the funds were easily replaced from other sources.

The increase was vastly larger than had been expected, however. When the call money rate held at 7 1-2 per cent yesterday and banks were reported to be paying off their indebtedness at the reserve bank in the face of the huge month-end dividend and interest disbursements, there was talk in banking circles that the figures would show a decrease.

There was considerable selling during the day, but it dwindled out toward the close and in the last hour the market took on a decidedly bullish aspect This indicated that the pre-election ligatening of accounts had generally been accomplished, as well as large post distributions, which have been in progress for the past few days.

A firmer tone in the rails was an outstanding feature. Union Pacific led the advance with a spurt of more than 8 points, selling up to 209 1-2, the highest price in about 20 years, in expectation of distribution of some of its non-rail assets, Canadian Pacific, Pittsburgh & West Virginia, Delaware & Hudson, St. Louis Southwestern, and New York Central went ahead 1 to 4 1-2 points.

The electrification program of the Pennsylvania, announced last evening, had a negligible effect upon the stock of the railroad, but resulted in a wide upturn in the stocks of equipment manufacturers which may benefit. Westinghouse sold up more than 3 points, and General Electric made a 3-point gain. Public Service of New Jersey, which will provide part of the power, sold up more than 2 points at one time.

Coppers as a group again lept forward. Anaconda and Granby stepped up about a point to new peak prices, and Kennecott sold up nearly 3 points to a new top at 126 5-8, while Greene Cananea made an extreme gain of nearly 3 points. International Nickel was again a strong point, climbing 4 3-4 points to a new record price at 198 1-4, but cancelling most of its gain in realizing.

American Express made a spectacular advance of 27 points to a record price at 280, and American Radiator extended its gain by about 6 points. Barnet Leather jumped ahead 13 points.

The automotive group made good recovery, General Motors going ahead more than 4 points, and Briggs Manufacturing and Chrysler about 3 points. Graham-Paige, however, yielded about a point.

Merchandising shares responded to announcement of good increases in mail order sales in October. Montgomery Ward made an extreme gain of 6 1-2 points, and Sears Roebuck of nearly 4 points. First National Stores jumped more than 3 points to a new high at 57 1-2.

Oils also rallied, American Republics, Atlantic Refining, and Pan-american pushing up more than 3 points. Other strong points were Dupont, up 12, Shubert Theatre, up about 7 to a new peak, A. M. Byers, International Harvester, Jewel Tea and Columbia Gas & Electric, up about 5 points each.

A few issues closed lower, including Abitibi preferred, Brunswik Terminal and Adams Express, down about 3 points. Western Union yielded more than 2 points to profit taking, but regained half of it.

The commodity markets were generally steady, cotton improving slightly on further reports of unfavorable weather. Foreign exchanges were also steady, with sterling rates unchanged.

SOME HALLOWEEN SPORT AND SOME MISCHIEF

Halloween night in the village the children started to gather in front of Mrs. Jane Carson's on Main street dressed in all kinds of costumes, ghosts and Santa Claus, black cats and all. By 8 o'clock 125 young and old helped make Halloween night lively. Automobiles had a hard job not to run anybody down. The parade had tin pans for music. It is claimed that several ties were put across the road on Elm street so the automobiles could not pass. One unlucky driver had two blowouts going over those ties and it meant a new tube.

Alden Brooks is having cement walks laid at his property on Pearl street and a wall is being built in front of the house.

Elihu Rathbun, who is planning a new lunch room was head cook in a hotel for two years, then was on Steamer General Grant as steward on trips to France, England and Germany.

Rev. D. Dorchester of Hartford was a recent caller at Groton Long Point.

The curtain is pulled down at Groton Long Point for the season of 1929. The post office people have locked the doors until next May. The water will be shut off by the Groton Point Water Co. men and the lights will be turned off leaving the point in darkness. About four families stay the year round, and Capt. and Mrs. Allen of New York are going to stay and brave the cold of the winter. Two new cottages are all getting their finishing touches. The roads will be put in shape by Road Commissioner W. O. Wheeler for the heavy trucks loaded with lumber that come to the point in the winter put the roads in bad shape. Commissioner Wheeler was foreman several years ago in Massachusetts on big road jobs.

Wednesday the fishing fleet had 40 barrels of flatfish from over ten boats. The boat June Bug, Capt. Slim Moran got only three fish. Capt. Moran forgot his glasses on Wednesday morning when he left for the fishing grounds. He was fishing away when Boat 9 spot, Capt. O. Sameon in charge, saw that Capt. Moran had his net upside down and the fish would go back into the ocean. The captain was mad fishing with his net upside down all day. That is a good joke for the fishermen's book. Fulton market is low and a barrel of fish is cheap, bringing only a few dollars. Several fishermen did not make enough to buy gasoline for their boats.

Howard Brown spent the day at Potter Hill.

CHESTNUT HILL

Mrs. G. B. Dimon and son, Richard Dimon, motored to Oxford, Mass., on Sunday and visited Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Reynolds.

Mr. and Mrs. Llewellyn Latham of Providence spent the week end with the former's sister, Miss Mildred Latham.

Mrs. Christy Oehlers entertained the past week her two sisters, also her niece and brother-in-law from New York city.

Mrs. Mary A. Davoll of New Bedford was a guest at Calmere a few days last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Schweitzer and family visited relatives at Deep River Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. LeGrande Chappell and little daughter were recent callers at G. B. Dimon's.

The thermometer has registered 18 degrees above zero here two mornings the past week—unusually cold for October.

HANDSOME FAREWELL GIFTS FOR OVERSEER DAVIGNON

October, 2003, when Edmond Davignon resigned as overseer in carding room of Lawton mill, which he had held for twelve years, he was presented a Hamilton gold watch and chain by his employes.

He was also presented a very fine leather traveling bag and Waterman fountain pen by his associate overseers.

The M. M. club enjoyed a Hallowe'en party at the home of Miss Harriet Chapman. The rooms were elaborately decorated. The guests were escorted into the house by a ghost.

At eight thirty the paraders in costume walked past the judges, Mrs. George Babcock, Mrs. Clarence Peirce and Mrs. Henry Randall. A prize for the funniest costume was won by the twins, Miss Teresa Sullivan and Mrs. John Kinsley. Bridge was played, the prizes being won by Mrs. John C. Kingsley, Mrs. Walter Lathrop and Mrs. Irving Flagg. The hostess assisted by her sister Mrs. Henry Randall served sandwiches, cake, cookies and coffee.

EASTERN VOLUNTOWN

Mrs. William Bitgood and James Church went to Sterling Hill Friday to see her sister, Mrs. Kenyon, and niece, Annie Bitgood. It was Annie's birthday. While there Mr. Church went to Oneco. When they started for home they met a party going to give Annie a surprise and sure they did. They were the Sterling Hill ladies and there were 13 of them and Mrs. Bitgood and Mr. Church made 15. Mrs. Bitgood hadn't been to Mrs. Kenyon's for a long while. Mrs. Kenyon is Mrs. Bitgood's sister. She said if she had known the party was going to see Annie she would have liked to have met with them.

Mr. Bitgood and Mr. Church were in Jewett City Saturday.

Miss Lizzie Maynard spent Friday with her sister, Mrs. Warren Tanner on Ekonk Hill.

Jefferson Barber and Winfield Moran were in Oneco recently.

Mr. and Mrs. William Bitgood did not have any visitors Sunday but Sunday evening their son and wife came from Pachaug, and Mr. Green and grandson from Eastern Voluntown and spent the evening.

James Church went to his sister's Saturday night and back Sunday. His sister lives in Thornton, R. I.

Mrs. Lee Remington is getting her new home ready to move into. They have been waiting a long time to get there. She is getting the rooms ready to paint and paper. She will have a nice home when she gets it cleaned.

Monday evening Mrs. Bitgood had a telephone. The party asked her if she wanted to hear Smith speak. She said she did. She told the lady that is with her to start the radio but before she started it she heard one on Sterling Hill as plain as if in her own home. They got their radio going and heard Mr. Smith's talk. Mrs. Bitgood was very interested.

Mr. Mony of Escoheag Hill and Mr. Gordon of Rockville, R. I., were at Mr. Bitgood's mill with apples recently.

Monday night was the coldest night we have had this fall. When Mrs. Bitgood got up Tuesday morning there was ice on her sitting room windows.

The 2d cavalry was the only American cavalry in the world war.

BOARD MUST DECIDE ON SANATORIUM PATIENTS

In an opinion announced Thursday by Attorney General Ailing concerning the right of patients at the Norwich tuberculosis sanatorium, Uncas-on-Thames, to vote, the attorney-general tells C. J. Mr. Downes said many of these patients would be at the sanatorium for some years to come, and many had been there over a year, but were not admitted yet as electors because of a possible residence in other towns. With the information furnished him, Mr. Ailing could hand down no specific decisions regarding these patients.

PRIZES AT MASQUERADE AT UNCAS-ON-THAMES

The annual halloween masquerade held at Uncas-on-Thames Wednesday evening proved a decided success in every respect. The attendance was perhaps not as large as it had been in previous years, but with the numerous guests, patients and staff in costume the resulting assembly provided a truly gala array. Gathering in the appropriately decorated patients' dining hall, while the orchestra furnished music for marching, the parade passed in review before the judges consisting of Lieut. Gilman, Mr. Danz and Mr. Drudy of the New London Elks. Ladies prizes were awarded to Catherine Loveland for the most attractive costume, Miss Clara Christoph for the most grotesque costume, Miss Lillian Cating for the most original and consolation to Miss Mann and Miss Bresnan. Gentlemen's prizes went to John Paglia for the most attractive, J. Dugan, most original, and J. MacAurelle, for the most ridiculous. Refreshments of doughnuts, cider and apples followed. Music and favors were provided by the N'ew London order of Elks. Decorations were attended to by J. Kelley and capable corps of assistants.

NORWICH GRANGE MASQUERADE CROWDED SCOTLAND HALL

One of the largest gatherings ever held at Scotland Road hall, took place Wednesday evening, when Norwich grange, No. 172, Patrons of Husbandry and friends, assembled at the hall, for a masquerade dance and halloween social. The hall was so crowded, several present expressed the thought that never before had any grange gathering numbered so many. There were clowns, milk maids, Indians, gypsies, Chinese maidens, Egyptian soldiers, sailors, Spaniards, also a jockey, witch, Lord Fauntleroy and Sun Bonnett Sue among the different characters impersonated. The grand march was led by Worthy Master Albert Lillibridge and Worthy Lecturer Mrs. William Merray, the latter chairman of the committees in charge. The proceeds are to go toward the building fund, for a home for Norwich grange.

Swahn's orchestra furnished music for the dancing and Edward Tinkham of Hanover prompted for the old-fashioned square dances. Pumpkin pies, apple pies, cheese, doughnuts, cider, apples and soda were on sale during the evening. The hall was decorated with corn stalks, black and yellow streamers, pumpkins and Hallowe'en lanterns.

The prizes were awarded as follows: First ladies, Lord Fauntleroy, Mrs. Murphy; first gentlemen's, a typical witch, finely impersonated, John Olsen; funniest ladies' costume, prize, Mrs. William Walker and for the funniest gentlemens costume, Lee Coles was presented the trophy.

ALL SAINTS' DAY SERVICES AT ST. PATRICK'S CHURCH

The feast of All Saints was observed in St. Patrick's church by large congregations at the masses Thursday morning at 5, 7 and 8 o'clock. The last was a low mass read by the rector, Rt. Rev. Msgr. M. H. May, who required the assistance of Rev. John J. Reilly in giving holy communion. The music during the mass was directed by Organist Henry L. LaFontaine, solos by Mrs. Bernard M. Coyle and Roderick F. Sullivan with Miss Blanche Lepre and Miss Margaret Sullivan singing in the chorus numbers. "Benedictus" was a beautiful number by Mr. Sullivan, Mr. LaFontaine joining for the duet and Mrs. Coyle completing the trio. At communion, Mr. LaFontaine played Flagler's composition introducing "O, Come Let Us Adore Him," with its very effective registration an Amjestic handling of the theme and this he played also as the recessional.

Today, Nov. 2nd, the feast of All Souls, the masses will be at 5:30, 7 and 8 o'clock, in commemoration of the faithful departed. There will also be the usual first Friday devotions in honor of the Sacred Heart of Jesus.

TWO NORWICH PEOPLE PINNED UNDER AUTOMOBILE

WESTERLY, R. I., Nov. 1—(AP)—Teaching a young woman to drive a car may cost Joseph Hoffman of Norwich, Conn., his life. Hoffman is in a critical condition in Westerly hospital. His pupil, Miss Mary Walulik, also of Norwich, is in the hospital seriously injured.

The automobile in which the lesson was being given upset in a ditch west of North Stonington this afternoon. Miss Walulik and Hoffman were pinned beneath it. Hoffman said the accident occurred when the car struck a rough spot in the road, and the young woman apparently stepped on the gas instead of on the brake.

Hoffman resides at 178 Hickory street in this city and has been employed in surveying work with the state highway department, it is understood. Miss Walulik resides at 28 Cove street.

Judge John Richards Booth, in the superior court at New London Thursday, ordered the sale of 2,000 acres of land in Voluntown and Griswold to settle an estate in trust, in the case of Rosa S. Wilcox, Jessie R. Wilcox, Kirk H. Wilcox, all of Woodbury, Raymond G. Wilcox, of Woodhaven L. I., all trustees under the trust deed of William P. Babcock to Martha R. Wilcox, against John H. Wilcox, Betty Fay Wilcox, of Woodhaven, and Helen Ann Wilcox of Windsor.

A sale was asked for by the plaintiffs, John H. Wilcox and Betty Fay Wilcox and children of Raymond G Wilcox and are the beneficiaries. Helen Ann Wilcox, daughter of Calvin E. Orders for the attorneys to file briefs were given by Judge John Richards Booth in the superior court at New London in the $1,000 damage and possession suit of Manuel and Clara G. Pereira of Stonington against Joseph Vargas, also of Stonington, to file briefs.

The Pereiras claim that on Jan. 1, 1914, they owned and still hold title to property in Stonington, known as Fellows Mill place, which comprises 105 acres of land, a dwelling house, grist mill and other buildings.

They further claim that Vargas on the date mentioned entered upon the premises, and, dispossessed the plaintiffs, depriving them of the use, occupancy and enjoyment of the land and of $200 annually in rents.

Joseph Rose and Clara Pereira testified for the plaintiff, and the defense witnesses were Herbert West, John Sylvia, Joseph Harvey, Joseph Nunes, Charles F. Champlin, James H. Lord, Frank A. Vargas, Mertan B. Lewis Jr. Joseph Vargas and Leslie Thurber.

JUDGE RESERVES DECISION IN ADMINISTRATOR'S SUIT

A misunderstanding of the zoning law of Norwich, which is alleged to have caused Thomas J. Dodd, administrator, to put $600 on the rental of a store at the corner of Boath and North Cliff streets, is the basis of a suit brought by Dodd against Joseph Sobanski, and others, which was tried before Judge John Richards Booth in the superior court at New London Thursday.

The plaintiff claims that the zoning law only went into effect a short time before he put down his money, intending to operate a grocery store at a location prohibited by the new law.

Judge Booth reserved decision. Attorneys Brown and James appeared for the plaintiff and Attorneys Kelly and Quinn for the defendants.

GAVE HELPFUL TALK ON DISCIPLINING CHILDREN

Miss Hester Crutcher continued on Thursday at the Wauregan hotel her weekly talks before the Norwich Mental Hygiene society in which an increasing number of women interested in the better understanding of children are finding helpful instruction.

Her subject was "Discipline—Destructive, Constructive or What?" In questions of discipline, parents and teachers, she said, often administer the obvious easy punishment rather than consider what will be for the child's future good. Thought should be given to helping the child build up desirable habits of conduct. To ignore wisely some of the child's misbehaviors; to act positively and immediately when punishment seems necessary; to administer reproof and then be done with it and so let the atmosphere clear at once are points to be observed. Psychological punishment may be as effective as corporal. Wise foresight may often forestall the need of any punishment. At all times the child should realize that the parent has his real good at heart.

Miss Crutcher's address was followed by discussion and questions and the announcement was made that next week's would be postponed for a fortnight, until Nov. 15.

RAIN FAILED TO DAMPEN THE ARDOR OF SMITH ADHERENTS

Democratic Nominee Was Cheered and Cheered by the Thousands Who Lined Broadway and the Other Thoroughfares in New York Over Which the Procession Passed—Gov. Smith in His Speech in Brooklyn Stressed the Fact That Orderly Administration of State Affairs Rests Essentially Upon the Same Basis as the Handling of the Business of the Federal Government—Praised the Character and Ability of His Running Mate, Senator Robinson—Urged Election of Franklin D. Roosevelt as Governor of New York.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Nov. 2—(AP)—Gov. Alfred E. Smith in a speech tonight directed specifically to a New York state audience declared that Albert Ottinger, the republican gubernatorial nominee, could cease to worry over prohibition as "I will take care of that subject, by and with the advice of the American people."

The democratic nominee said Mr. Ottinger, now attorney-general of the Empire state had been carrying "water on both shoulders."

"The attitude of the republican candidate on the question of prohibition can be summed up in a few words," the governor declared. "He is a wet dry. He has attempted to be all things to all men.

"On his subject his party platform is as silent as the tomb. He is constantly worrying, day in and day out, as to how he can get over the campaign without being compelled to have anything to say about it.

"In one of his speeches he said that he would pass that whole question up until the commission appointed by Mr. Hoover had dealt with it.

"Well, I will relieve him of all doubt and worry about that by informing him here tonight in Brooklyn that Mr. Hoover will never have any opportunity to appoint any commission on that subject. I will take care of that subject, by and with the advice of the American people."

The governor's speech tonight, scheduled to go on the air at 10 p. m. over a nation-wide radio hook-up, climaxed a busy day during which the nominee was escorted through the heart of New York's business district at the head of a long automobile procession.

Thousands Viewed Procession

The democratic nominee, as the procession moved slowly through the canyon of skyscrapers, was cheered and cheered by the thousands who lined Broadway and the other thoroughfares over which he passed.

Rain fell virtually all of the time and through this and a storm of flying paper and ticker tape, the nominee smiled back to the people on the streets and from whom, for years, he has received heavy support in his many campaigns for office. "It was a wonderful reception and once again old New York has shown its affection for me," he declared when it was over.

The governor at the outset of his speech tonight said that while he proposed to devote most of his address to New York state affairs that he was conscious he was speaking to the nation and would attempt to relate his remarks as much as possible to national activities.

"After all, the proper and orderly administration of state affairs," he said, "rests essentially upon the same basis as the handling of the business of the federal government."

He told his audience he had been traveling for six weeks throughout the nation and as long as he lived he would "always cherish the welcome I received from millions of my fellow countrymen."

"The warm and affectionate greeting in every city, village and hamlet," he continued, "will always be a treasured remembrance of the campaign of 1928.

Thanks Senator Robinson

"Closing the campaign in my own state, conscious that I am speaking to the nation, I desire to say a word of thanks to Senator Robinson. While I have not met him since last summer I have followed his campaign closely, and I am deeply impressed by the fact that the democratic national convention gave me a most worthy running mate, one who has demonstrated his character, his capacity and his ability during his long and distinguished public career."

He said that "no man in the history of the state has had as great reason to be grateful to its people as I have had."

"They have honored me even beyond my own hopes," he went on. "Actuated by a spirit of gratitude, I naturally feel a keen desire that the state continue to progress and that our people, from Buffalo to Montauk Point, continue to derive the full and complete benefit of a well-organized, responsive, intelligent and forward-looking government.

"I therefore welcomed with great satisfaction the nomination of Franklin D. Roosevelt. During my governorship I have had his vigorous and hearty support. I shall hand over the reins of the state government on Jan. 1, and I know of no man to whom I would sooner turn them over than to Franklin D. Roosevelt."

He declared the democratic party was wise in its selection of Col. Herbert H. Lehman for lieutenant-governor and that he thought his party had performed a distinct service "in nominating Albert Conway for the attorney-general's office." He likewise urged the re-election of United States Senator Copeland, the election of Morris S. Tremaine for the state's comptroller's office, as well as all other candidates on the democratic ticket.

On water power, the governor said the state of New York had been blessed with natural resources and the democratic party had taken the position that these were the property of the people and should be developed by the state under state ownership and state control.

"If you want the benefits of state water power development," he added, "you cannot look to the republican candidate. You will have to look to Franklin Roosevelt."

Record on Agriculture

The governor attacked the republican state record on agriculture and said, "This time every year the republican party is busily engaged in explaining that it is the great friend of the farmer."

He charged the opposition party with failure to make any appropriations for the slaughter of tubercular cattle and said when he was returned to office in 1922 he had to make provision to make up a deficit left over as a result of republican neglect.

"The American farmer is awakening to the fact," he continued, "that the republican party has been engaged in the political pastime of making promises to him. As Senator Norris of Nebraska said, what the farmer wants today is a little slice of fulfillment; he has been fed to death on broken republican promises."

Calls Ottinger "Poll Parrot"

Governor Smith said he could readily understand that the republican candidate for governor would feel compelled to poll-parrot what is being said around the nation about the federal finances and their comparison with the finances of New York."

"He says that under the wise leadership of President Coolidge," the governor went on, "the cost in the nation has been reduced from five billions to three billions. Where did I hear that before?

"That is the echo cry of Under-Secretary Mills," repeated by Mr. Hoover himself: although they all know that this reduction represents the difference between the cost of the government in a time of war and in a time of peace.

"If the republican leaders of the legislature had their way about it, the government in the last ten years would have cost the people of this state much more than it did.

"I am amused at his suggestion that he would wipe from the statute books the personal income tax. And he refers to it as a war measure. That is certainly a leading example of his lack of understanding of the state's fiscal system.

"I cannot restrain a smile when I hear him talk about eliminating the direct property tax.

"The republican candidate is not a stranger to Albany. If he is sincere in his expression about spending money in connection with the government of the state of New York, let him give the people a little bill of fare."

Governor Smith said when he went to Albany in 1919 the school appropriation amounted to $9,000,000 and that this year the appropriation was $88,000,000, and demanded to know if Mr. Ottinger would say he proposed to reduce this expenditure.

"He won't do it," the governor declared. "I challenge him."

Misrepresentation of Finances

The democratic nominee argued that nothing "lends itself so readily to misrepresentation as state finances."

"To say that the cost of the government of the state is increasing does not mean anything," he added, "because the cost of the government of every state is increasing, the cost of the government of every municipality is increasing and, in fact, the cost of operating the federal government has increased under President Coolidge, notwithstanding the false picture that the republican party has attempted to paint.

"In my speech at Sedalia in the state of Missouri I pointed out to the American people that the cost of running the municipality at Washington, operated by the federal government, has increased since 1914 100 per cent. The cost of the federal government between 1924 and 1928 has increased by two hundred million dollars.

"And in keeping with the pledge that I made to the American people when I entered upon this campaign of talking out honestly and frankly and fearlessly to them, I make this prediction: No matter who is elected governor of New York state on the sixth of November, the cost of the government will increase next year."

The governor also attacked the republican state record on a number of other questions and wound up by saying that "for me this is not so much a question of party victory."

"I make this plea earnestly and sincerely in a spirit of gratitude," he concluded, "to the men and women who, regardless of political affiliations have supported me and stood behind the policies I have advocated. Having in mind the best interests of this state, I strongly urge the people not to take a backward step, but to go forward and to maintain and progress the high standards which now prevail by electing Franklin D. Roosevelt and the entire democratic ticket."

PROMOTING HOOVER AS A POLITICAL PANAGON

DAYTON, O., Nov. 2—(AP)—In typical Al Smith fashion, Senator Joe T. Robinson "called the roll" of republican leaders tonight in an attempt to show that Herbert Hoover was not acceptable to some republicans, particularly those who were most closely associated with the farm relief fight in congress, prior to the Kansas City convention.

"This campaign," the democratic vice presidential nominee said, "conducted under the leadership of Dr. Work, has been designed to create a fictitious personality—a Hoover endowed with magical powers and adorned by a halo. Some who are now eulogizing Mr. Hoover as a political paragon took quite a different view of his abilities before his nomination.

"Let us see what Senator Curtis, Hoover's running mate, had to say. Referring to Mr. Hoover, he declared: 'The convention cannot afford to nominate any one for whom the party will be on the defensive from the day he is named until the polls close.'

"And now, let us call some Ohio statesmen. Call Senator Fess. Speaking of Mr. Hoover, he said the republican party 'will demand a leader whose Americanism is not in question and whose political views are not a matter of speculation.'

"Call Congressman Brand of Ohio. Here is what he said: 'Mr. Hoover has been the supreme opponent of agricultural prosperity for the past ten years. His election would mean agriculture is doomed to eight years more of misery.'

"And here is what one of the most prominent republican women, Mrs. McCormick of Illinois, declared: 'We have not agreed on any candidate to push for the nomination after Hoover is blocked. Our whole object is to clear the field for a republican who can win.'"

Senator Robinson also "called" Senator Norbeck of South Dakota and Senator Nye of North Dakota, both republicans, who were quoted by the nominee with remarks attacking Hoover. And finally he called Senator Borah, to whom he accredited the statement that Hoover did not know the existence of tax payers in this country while he was food administrator.

WITNESS ARRESTED IN A PERJURY CHARGE

CHICAGO, Nov. 2—(AP)—The court room of Judge John M. O'Connor was thrown into a flurry of excitement late today when a defense witness in the trial of 16 alleged henchmen of Morris Eller, city collector, for election conspiracy, was arrested on a perjury charge.

The witness, Anthony Sparks, was stopped by a policeman as he stepped to the door of the courtroom. The defense had sought to show by his testimony that Pete Pacelli, accused as the kidnaper of a political foe, had actually been friendly with him.

BINGHAM PREDICTS AIR PORTS IN ALL BIG CITIES

NEW YORK, Nov. 1—(AP)—A prediction that every first class city in the country would have an airport within three years to secure the benefits which will come from growth of commercial aviation was made by United States Senator Hiram Bingham tonight, when he spoke as one of the guests of the metropolitan section of the American Electric Railway association, at the Engineering societies building. He was present as president of the National Aeronautic association.

BELIEVE SLAIN MAN HAD BEEN "TAKEN FOR A RIDE"

NEW YORK, Nov. 2—(AP)—The body of a man who police believe had been "taken for a ride" by gangsters was found early today on the outskirts of Long Island City. He had been shot five times in the back of the head and through the body.

Police identified the man from finger prints as Joseph Howard, 24 years old, who had been convicted once of petit larceny. He also had been arrested five times for assault, robbery and felonious assault.

MYSTERY DEEPENED BY DEATH OF ALFRIEDA KNAAK

LAKE BLUFF, Ill., Nov. 2—(AP)—The word, "I didn't do it—they did it," murmured shortly before she died today made of Alfrieda Knaak, the thirty year old woman who confessed immolation by burning in a police station furnace, a greater mystery in death than she had been for three days while she fought for life in a Lake Forest hospital.

Whether she was conscious of what she said and whether the words were intended to contradict the fantastic story to which the attractive book agent and Sunday school teacher clung tenaciously for three days, those at her bedside had no way of knowing.

A coroner's inquest into the mystery was opened today but was continued until November 6 allow time for investigation after the Lake Forest residents making up the jury had viewed the body.

Mother Concepcion sat beside Toral as he stood before the judge and reiterated that she had no responsibility for his crime. Toral said he decided upon the assassination, "as the only thing to do to help the cause," referring to the religious controversy in Mexico. He said that his idea was to sacrifice his own life as well as that of General Obregon so that the country might be spared greater bloodshed.

MACK, COLO, Nov. 2—(AP)—In a perfectly-pocketed, almost inaccessible canyon in the Horse Creek country of Utah, Grand county law enforcement officers have found the lair of an elaborate cattle-rustling gang which savors of the old west.

The range was shut off by mountain ranges, and entered by a narrow hidden, natural gateway. The discovery came through an anonymous letter addressed to the ranch owners last week.

Weighed and Found Worthy.

You may feel perfectly assured in buying any product that is consistently advertised here in the pages of your newspaper. Such a product has been weighed and found worthy. Not necessarily by us . . . not by any committee on advertising integrity . . . but by the sternest judge of the last court of merchandising appeals . . . the buying public!

Advertising is merciless in its treatment of the unworthy product. . . . it serves only to hasten its failure. No amount of advertising . . . no matter how skillfully done . . . can force a product of no merit on the public. They simply won't buy it.

It seems reasonable then, doesn't it, to believe that the manufacturer of any product to be offered to the public will see that it is worthy before he backs it with thousands . . . often millions . . . in advertising!

HOOVER EXPLAINS PLAN TO DEAL WITH FARM PROBLEMS

In His Speech in St. Louis Mr. Hoover Said He Would Create a Federal Farm Board, Composed of Men in Sympathy With Agriculture, to Deal With Facts, Causes and the Remedies to Be Applied to Each and Every One of the Problems Massed Under the General Term "The Agricultural Problem"—Board Would Be Given Authority to Deal With Cooperative Marketing, to Create Clearing Houses For Farm Products and to Assist in the Elimination of Waste in Distribution.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Nov. 2—(AP)—A new institution in government, designed to care for agricultural problems, present and future, was promised here tonight by Herbert Hoover in what he designated as his final word to the American electorate on the issues of this campaign.

The institution would be comprised of a federal farm board, he said, composed of men in sympathy with agriculture and clothed with the broadest powers to determine the facts, the causes, and the remedies which should be applied to the various problems affecting the basic industry of the nation.

This declaration formed the focal point around which the presidential nominee built his prepared address. As a corollary to this formula for farm relief in proposed adequate tariff protection to agricultural products and the speedy development of a great system of inland waterways which would give cheap transportation outlets both by the Mississippi river and its laterals and the Great Lakes through the St. Lawrence river.

"In addition to the tariff and cheaper waterways transportation in assistance to agriculture," Hoover said, "the republican party proposes to go farther. It proposes to set up an institution which will be one of the most important institutions of our government, designed to meet not only the varied problems which confront us today, but those which may arise in the future.

Federal Farm Board

"We propose to create a federal farm board composed of men of understanding and sympathy for the problems of agriculture. We propose this board should have power to determine the facts, the causes, the remedies, which should be applied to each and every one of the multitude of problems which we mass under the general term 'the agricultural problem.'

"This program further provides that the board shall have a broad authority to act and be authorized to assist in the further development of co-operative marketing; that it shall assist in the development of clearing houses for agricultural products, in the development of adequate warehousing facilities, in the elimination of wastes in distribution and in the solution of other problems as they arise. But in particular the board is to build up with initial advances of capital from the government, farmer-owned and farmer-controlled stabilization corporations which will protect the farmer from depressions and the demoralization of summer and periodic surpluses.

"It is proposed that this board should have placed at its disposal such resources as are necessary to make its action effective.

"Thus we give to the federal farm board every arm with which to deal with the multitude of problems. This is an entirely different method of approach to solution from that of a general formula; it is flexible and available. No such far-reaching and specific proposal has ever been made by a political party on behalf of an industry in our history. It is a direct business proposition. It marks our desire for establishment of farmers' stability and at the same time maintains his independence and individuality.

Opportunity for the Farmer

"This plan is consonant with our American ideals to avoid the government operation of commercial business; for it places the operation on the farmer himself and not upon a bureaucracy. It puts the government in its real relation to the citizen—that of cooperation. Its object is to give equality of opportunity to the farmer.

"I would consider it the greatest honor I could have if it should become my privilege to aid in finally solving this the most difficult of economic problems presented to our people, and the one in which by inheritance and through long contact I have my deepest interest.

"I am hopeful that in the December session of congress it will be possible to reach that solution. However, as I have already said, if this is not possible I would call a special session, in order that we might speedily arrive at a determination of the question before the next harvest."

At one point in his address, Mr. Hoover said that "for us to adopt other social conceptions, such as federal or state government entry into commercial business in competition with its citizens would undermine initiative and enterprise and destroy the very foundations of freedom and progress upon which the American system is builded."

The republican nominee said the Coolidge administration had recognized "the public necessity of federal government contribution to the creation of a definitive system of modern interstate highways," and that he stood for continuance of the program.

Adequate Flood Control

Saying that he was an "advocate of adequate flood control," Mr. Hoover approved the enactment by congress of authority to construct Mississippi flood control works. "The safety of over a million and a half people depends upon them," he said. "We have already witnessed the temporary shock that came to the prosperity of the whole nation through that great disaster. Here again is a necessity for all of the energy which can be applied without waste in order that we shall open its wealth of production to the future and that we shall at the earliest possible moment remove fear from the hearts of all those that dwell in the great lower valley. I am for its completion at the earliest possible moment.

"Government has the definite and manifest obligation of giving constructive leadership to the people," he said. "In doing so it must not lessen their initiative and enterprise, upon which we must rely for the progress of the race and of the nation. Our system has been built upon the ideal of equality of opportunity. For perhaps a hundred years after the foundation of the republic the opportunities of a moving frontier preserved that equality of opportunity. Now with the settlement of the country and with the astonishing speed and intricate complexity of industrial life, the preservation of equality of opportunity becomes yearly and yearly more difficult, and for that every reason is of higher and higher importance. If we maintain America as the land of opportunity, where every boy and girl may have the chance to climb to that position for which his ability and character entitle him, we shall need to be on increasing guard."

REPUBLICAN TORCHLIGHT PARADE IN BOSTON

BOSTON, Mass., Nov. 2—(AP)—The confidence of the voter in the capacity and fitness of Herbert Hoover for the presidency was the keynote sounded tonight by Senator William E. Borah in a speech which culminated a huge demonstration by Massachusetts republicans for the Hoover-Curtis ticket.

This confidence of the electorate was characterized as the dominating, winning factor "pointing towards Hoover's victory" by the Senator. His address, prepared for delivery late tonight was the climax of the Bay State capital's rally which included a two hour torchlight parade and the listening by a large audience filling the Boston Arena, to the radio reproduction of the republican standard bearer's speech in St. Louis.

COOLIDGE CONGRATULATES HOOVER ON FITNESS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2—(AP)—President Coolidge tonight told Herbert Hoover, republican presidential nominee, that "you have shown your fitness to be president. I wish to congratulate you on the high quality of your leadership."

The message was contained in a telegram the executive sent Hoover after the former had listened on the radio to Hoover's St. Louis address.

"Your success in the campaign seems assured," President Coolidge continued, "and I shall turn over the great office of president of the United States of America to your keeping sure that it will be in competent hands in which the welfare of the people will be secure."

President Coolidge's telegram said: "I have just heard your St. Louis speech with great satisfaction. It is a concluding address of a series which have disclosed a breadth of information, a maturity of thought and a soundness of conclusion of public questions never surpassed in a previous presidential campaign.

"You have had the knowledge and judgment which enables you to tell the people the truth. You have been clear, candid and courteous, demonstrating your faith in the people and your consciousness that the truth has a power and conclusiveness of its own which is always supreme.

"All the discussion has only made more plain the wisdom of the plans you have proposed for solving our political, economic, and social problems. You have shown your fitness to be president. I wish to congratulate you on the high quality of your leadership. You are able, experienced, trustworthy and safe. Your success in the campaign seems assured and I shall turn over the great office of president of the United States of America to your keeping, sure that it will be in competent hands in which the welfare of the people will be secure."

CALVIN COOLIDGE.

GREAT DEMONSTRATION FOR HERBERT HOOVER

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 2—(AP)—Herbert Hoover arrived here early tonight to make the major address of his last campaign trip which will end at his California home next Monday, the eve of election day.

GEORGE BERNARD SHAW ANGERS REV. M'LELLAND

GLASGOW, Scotland, Nov. 2—(AP)—George Bernard Shaw has stirred the Rev. H. S. McLelland, president of the Literary society of Trinity church, to furious anger. It appears that the society asked the noted author to give them a lecture, and beneath his usual printed note announcing that he does not open exhibitions, nor speak at public dinners or similar functions, his secretary wrote:

"Mr. Shaw is inexorable, and he advises you to keep the 40 guineas you offer for some younger man who needs them."

This aroused the Rev. Mr. McLelland, and he promptly wrote to Mr. Shaw and mentioned well-known public men who had been welcomed to the society's platform.

THANKS GOV. SMITH FOR FLOWERS SENT TO WIFE

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Nov. 2—Believing that the cheerful surprise of receiving a bouquet of flowers from Governor and Mrs. Alfred E. Smith during the brief stop of the democratic standard bearer's train in this city one week ago Thursday had played an important part in the recovery of his wife, Arthur J. Gude has written his appreciation to the "Happy Warrior" and Mrs. Smith. According to Mr. Gude, his wife, who had become the mother of the two cutest little twin daughters in the world a few days before the incident, had sunk into the blackest despair until the silver lining of the dark cloud broke through with the kindly gesture of Mrs. Smith. From the rear platform of the train Mrs. Smith saw the pale and worn woman looking down on the milling crowd at the railroad station from a window of the third floor of the Sadd block. Standing beside the bed, that had been pushed to the window, was a nurse and Mrs. Smith was probably under the impression that it was a hospital when she ordered the basket bouquet to be taken to the woman. The woman was first noticed by Governor Smith who in turn drew Mrs. Smith's attention to her. Mr. Gude writes that Mrs. Gude was slipping into a despondency which, if not vitiated, threatened life-long, morbid, semi-invalidism. He was working on a desperate plan to rouse her determination when the flowers were brought into the apartment and at once the turning point in his wife's condition came and shortly afterward she was heard to sing. In his closing paragraph Mr. Gude writes: "When a man can turn aside from cheering thousands, can spurn the flight of moments in a crowded schedule and let his candidacy ride while he surveys the seamy side, the back-yard aspect, which most cities present to railroad yards, can penetrate the barrage of clotheslines and chimneys and spot an invalid in bed in an upper story window, that man has qualities which were not "buried with Lincoln but which belong to the ages. Just now it seems a toss-up whether 1932 will mark your election or your re-election to the presidency, but as your wife wished my wife "speedy recovery may I wish your aspirations God-speed."

MEMORIAL GYM TO BE DEDICATED AT WOODSTOCK

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Nov. 2—The citizens of the town of Woodstock will dedicate the Hall memorial gymnasium, which is attached to the campus of Woodstock academy, on Nov. 15. The new gym is a separate building and is one of the most beautiful structures of its nature in the state. Much interest will be centered upon the official dedication of this community improvement as it was erected and completed by popular subscription of the residents of the town and a considerable amount of the funds were donated by former students now living in some other part of the nation.

Complete information and data concerning the Hall memorial gymnasium which will be used by the athletic teams of Woodstock academy, will be issued by Principal Ellis during the early part of next week.

A freight train wreck at Apponaug today caused a three hour and a half delay to the freight train, carrying the morning mail and newspapers into Putnam and other cities on the Norwich Branch line. Putnam railroad officials left early this morning to direct the work of clearing tracks and preventing delays. It is thought that the damage was so great that it was impossible to have the mail train complete its run on time. During the day a number of trains on the Providence division were routed over the New Haven division through Putnam to their destination.

Your money will draw interest from Nov. 1 if deposited in the Cargill Trust company on or before Nov. 5.—adv.

Funeral services were held this morning at St. Mary's church at 9 o'clock for Mrs. Alida Buregard. A solemn high mass of requiem was celebrated by Rev. U. O. Bellerose, with Father Jos. D. Casey, deacon, and Father Ernest Boileau sub-deacon. The funeral mass was largely attended by friends and relatives from Rhode Island and Massachusetts, in addition to the hosts of acquaintances Mrs. Buregard has made during the length of years she had lived in Putnam. Many beautiful floral tributes were in evidence. Burial took place in St. Mary's cemetery.

Engineers of the state, co-operating with City Engineer George W. Perry in measuring the amount of sewage flowing daily into the river from Putnam, are expected to make tests of their experiment at the crib now in operation at the sewer outlet, during the early part of next week. Since the crib was placed in operation, City Engineer Perry has made daily tests of the flow, but the total waste entering the Quinebaug from Putnam will be made known next week when the engineers remove charts that have been registering since early in September.

The sewage flow is being recorded as a preliminary stage in the installation of sewer beds which the city of Putnam within a few years will have to build. The sewer bed will be a safeguard to the city's health, as all sewage now flowing into the river will be disposed of through the scientific apparatus provided for with the sewer beds.

The students of Miss Lucy Farrow's class are now collecting money to purchase articles that will be placed in a bag to be labeled, "Mexican Friendship," and will be directed to Mexico where it will be exhibited to the school children of Mexico.

The Friendship bags have been sent before by Putnam school children to Mexico and acknowledgement has been received. This action on the part of the schools' faculties and the children has been termed by national educators as one of the greatest methods of sponsoring international friend-

It's such a relief not to have to go to market every day. Two or three times a week will do the job—with energy, time and money saved—if you have a General Electric Refrigerator.

For even the smallest model is so designed that it can hold a generous store of foods—several days' supply for the average family. And its temperature, of course, is just right to keep meats wholesome, milk sweet and salads crispy.

The General Electric Refrigerator actually makes a minimum of floor space yield a maximum of food space. That's because the chilling chamber is incredibly compact. The up-on-legs models make it so easy to keep the floor under them clean.

You will notice, too, that the General Electric has no belts or fans or drain pipes. That it has no machinery under the cabinet, inside—or in the basement. You will be glad that it needs absolutely no oiling. And your bills for electricity will tell you the pleasant story that this perfect refrigeration actually is economical.

Come in today and study the various models. And send for a booklet. If you wish, time payments can be arranged.

KILLINGLY POLITICAL SITUATION TIGHTENS

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Nov. 3—The political situation in Killingly tightened up today. There were many evidences of the tense feeling that prevails as the long drawn out campaigning comes to a close. What will Killingly voters do at the polls next Tuesday? There's a question asked many times today and answered in many different ways. Among those who rate as shrewd observers of things political and with long experience in this town's affairs there appears to be general agreement that the result in Killingly will be close. There are 700 new voters in this town. That fact alone makes forecasting additionally difficult. The fact that the democrats showed such unusual strength in the town election in October, taken with the fact that they have since worked hard and placed the names of many new electors on the voting list is a factor tending to indicate that their showing will be strong on Tuesday. Killingly is normally a republican town, has been for more than a generation. It is for that reason that republican leaders expect it to remain so in the coming election, though conceding that the usual majority is apt to be considerably reduced.

An interesting development today was the speeding up of the drive in the interest of Representatives Arthur W. Williams and William S. Hunter, republicans, and candidates for re-election. In their interest voters known to prefer Governor Smith for president, though normally republican, were being urged not to vote a straight democratic ticket, but to give candidates on the republican state ticket a vote, particularly those for representative, and there appeared to be evidence that this plan would be followed by numbers of voters.

Likewise, there are persons ordinarily democratic politically, who are going over into the republican column in this town on Tuesday to vote for Mr. Hoover, while voting the remainder of their party ticket.

All of this forecasts plenty of split votes, and a long and tedious job for the counters. It is unlikely that the Killingly result will be fully and finally tabulated before 10 or 11 o'clock next Tuesday night.

OBITUARY

Mrs. Henry Rosseau

After a long illness, the death of Mrs. Philomene Rosseau, 67, wife of Henry Rosseau, occurred at the Lome on Carter street during the early hours of this morning. Mrs. Rosseau was a native of Canada, but had lived in this country the greater part of her life. She leaves her husband and seven daughters—Mrs. William Harold, Mrs. Peter J. Gazeau, Mrs. Bernard Manso, Mrs. Edmond Bousquet, Mrs. Earle Wilkins, Misses Evelyn and Alexina Rosseau.

Zotique Martel, formerly of West Thompson, came to court here today to answer to charges of intoxication and breach of the peace. Martel, a World war veteran who made a good record overseas, went in for directing traffic last night in the business section and acting the gallant in assisting ladies across the street and offering to carry their bundles for them. This did not make an entirely favorable impression either with the ladies or the motorists whose cars he tried to stop and still less with Night Officer Laird Winchell, who took Martel in tow and lodged him at the police station. Judge W. Fenner Woodward today sentenced Martel to serve 30 days in jail for having been intoxicated and 90 days for breach of the peace, so the man will be in Brooklyn until along toward spring.

Another case considered in the town court today was that of Albert Messier of Danielson, charged with indecent assault. Attorney Harry E. Back, counsel for the accused, entered a demurrer to the complaint, but this was over-ruled by Judge Woodward and Messier ordered held for trial at the superior court under bonds of $1,000, which was posted.

The case of Ralph Shippee, 17, of Elmville, who will face a charge of breaking and entering St. James' church in Danielson and St. Joseph's church in Dayville during the early hours of last Saturday morning and robbing poor boxes and votive stands, remains pending. His alleged companion in the affair, William Culley, 20, of Elmville, remains at liberty, and it is understood disposition of the case insofar as the local court is concerned awaits the arrest of Culley, last known to be in Providence.

A case of local interest scheduled to be heard in the superior court at Willimantic at a session this Saturday is that of Andrew E. Meech of Danielson vs. Charles A. Haggerty of Webster. Mr. Meech is suing for a sum of money which he claims is due him for goods sold to Haggerty, who is the contractor engaged in constructing the state highway between Danielson and Brooklyn. Counsel in the case include Judge W. Fenner Woodward and Attorney Harry E. Back of Danielson.

His passing of his 80th brithday this week recalls that Robert Saunders was at one time one of the famous, natural long distance runners of New England. Among his achievements as a runner is that of racing a good horse from this town to Providence and beating him. The race was run between East Killingly and the Rhode Island capital, a distance of 22 miles. Mr. Saunders did no particular training for such feats of speed and endurance. He was just a natural runner of unusual stamina, and it was a mighty good horse that could keep up with him on a day's journey. Today at 80 he is as active as many a man of 60, and gives his attention to his business affairs every day.

Aside from such stakes as a few cigars, a hat or a dollar or two, there is very little betting on the outcome of the election in Danielson. Decided differences of opinion there are to be sure on how the nation will go or how certain states will register, but these opinions are not being backed with coin excepting in such as instances as are herein mentioned.

You are all thinking of election day, but why not have an election day of your own and elect to open an account in The Windham County National bank.—Adv.

There are 58 persons registered in Killingly's evening school, and another teacher is to be added, making a total of four, it was stated today by Supt. W. E. Parker.

A few from Danielson will journey to New Haven Saturday to attend the Yale-Dartmouth football game.

The current issue of the Killonion, the Killingly high school publication, is an especially interesting number, and includes a sketchy history of the school.

Howard A. Elliott, chief special deputy of the commissioner of domestic animals, was engaged today with work in this part of the state.

Members of the Ladies' Prayer league are to meet with Mrs. Kent A. Dattle of Broad street next Tuesday afternoon.

Miss Monica Lambert has gone to Hartford to take a position with an insurance company.

No other mark than the cross-mark X can legally be used by voters in Killingly in next Tuesday's election. Any other marking will cause a ballot to be discarded. Names should not be scratched out, as this is illegal marking in this state.

Henry C. Benton of Fall River is spending the week end visiting with friends in Danielson.

Miss Dorothy Barber, '29, and Miss Anna Herr, '29, are respectively captain and manager of the Girls' basketball team at Killingly high school.

This evening a meeting of the Westfield Men's club was addressed at the Congregational church by Rev. Leonard R. Richards of Pomfret. There was music by an orchestra and refreshments were served.

Boy Scouts of Danielson have a Tag day planned for Saturday. A troop has been reorganized here and promises to be active throughout the winter season.

Having stopped receiving lists, Killingly's board of assessors is now engaged in checking through to determine who failed to file. In such cases an addition of 10 per cent will be made to the last assessment of record.

The sugar beet industry which made its first appearance in Louisiana three years ago, is gradually expanding and within a few years is expected to take its place as one of the major crops of the state, according to surveys made by sugar engineers at Louisiana State university.

Belief was expressed today that little interest would be taken by the few remaining residents of the village of Mechanicsville towards accepting the offer of the Geurin Mills company of purchasing the mill tenements. The announcement was made during the early part of the week, yet the tenants now in the houses have failed to show any enthusiasm in the offer.

Farmers in the rural districts will have native turkey to offer to the public for Thanksgiving, according to indications at present. On the poultry farms the gobbler is a common creature. The prices for the birds this year will be about the same as a year ago. It will be remembered that the Vermont turkeys were supplanted by native and western raised, due to the shortage, caused by the Vermont floods that came but a few weeks before Thanksgiving and killed off hundreds of the stock. Within a few miles of the city the farmers have taken advantage of the Vermont shortage and are soon to place on the markets Connecticut-bred stock.

If you could look inside your engine .

—you would quickly understand how a too-thin "winter oil" will run off the bearing surfaces and cylinder walls and let in dangerous wear and friction.

Most so-called "winter oils" give you quick starting on cold mornings. But when your engine begins to warm up, these too-thin oils may grow as thin as water. Soon the friction surfaces rub against each other, and wear results.

Gargoyle Mobiloil Arctic is made to do both ends of the winter lubricating job. Being always fluid at zero, Mobiloil Arctic responds with a quick, full spurt to every moving part as soon as you press your starter. Then, when the engine has warmed up, Mobiloil Arctic's rich oily character enables it to cling to the working surfaces and cushion them against wear.

That is why Mobiloil Arctic is chosen for cold weather lubrication by wise motorists everywhere.

You can buy Mobiloil from most dealers who are not controlled by gasoline refiners. The Mobiloil sign is a mark of the independent dealer.

HOOVER'S ELECTION IMPERATIVE

Dr. James Rowland Angell, president of Yale university, leaves no opinion as to where he stands when he declares that he regards the election of Herbert Hoover "as critically imperative for the best interests of the nation."

Dr. Angell has been particularly impressed by Mr. Hoover's whole career in which is displayed a superlative integrity of character and a wholehearted devotion to the duty in hand. He has been especially mindful of the fact that there has not been the slightest suspicion voiced against Mr. Hoover's unassailable honor in the discharge of great obligations. He has been attracted by the issues as presented by Mr. Hoover but most of all by the man himself.

That he voices the sentiment of a very large number of people when he praises the manner in which he has conducted his campaign is believed. Dr. Angell expresses himself upon this point as follows: "The high level upon which he has conducted his campaign free from all bigotry of thought or utterance, from all belittling personalities and from the clap-trap invective which is the stock in trade of many of our candidates, has, I am sure, deeply impressed the country with his single minded sincerity of purpose and his deep sense of the dignity of the great office he seeks. To vote for such a man is a privilege that hardly comes once in a lifetime."

Those are words that will be widely echoed. They picture the situation as it has been. They point to the contrast in campaigns and the methods employed by the candidates in displaying their fitness for the great office.

Furthermore, and with equally telling effect, Dr. Angell insists that under Hoover the country would get a stable government, a continuation of sound financial policy, and an active and intelligent effort to help the farmer to assist business and industry and to promote the interests of labor and safeguard the welfare of the ultimate consumer, while under Smith with his extravagant financial record and with the present divided counsels within the democratic party it would be impossible to foresee what the country would get.

Dr. Angell tersely sums up the situation in words which fit the situation and with which it is believed the great majority of the people of this country will be in agreement.

BRITISH RUBBER

Because there are so many rubber users in the country, so many who are buying tires and other things, there will be more than usual interest in the announcement that the restriction which the British have maintained over the raw rubber market has been terminated. This change went into effect November first. At that time the much discussed Stevenson act expired and henceforth British rubber is once more subject to the law of supply and demand. Its production is not curtailed and its exportation is not limited. The high price which the British have been demanding for rubber to American buyers has ceased.

No small part in bringing about this change was due to the protest that was registered by Herbert Hoover as secretary of commerce. We were made to see the squeeze that was being worked on this country, the largest user of rubber in the world, and a reaction set in. Facilities were provided for obtaining rubber at the lowest possible figure and plans were made for the production of rubber on a larger scale by American capital. So formidable did this opposition become that the British were forced to realize the mistake they had made. They sought to exact big money from the rubber buyers and they did, but it was an experiment that killed itself by its viciousness.

While the British by their action appeared to corner the rubber market, they unintentionally set in motion activities which will prevent anything of the kind in the future. Within a few years American producers will be able to meet the requirements of this country. Certain of this preparation would not have been undertaken at this time had there not been the merciless attitude concerning rubber taken by the British. We got our eyes open as the result of it. The British have reaped large profits and they should continue to get good money for their investments, but they killed the goose that laid the golden eggs when they tried to force it to lay more by choking it. Setting up an unjust restriction was the method employed but it has been tried and found to be an economic experiment unworthy of longer being continued.

GAMBLING WITH HUMAN LIFE

They continue to happen, these distressing fatalities at railroad crossings. We cannot say we do not understand why, for it is invariably the same old excuse, a failure to be sufficiently careful of the lives of self and others to prevent being killed. They happen almost as freely at open crossings as they do at blind ones.

According to records which have been kept by the American Railway association there were 1148 instances where automobiles crashed into the side of trains at grade crossings, resulting in the death of 244 persons and injuries to 1636 others.

By those figures it is shown that more than 20 per cent. of the crossing accidents came under this classification. It is bad enough when the locomotive plows into the automobile, when the latter has made a futile effort to beat it out, but when the auto plunges into the train there is even less excuse. When such cases are referred to as stupid there is not much chance to dispute it.

There is occasionally an excuse which can be looked upon as fairly reasonable when, at unguarded crossings, a car is struck by a second train after the first one has passed. Such crossings most certainly ought not to be unguarded, but when drivers pay absolutely no attention to the warnings about crossings, fail to slacken the speed of their cars, disregard the "Stop, Look and Listen" signs they are inviting what happens to too many of them. It is a deplorable situation, one that ought not to exist, but the motorists do not seem to realize that the remedy is a simple one and lies in their own hands. There is a reasonable degree of safety at most every railroad crossing if the man at the wheel is cautious and disposed to show the proper amount of respect to the very real peril that exists there. Those who gamble with human life must expect to pay the penalty.

THE ZEPPELIN'S TRIP

If we are to accept the story of Dr. Hugo Eckener concerning the return flight of the Graf Zeppelin to Germany, and there is no reason why we shouldn't, all is not rosy on a Zeppelin during a storm.

Others who have crossed the ocean in the air have experienced storms of various kinds in the crossing. They have had experiences which they would not repeat if they could be avoided. The Zeppelin's officers and passengers would have been glad to have skipped the hard blow if that were possible, but evidently there was no such opportunity, as that adopted in Europe on leaving for this country, of flying down to the Mediterranean in order to dodge a storm on the Atlantic coast.

By good navigation the airship rode out the blow safely but not without much worry on the part of its officers. They are to be congratulated for their successful handling of the craft out over the Atlantic where disaster of course meant death. They landed it safely in Friedrichshafen for the first round trip Zeppelin trip from Germany to the United States.

That that trip may be the forerunner of a regular airship service between Europe and the United States is possible. It demonstrated nevertheless that while the Graf Zeppelin behaved well there are features in its construction which must be given careful attention before thinking of making ocean crossing in it a regular thing. Those who took the chance with Dr. Eckener were unharmed though they may have been sufficiently scared.

The round trip served as a test of the airship and a test of conditions on such a trip. These are bound to be of the greatest value in the perfection of this type of craft. There were problems to be solved before the ship started and there are problems still being faced. Nevertheless the long record run will contribute no small amount to their solution. It marks another step ahead of aerial navigation.

EDITORIAL NOTES

With the increase in the number of voters the importance of voting early should be recognized by the voters.

The man on the corner says: It is impossible to go through a political campaign without the revival of the Ananias club.

It is the same in Scotland as it is in this country; when two engines meet on the same track going in opposite directions there's serious trouble.

Indicted for killing eight persons a Kansan, out on $60,000 bail, took his life. Kansas cannot kick much over that manner of cutting court expenses.

When we note how the voters in many of the other states are having a chance to vote though absent from home, isn't it about time such a privilege was extended to Connecticut citizens?

The Boston Transcript points to another Smith error when it shows that he misrepresented the District of Columbia expenses where though they are $40,000,000 a year the government has paid only $9,000,000 of it for several years, it is better not to know so much that isn't so.

THE MAN WHO TALKS

A new reason is given in a current magazine as to what induced the Continental congress to fight for independence. A great many reasons have been assigned but the following one is quite unique. At that time congress was meeting in Independence hall, Philadelphia. Of course the conflict with the mother country had been brewing for some time, and hence but little was required to make the smouldering feelings of the leaders burst forth into flames. The summer season of 1776 was exceedingly hot, and the flies more abundant than usual, were exceedingly hungry. At that time congressmen wore knee-pants and long silk stockings, and hence flies, mosquitoes and other pests found a fine feeding ground. Now these good patriots were human and as they swatted these pests it hurt and aroused their fighting spirit. Soon the suggestion spread like wildfire, "Let us swat the British."

"Our greatest glory is not in never failing, but in rising every time we fall." That sounds very much like the sayings of some great modern publicist. It might have been spoken by Daniel Webster, Edward Everett, or Mr. Geladstone. But as a matter of fact it was written centuries ago by Confucius, Crina's "grand old man." Confucius was a contemporary of the Prophet Daniel, and exercised about as much power in China as Daniel did in Jerusalem and Babylon. The writings of Confucius are of high order and fully equal to much of what the Hebrew prophets wrote. The saying above quoted shows that over 30 centuries ago there were men who could think clearly, and that is the reason why they live, and it is hard to see why Confucius should not have as big a place in the Hereafter as the Hebrew prophets or New England divines.

As far as prosperity is concerned all nations have their periods of both prosperity and adversity. It is probably true that the more intelligent and active the people are the greater their prosperity. During the presidential campaign there have been a great many flings at our prosperity, as though it were more of an attitude of mind than an actual fact. This criticism raises the following question: If this country for quite a number of years has not been prosperous what nation has? All Europe still feels the effect of the World war. Great Britain is probably the best situated in this direction of any of them. But if criticism is made of the United States along the line of prosperity, what have the same critics to say about England's present financial status? Have we millions of the unemployed who have to be fed by the government? This calamity howling about our distressed condition is pure partisan bunk!

Nothing that science has done in recent years surpasses the reclamation of the waste lands of the Everglades in Florida. This has been done by the discovery of new means of fertilization. As the result of patient scientific investigation it has been discovered that certain metals for particular soils have wonderful fertilizing value. For a great many years the Everglades had been a problem to agriculturists. The first logical step, though difficult, was the easiest—that of drainage. As the great swamp was somewhat higher than the sea level it was a simple matter to get it drained. While portions of it produced vegetables abundantly, there were other parts that did not submit to cultivation. The University of Florida took the matter up and at length the laboratory began to give tangible results. It was found that a combination of copper and manganese salts gave results that were amazing.

One who is at all touched with a vision of world unity as an ultimate result, must have sympathy with Jugoslavia in the attempt to find racial solidarity. Before the World war this new commonwealth was the petty states of Serbia, Croatia and Slavonia. While they were contiguous and had very many things in common, unfortunately for union each had its own dialect which the others could not understand, which of course led to confusion. The disagreements between them were largely due to misunderstandings caused by these different dialects. The troubles went to such an extent that the peasant leader, Raditch, and four other members of his party were shot, which, of course, only aggravated the situation. I refer to the situation as a warning to this country, unless there is a stronger purpose than is seen at present on the part of foreigners to learn the English language, we may have Jugoslavia right here.

Those who have been led to believe that the most satisfactory solution of the liquor question has been found in the present Canadian method are directed to read a very illuminating article on the subject by Rev. Alfred E. Cooke, one of the leading pastors of Denver, Col. Before coming to his present position, Dr. Cooke lived 23 years in Canada, and 11 of these years in Vancouver. From his own observation and from government reports, he says "I know the facts, and I say, without fear of contradiction, that instead of solving the liquor problem or bringing in real temperance, the Canadian provinces have brought about a condition of things that has tremendously increased the consumption of alcohol, increased drunkenness and crime, fostered bootlegging, smuggling and rum running, corrupted politics, created a deplorable social condition, and is producing a nation of moderate drinkers."

How thankful we ought to be that some institutions that once existed are now gone, and in all human probability are gone forever. As a new America has come up since 1861, it would be very difficult to find any normal person who would advocate a return to the old slave system. We know that a terrible war was necessary to bring forth the immortal Emancipation Proclamation, and to write the principles of abolition into the 14th amendment. What would be likely to happen if any man should stand up in Madison Square Garden New York, and suggest a modification of the 14th amendment, because it curtailed personal liberty? Some people would like to keep slaves, and why should they be denied the right? Suppose the United States because she is strong enough should send after a cargo of negroes from Senegambia, or anywhere else in Africa, to make slaves of them, what would the world say about us? Rum has been made as illegal as slavery, why try to bring it back?

The Amherst club of New York has recently done a fine piece of constructive work in organizing a placement bureau. A number of the alumni who are large employers of labor are in sympathy with the idea, and have heartily endorsed it. This bureau is supposed to act as a sort of clearing house. For instance, some alumnus is looking for a man to do a certain work, and he gives in detail just what the position requires, and the kind of man he wants. Some graduate is also in search for a certain employment which he describes. The placement bureau brings the two parties together if it thinks the young candidate comes up to the requirements. It is easy to see how the alumni of the college can in this way be mutually helpful. As this matter is in its incipient stage it is too early to determine just how helpful it will be. It promises, however, to be a success.

SENATOR M'LEAN WARNS AGAINST LETTING DEMOCRATS DEAL WITH TARIFF.

That the democratic party in this campaign is in an impossible and incongruous position with regard to the protective tariff—much similar to its 1912 stand—was a declaration made yesterday by retiring United States Senator George P. McLean of Simsbury in a statement issued to the press.

Senator McLean will withdraw from public life and politics in March after 18 years of notable service in congress, where as a member of the ways and means committee of the senate, he played a leading part in framing the present, high protective tariff law. His statement, therefore, probably represents his final, active political campaign utterance as a United States senator, and is in typical style.

In repeating at this time its promises to safeguard industry and labor, Senator McLean reminds the democratic party that its 1912 claims along the same line proved so empty and impossible of fulfillment that it immediately enacted the Underwood low tariff law, and did exactly to Connecticut industries what it solemnly promised during the campaign that it would not do.

His statement follows:

"As the campaign draws to a close, we find our democratic friends inspired with their usual ante-election assurance of victory and fully restored to their old time confidence that if given the opportunity they will solve the problems of the farm and the factory and the fireside until 'peace shall come as a river and glory as a flowing stream.' They insist that they are truly repentant of their past and that it is the plain duty of the American people to forgive and forget. We are told that some of them have gone so far before election as to sign the near-protection tariff pledge proposed by the democratic candidate for the presidency.

"Governor Smith, who only four years ago, denounced protection as a four billion dollar tax burden and a cold blooded hold up of the American people, tells us that 85 per cent. of the democratic candidates for congress have promised to support his promise to try to persuade congress to create a new tariff commission that will try to take the tariff question out of politics. His proposal is precisely what President Wilson promised when he persuaded congress to abolish the Taft tariff commission and create a new one and President Wilson selected four free traders, one reciprocity crank and one protectionist to accomplish his objective.

Must Escape Lifelong Record.

"It is very evident that Governor Smith's desire to take the tariff question out of politics is as sincere as is his desire to be elected. He knows that he wouldn't get votes enough to be worth counting if his convictions on the tariff today were similar to those he entertained prior to his nomination. His stand today merely proves that the tariff issue overshadows all others in the great industrial centers and that he must escape his own lifelong record and the lifelong record of his party with regard to it or suffer overwhelming defeat.

"While we may not question his sincerity, we may wisely inquire into his knowledge of this most vital subject and point to a few of the obstacles that will render the accomplishment of his present purposes impossible. Governor Smith does not tell us how he would change the existing law which gives to the existing tariff commission full power to investigate and report to congress, or the president, any and all the facts and circumstances requisite to an adjustment of tariff rates to meet changing competitive conditions. He doesn't tell us in what respect he would change the law of 1922, which gaves the president the power to raise and lower existing rates to the extent of fifty per cent, upon recommendation of the tariff commission. He doesn't tell us that it was the sole purpose of those who voted for this law to take the tariff question out of politics and as far from congress as the constitution would permit.

Low Tariff Members in Control.

"Governor Smith doesn't claim that the rates fixed by his new commission, perfect as they might be, would not be subject to revision by congress and Governor Smith ought to know that such rates would be revised by a democratic congress if they were protective. In his discussion of this subject he has clearly revealed the fact that he has been misinformed by someone whose desire for a democratic victory is equal to his own.

"The governor ought to know that the low tariff members of the ways and means and finance committees would be in absolute control of tariff legislation in the event of democratic victory. These men are from the south, and they will demand obedience to their views on the tariff question, justified by the 1928 platform which does not contain the word "protection" for reasons well known to the free trade democrats who dictated it. And, this isn't all.

"The governor in his Kentucky speech forgave himself for his approval of the theory of the Underwood tariff bill in his acceptance speech by denouncing the Fordney-McCumber bill as a political traders bill—a 'you scratch my back and I'll scratch yours' bill, written and enacted by republicans who were purposely without the information required to form an intelligent protection measure, Governor Smith complains that words are sometimes used to conceal one's meaning, it is equally true that they are sometimes used to reveal one's ignorance.

Tried Before.

"Informed men and women will remember that the ways and means committee of the house met long before the convening of congress in 1920 and that this committee framed a bill upon the American valuation plan. To aid them they had extensive hearings and the full benefit of the investigations of the tariff commission began as far back as 1917. This commission, as I have noted, was appointed by President Wilson for the express purpose of taking the tariff question out of politics and its personnel was a safe guaranty that its reports and recommendations would not permit excessively high rates. The senate, realizing that democratic senators, with the aid of progressive republican senators, would reject a bill based on American valuations, was compelled to go back to the old plan of basing rates on foreign valuations. Republican members of the finance committee of the senate put in more than six months in an honest endeavor to ascertain cost differences and competitive conditions at home and abroad. To aid them, the members of the tariff commission and its experts were in constant attendance and the treasury department gave special assistance, as indicated by the following letter from the secretary of the treasury:

"'My dear Senator:

I have your letter of the 20th instant, requesting certain information in regard to the valuation investigation conducted by this department in connection with the last general tariff bill.

"'This investigation was made under the authority contained in the urgent deficiency appropriation act approved August 24, 1921. The purpose of the investigation was to find the selling price in this country of the American article and the imported article of all those products that carried an ad valorem rate of duty in the tariff bill as it passed the house.

"'Honorable James B. Reynolds was appointed as director on September 27, 1921. The staff and office force was organized immediately and work began October 1, 1921. The final report of the investigation was submitted to the chairman of the senate committee on finance under date of January 18, 1922. In the course of the investigation approximately 85 persons were employed at various times for varying periods.

"'The amount of the appropriation was $100,000; the amount used for salaries, travel expenses, freight and miscellaneous purposes was $82,693, leaving an unexpended balance of $17,307.'

Very truly yours,
(Signed) A. W. MELLON,
Secretary of the treasury.

"It is my recollection that for more than three months, 40 men at least were at work all the time combing the wide world for costs and prices that would enable the committee to ascertain rates that would fairly meet competitive conditions at home and abroad. In some instances foreign costs could not be obtained but foreign wholesale selling prices, disclosed at the custom houses supplied information that enabled the committee to fix both ad valorem and specific rates that were sorely needed and entirely justified.

"As a member of the conference committee of the two houses, which finally passed on the rates reported to congress, I can say that in no single instance did the rates in the McCumber bill exceed the rates clearly indicated as necessary in the reports of the investigators.

Challenge Never Accepted.

"When the McMaster resolution, which demanded an immediate revision of the tariff downward, was being debated in the senate last winter, I challenged its proponents to point to a single rate that was higher than it ought to be and this challenge was not accepted.

"It will be remembered that many republicans and republican newspapers took the position that the McCumber bill was enacted at an inopportune time. Some of the great metropolitan papers, including the New York Herald-Tribune then owned by Mr. Munsey, took this view and adversely criticised the bill. But, a year later the Herald-Tribune frankly admitted that the McCumber bill had fully justified its enactment in 1922 as well as the rates imposed.

"The opposition that we had to meet from the importers in New York, in combination with democratic and progressive senators and chain stores and mail order houses, was so determined and resourceful that the rates which finally ran the gauntlet of the senate were none of them too high and many of them too low as subsequent events have clearly demonstrated. So much for Governor Smith's assertion that the rates in the McCumber act are unjustified and that the bill as a whole was framed without information, or effort to secure information.

Connecticut Situation Like 1912.

"The political situation in Connecticut today with regard to the tariff question is precisely what it was in 1912. Ssenator Underwood, then chairman of the ways and means committee of the house came to Connecticut and in his Waterbury speech said, 'that the democratic party would fully equalize the difference in the labor costs at home and abroad.' He denied that he was a free trader and he assured the Connecticut laboring man that his wages would be amply protected and that no legitimate industry would be permitted to suffer. Chief Justice Baldwin, then the democratic candidate for governor and the five democratic candidates for congress went about the state repeating Senator Underwood's promise. The democratic party was victorious; the five democratic candidates for congress were elected; a tariff bill was reported by the committee on ways and means and the report of that committee in explicit terms rejected the cost of production theory and Senator Simmons, chairman of the committee on finance of the senate frankly stated that his bill, as finally accepted, was not a protection bill, it was a revenue bill. Mr. Lonergan, now a candidate for the senate, then in the house, together with his four democratic colleagues, voted for the Underwood bill when the roll was called. It was frankly conceded by democrats at the time they voted, that the bill didn't contain a vestige of international protection.

"On April 24, 1913, Mr. Underwood himself declared in the house of representatives that the Democratic party stood for a tariff for revenue only, with emphasis upon the word 'only.'

"Let us go a little farther into the facts and see how precisely similar present conditions are to those which obtained in 1913. Presidents do not write tariff laws. The ways and means committee of the house and the finance committee of the senate frame tariff bills.

How Democratic Committeemen Stand

"Mr. Garner of Texas will be chairman of the committee on ways and means. On January 7, 1915, Mr. Garner denounced 'outrageous tariff tax extortions' in the Congressional Record of September 13, 1913, are similar denunciations of the protective theory. 'Nothing,' he said, 'has been more productive of monopoly than the republican policy of high protective tariffs.'

"Next comes Mr. Oldfield of Arkansas, a lifelong opponent of protective tariffs. In the Congressional Record of January 29, 1926 Mr. Oldfield declared that he 'would reduce the Fordney-McCumber law to a revenue basis, and that means a competitive basis.'

"Mr. Hull of Tennessee, another democratic leader and member of the ways and means committee of the house, on February 22, 1923, declared that 'protective tariffs are dishonest.' Four years later in 1927 Mr. Hull declared on the floor of the house that 85 per cent. of the American people derived on benefit from protection but only tariff injuries.'

"Mr. Rainey is another member of the ways and means committee of the house. On January 17th of this year, Mr. Rainey said that 'anybody who tried to defend a protective tariff in this world at the present time has a warped sense of logic.'

"In a word, we have no evidence that the democratic leaders of the house, who would have absolute control over legislation in the next congress would change their views on the tariff question.

Senators Strong Against Protection.

"When we come to the senate, the situation is even more discouraging.

"Senator Simmons of North Carolina would be chairman of the committee of finance of the senate. He has been in the senate since 1901. He is now on the stump begging the people of North Carolina to vote against Governor Smith, and less than ten days ago he said: 'I am opposed to a protective tariff and as chairman of the finance committee I shall report a bill in accordance with the democratic platform which is against protection.' Senator Simmons is able and honest. He tells in a very few words what the democratic platform means and what will happen to protion in 1903 in the event of a democratic victory.

"We may rest assured that Senator King of Utah, a bred in the bone free trader and one of the ablest men on the finance committee will not change his views.

"Senator David I. Walsh of Massachusetts, another member of the finance committee, said in 1924 that our war time cost of living to the American people, which reached staggering figures, was due to the protective tariff. 'The tariff law,' he said, 'is an extortionate piece of legislation unequalled in the history of tariff scandal legislation.' On January 9, 1928, Senator Walsh accused protective tariffs of all the major economic ills of the country. Senator Walsh is a very positive man. What he is saying to his constituents in Massachusetts just now I do not know.

"Next we come to Senator Harrison of Mississippi another prominent member of the committee on finance. He is the senator who tells us now that Mississippi ought to stand by Tammany because Tammany stood by Mississippi in 1865. He is a lifelong free trader. Indeed if there is a democratic protectionist on the finance committee of the senate, I have not observed it.

"Senator Robinson is not a member of that committee but in the event of democratic success, he would use his great influence in support of its conclusions.

Connecticut Needs Republicans.

"Is it probable that the dry, low tariff senators not members of the finance committee, but who, with the aid of the members of that committee will be numerous enough to maintain absolute control of the senate, should it be democratic, will desert Senator Simmons their very dry and beloved and trusted leader on the tariff question and vote for rates he doesn't approve? Certainly if we may rely upon facts that cannot be contradicted and words that will not be retracted, a democratic revision of the tariff in 1930 will be about as welcome to the Connecticut home as a Porto Rican hurricane.

"We know what will happen if the tariff is revised by the republican party. We know how our candidates stand on this question. We know that they won't have to repudiate their party platform in order to save this country from the experience it went through in 1913 and 1914, when four million men were out of work in the country and five thousand in the city of Hartford alone. We know how valuable the services of Mr. Tilson will be in his well-deserved leadership of the house of representatives. We know how Mr. Walcott will vote in 1930. I was highly pleased when he was nominated to take my place. His long association with Mr. Hoover, his marked ability and thorough knowledge of domestic and foreign affairs promise a service that will be of very great benefit to his state and nation."

Sunday Morning Talk

Wheat or Tares.

A man may ally himself with the wheat or tares, the forces of good or evil. It is like two Scotchmen who emigrated to California. One took with him his national emblem, the thistle which since then has become a plague to the Pacific coast. The other brought a swarm of honey bees, which have since become as much of a blessing as the thistle is a curse. You may become wheat or tares and what you do become you are liable to remain. There is an Eastern story of a workman who was sent to saw a field with barley, but sowed oats instead. When the harvest time came his master said in anger and amazement, "Didn't I bid you sow barley? Whence then come these oats?" "Why," said the servant, "I sowed oats, expecting barley to come up." The master said, "Whoever heard of the like?" "But master, you do the same for you are sowing evil in the present life and you expect to reap in the resurrection the fruit of virtue." Thereupon the master had nothing to say.

The fact that in the present life tares and wheat cannot be uprooted and replanted in separate fields; that good and bad are commingled, even in the churches, blinds many to the eternal difference between the two. "I'm as good as this or that and the other church member," says the worldling, and why do I need to join the church?

There are tares everywhere. The question for each one is not, "Am I as good as yonder tare, in irreproachable company?" but "Am I, I by myself, of the wheat or the tares?" Which will be our place on that day of eternal decision?

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Hundreds Satisfied

Mr. Editor: I attended the meeting at Community house Tuesday evening, to hear our present electric rates explained by an electrical expert and one thing I noted was how very conspicuous Mayor Robbins was by his absence. It seemed strange to me and others who were present that with all his concern over the dear public and his anxiety over the small consumer, that he wasn't right to the front to get both sides of the story. As far as I could see there were no complaints or questions asked by the residents and the questions which were fired so quick and fast—were by the same business men who are so peeved over the salesroom department of the Gas and Electrical department.

After all is said there are hundreds of us customers who are well satisfied and it looks to me as if those same business men are flim-flamming themselves and don't know it.

About Prohibition

Mr. Editor: The most interesting part of your paper to me is in reading the letters to the editor and in reading the letters I find the women are more proficient in throwing the bull than the men. One writer gives as his reason for not supporting Al Smith is because Boss Tweed was connected with Tammany. It is remarkable what a memory some people have at times. The Tweed affair happened before the majority of the present generation were born, but the writer remembers it but forgot about Alien Property Custodian Miller and Forbes of the veterans bureau. Funny how poor a person's memory becomes when they want to forget. Another writer quotes an almanac as authority for the figures he submitted but if the people want cold-blooded facts, get it off the police blotters. They tell about the great strides prohibition has made. It has strode all through the Philadelphia police department where they have been convicted for accepting bribes and affording police protection to those who are selling illegally. Oh, yes, prohibition has made wonderful strides in fostering corruption and crime and what is true of Philadelphia is true of the whole country.

Another writer comparing this country and England, claimed he saw men, yes and women in England, standing at the bar drinking. Now when a woman enters a pub in England, as the saloons are called there, they are seated at a table and are waited on. That disposes of the women's part but he did not say that he read of any women arrested for driving while drunk as they are in the land of temperance. They can not stand at a bar here because there are no bars. Where do they get the whiskey? Perhaps the law enforcement officers could tell the public where it could be got. He also claims it costs $32.90 per capita in England which is a little more than 60 cents a week. This is about the price of one drink of so called whiskey and he claims the people here are only spending 10 per cent. of what they spent before the 18th amendment became a law. If those went around and saw what happened it would open their eyes which are blinded to the virtues of prohibition. If prohibition was the godsend they claim why do not those who champion it tell the public why the night clubs and the roadhouses, yes and the gasoline stations, are flourishing and why the high school dances are forbidden. Tell the public those things and if they tell the truth about them it will make interesting reading.

Don't Want to Pay Others' Bills

Mr. Editor: Why should one person have to pay 14.17 cents a K. W. H. for electricity, another 58.33 cents, while others only pay 6.66 cents or like "A Satisfied Customer" only 4.92 cents. Does any reputable merchant do business in that fashion? Suppose a grocer asked one customer three cents a pound for sugar and another seven cents a pound. Wouldn't there be some kick about his "new rates"? Why not try that on certain people and see how they like it!

"Jones" says that the cost of each customer's service is the same. Then why charge different rates just because one has more rooms in his home than another. Ought merchants to charge more if a person wears a fur coat, than if he doesn't?

Of course "A Satisfied Customer" likes the new rates because they make me help her pay her bill. And I'm not unselfish enough to be satisfied to do it. My bill this month robs me of 71 cents that I can't afford to give her. She evidently has a great deal more money than I have as she can afford things that I cannot. I am willing to pay for what I use myself, but I don't want to pay other people's bills for them. In the days when I was young such a proceeding would have been called graft.

Benefits from Prohibition

Editor: So many are taking a hand at writing you about prohibition I cannot refrain from doing the same.

Of course prohibition does not prohibit, neither does the law against murder, arson or theft. A glance at the front page of The Bulletin makes that clear, but that there is an improvement in many conditions is certain. Before the Volstead act, it was not uncommon for me to have to step out into the highway to escape being knocked down by a reeling drunkard. Nor was it uncommon, though exceedingly disagreed to find a filthy mess on the sidewalk, disgorged by some overburdened drunkard. For years this has not occurred to my observation. I saw a lot of clerks and stable men looking up the Arcot as if something unusual was going on. When it looked up also, it was only a man reeling home. A few years ago, this would have been so common as not to attract attention. How beautifully Bath street has been cleared of its many dram shops since the Volstead act. It is now safe to pass there just at the time the drinks used to be thrust out. Now all is quiet there night or day. Isn't this worth something.

Treat Everyone Fair

Mr. Editor: I see some of the users of electricity are satisfied with the new rates. They are satisfied because they are getting more for less money. That is a good reason. But do they think it is justice that those who use only a small amount of electricity should have their bills increased in to make that possible? That certainly isn't fair and that is where the rub comes. Let those who want to use electricity by the wholesale, but those who must economize ought to be allowed to.

I understand at the electric office that customers are being told they ought to buy all kinds of applicances and thus get the lower rate. Fine advice. That means a bigger commission for the sales department but there are too many ways money is really needed without resorting to extravagance to please the electric department. They might as well tell us to buy an automobile and we wouldn't have to walk.

Give us a fair rate where all will be satisfied instead of catering to a few.

FREEMAN MAKES REPLY TO CHALLENGE FROM CITRON

Replying to the challenge hurled by W. M. Citron of Middletown, to meet him in a debate on what Citron termed "the absenteeism of the republican candidate on congressional roll calls," Congressman Richard P. Freeman, of New London in a letter made public this week informs Citron that if he were more cognizant with the situation he would know that committee meetings are often of much greater importance than calls of the house. Citron had charged that Freeman was listed as absent or not voting on 676 out of the 1,776 rolls called in the house during the last ten years.

Congressman Freeman's letter follows:

"In reply to your latest telegram I would say that if you were more cognizant with congressional affairs, you would know that committee meetings are often of much greater importance than calls of the house, which occur simply to obtain a quorum. There is no necessity for any joint debate between us, for my record is an open book that may be studied by yourself and all others among my constituents at their pleasure."

Mr. Citron has replied with another demand for a debate.

STATE HIGHWAY DEPT. READY FOR FIRST SNOW

Although there is normally no heavy snowfall in Connecticut until late in December or early in January, the state highway department has already put into first class condition its snow removal and road clearing equipment in anticipation of its annual warfare against snow blocking roads and wintry weather, according to an announcement today by State Highway Commissioner John A. Macdonald.

On the various roads throughout the state, the highway department has 70 garages, and in those garages is housed its road clearing apparatus. Snow plows ten feet in width are now ready to be attached at the first sign of considerable snow to each of the motor trucks of the department's vast fleet, number close to 500. Every one of those trucks, carrying crews of three to five men, will automatically begin work as soon as the first snowfall of the winter season reaches a depth of three inches and these forces will continue the battle until every highway in the state is again open to traffic in both directions.

GIVES $3,696 JUDGMENT AGAINST GARAGE OWNERS

John James and Alex Parry, proprietors of the Commercial garage, are liable for the damage to an automobile owned by Warren L. Maynard of Southold, N. Y., caused by an employe, the late Leroy W. Bashaw, who took it from the garage without permission and wrecked it, a year ago. Judge John R. Booth of the superior court has handed down a decision finding the garage owners liable to the extent of $3,696.59 in favor of Mr. Maynard, who is a son-in-law of Police Officer Henry R. Fenton.

It was a year ago this month, Thanksgiving day morning, that Bashaw took the car, a New Packard straight eight coupe, from the garage, where Mr. Maynard had left it to be washed and stored. Bashaw struck a telephone pole on Thames street, wrecking the car and receiving injuries from which he died. The garage owners claimed they were not liable for the damage. Judge Booth says in his decision, which was filed Friday with the clerk of the superior court in this city:

The defendants rely on the rule exempting the master from liability for the acts of the servant not within the scope of his employment. This rule would undoubtedly free the defendant as from liability of the present action had been brought against them by one who had been injured by the negligent operation of the car by Bashaw. This, however, is an action of bailment, and the duty toward this plaintiff is different from the one existing under the circumstances above stated.

This duty held by the defendants to ordinary care not only in merely washing the car but also in caring for and protecting it until it was delivered to the plaintiff on the following morning. They had delegated this duty to Moraites and Bashaw and if either of them failed in this duty then their negligence or want of care was the defendant's also.

"Where by contract or statute the master is bound to do certain things, if he entrusts the performance of that duty to another, he becomes absolutely responsible for the manner in which the duty is performed, precisely the same as though he himself had performed it, and that without any reference to the question whether the servant was authorized to do the particular act. Where the master by contract or operation of law, is bound to do certain acts, he cannot excuse himself from liability upon the ground that he has committed that duty to another, and that he never authorized such person to do the particular act. Being bound to do the act, if he does it by another, he is treated as having done it himself, and the fact that his servant or agent acted contrary to his instructions, without his consent, or even fraudulently, will not excuse him.

The only case cited by the defendants holding that under similar circumstances, a garage keeper would not be liable is Fireman's Fund Insurance Co. vs. Schreiber, 150 Wis. 42, 135 N. W., 507, but the dissenting opinion is much more convincing than the majority one and seems to embody the doctrine followed by the weight of authority.

Employers Fire Insurance Co. vs. Consolidated Garage and Sales Co., 85 Ind. App. 674, 155 N. E., 533.

I do not consider that the check given the plaintiff, Exhibit 1, contains anything that under the law would relieve the defendants of their duty to exercise ordinary care, which I do not find was done.

The damage to the car is found to have been $3,500, to which should be added interest since Nov. 24, 1927, of $196.59, making a total of $3,696.59, for which sum with costs of judgment is rendered in favor of the plaintiff.

SUES MOORE'S ESTATE ON $20,000 CLAIM

Patrick J. Morley administrator of the estate of approximately $100,000 which was left by the late James E. Moore, long a real estate broker in this city, is to defend a claim for $20,000 brought against the estate in a suit by Elizabeth F. Edwards, wife of Edwin J. Edwards of this city. The suit brought by Mrs. Edwards in the superior court has just been filed with Clerk John H. Walker and is based on alleged promises made by Mr. Moore to Mrs. Edwards which have not been carried out and for services which she rendered for him and for care of a young child known as Elizabeth Moore.

Mr. Moore died in a hospital at Hartford March 27 1929 leaving no will nor any provision to carry out the agreement which Mrs. Edwards claims he made with her. His estate was appraised at $97,157 in which was included a piece of property at 170 Broadway at $18,000.

Mrs. Edwards claims that the services she rendered for Mr. Moore were worth $7,500 and that the expenses of caring for Elizabeth Moore until she is able to support herself will be $10,000.

The following allegations are made in the writ:

On or about Sept. 26, 1926 James E. Moore owned or was about to acquire a valuable piece of real estate located in the city of Norwich known as 170 Broadway and at the same time, Moore promised and agreed with the plaintiff to give and bequeath to her the property, in consideration of her promises and agreement to furnish him and his chauffeur board, lodging and care at her cottage at Pleasant View, R. I. during the months of June, July, August and September, of each year—to assume control and management of the property which consisted of a large number of apartments—to give him the said Moore, a home, board, lodging and care at the premises—to perform and render him any personal services which he requested and desired—and to care for, clothe and educate a young child known as Elizabeth Moore in whom the decedent was much interested and to whom the decedent was much attached.

The plaintiff, Mrs. Edwards, since Sept. 19, 1926, furnished board and her summer home and she assumed the control and management of the lodging for the months mentioned at property at 170 Broadway, collecting the rents, cleaning the apartments, etc., and since Sept. 19, 1925, she furnished the deceased with dinner at the end of the day; he used and occupied her apartment at any time he saw fit, and he spent many evenings therein; the plaintiff did the decedent's laundry or caused it to be done and paid for it, and kept his wearing apparel in condition and mended it.

On or about Dec. 26, 1927, the decedent became seriously ill of heart trouble, and from that time down to the time of his death he was unable to lie down and obtain rest in bed, and during that period the decedent lived in the plaintiff's apartment and she furnished him board and lodging and all the personal care and attention which he needed and required and a few days before his death the plaintiff took him to Hartford and was with him at the time he died in that city and during the period the plaintiff at the decedent's request disbursed for his account a considerable sum for medicines, tobacco and literature and other necessities and luxuries, which he asked for and required at that time; and during the entire period from Sept. 19, 1925, down to the date of his death, the plaintiff did the laundry or caused it to be done at her expense.

On or about Sept. 19, 1925, the decedent brought the child Elizabeth Moore to the plaintiff and since that time she has supported clothed and cared for the child Elizabeth Moore, and is ready, willing and able to support, care for and educate the child until she is able to support and care for herself.

COURT TO APPROVE SALE OF MYSTIC MILL PROPERTY

As soon as the deed is filed, Judge John Richards Booth of the superior court will approve the report of P. LeRoy Harwood, the committee of sale, who sold the buildings, grounds and equipment of the former Mystic Worsted Mills, Inc., now the Mystic Manufacturing Co., for $10,000 to Attorney Charles A. Gallup, counsel for Albert F. Berrenger, Lawrence M. Symmes, Clarence G. Hale and Mr. Harwood, the bondholders' committee of the Mystic Manufacturing Co. The report was submitted at Friday's short calendar session of the superior court in this city, the sale having taken place on Oct. 5. Six tracts of land were included in the sale.

Last July, judgment was given the American Bank & Trust Co., of Bridgeport for $245,233.33 in foreclosure proceedings against the Mystic Worsted Mills, Inc.

The committee, which bought the property for $10,000, represents $157,000 of the $190,000 outstanding bonds and a reorganization is to take place in the Mystic Manufacturing Co. and the plant will continue to operate.

The redemption day in the foreclosure action of the Savings Bank of New London against Abraham Bronstein and Rose Bronstein, which was set for the first Monday in November, has been put ahead to the fourth Monday in this month.

The report of William T. May, receiver of the rents and revenues in the building at the corner of Connecticut avenue and Broad street, in New London in the case of Coroley against Strout and others, was accepted and the receiver was awarded compensation in the amount of $191.69.

EPIDEMIC HITS PHEASANTS WITH FATAL RESULTS

An epidemic of some fatal disease not yet certainly diagnosed, has broken out among the pheasants of Rhode Island and Connecticut, it was learned at the state board of fisheries and game Friday. It has hit breeders particularly hard, especially in Rhode Island, according to letters and reports Supt. John W. Titcomb of the board has received, and in some instances has killed as many as 20 in one day in a breeder's flock. Hunters and farmers also have found several pheasants dead in the woods, killed, to all appearances, by this same disease.

Superintendent Titcomb urges anyone finding a pheasant dead, apparently from disease, to send the specimen to the state board's offices at Hartford at once that it may be examined at the laboratories. Fresh specimens only will be of any use, however. Some birds have been brought in for autopsy but have been dead too long to make any examination possible. The state laboratories at New Haven are prepared to make examinations for bacteria, while Dr. George E. Corwin, deputy state commissioner on domestic animals, is also ready to make examinations for his department.

Although no diagnosis has yet been made, it is believed by Superintendent Titcomb that the disease will in all probability be found to be one common to fowl and of no great danger. Indications are that the disease now under observation strikes for a few days but then disappears. How far it will be spread cannot yet be determined. Reports from breeders in Rhode Island and Connecticut show that it is now running in both of these states. Whether it is prevalent in Massachusetts and New York, Mr. Titcomb will endeavor to learn.

With over 17,000 pheasants put out by the state this year, the hunting season for this game bird has been anticipated this fall as the best the state has seen in years. At present authorities feel there is no grounds of thinking this disease will spoil the remainder of the season. They urge, however, that steps be taken at once toward diagnosis if dead pheasants are found.

BAUER GIVES RECITAL THAT DELIGHTS AUDIENCE

Harold Bauer, hailed as a master pianist by many critics, held a large audience spellbound at Slater hall Friday evening when he appeared in a piano recital in the Slater hall musical course.

Mr. Bauer opened his programme with Bach's Suite in A minor, including prelude, sarabande, bourree and gigue. His tone was at all times vibrant and musical, his shadings smooth and flowing, his command of technique complete, making him interpretation of every varying mood of the composer a delightful demonstration of his artistic insight.

This was followed by Schubert's Sonata in B flat, with four movements, molto moderato, andante sostenuto, scherzo and allegro ma non troppo.

One of the triumphs of the evening was his rendering of Schumann's Fantasiestuecke, Op. 12, full of warmth and color, as it comprised Des Abends, Aufschwung, Warum, Grillen, In der Nacht, Fabel, Traumeswirren and Ende vom Lied.

The programme closed with another beautifully rendered group, which comprised the Brahms Rhapsody in E flat, Ravel's "Ondine" (dedicated to Mr. Bauer), and Chopin's Ballade in A flat.

CONG. FREEMAN ENDORSED GILMAN IN BOZRAH

In a recent republican rally in Bozrah, where Congressman Richard P. Freeman was a speaker, he paid a tribute to Nathan Gilman of Bozrah as a citizen whose enterprise during his 35 years residence there had been an asset to the town. He referred especially to Mr. Gilman's organization of an electric power company through which electric light and power were provided for that territory and to his interest in encouraging the location of summer resorts in that section, which were a substantial element of business activity in the town. Congressman Freeman cordially endorsed Mr. Gilman's candidacy as representative from Bozrah and said that the citizens could not have selected a better man for their representative in the legislature.

MRS. JAMES PURDON, JR. GIVEN FAREWELL PARTY

A farewell party, in the form of a masquerade, was held Friday evening at the home of Miss Jane Sullivan, in honor of Mrs. James Purdon, Jr., who is to leave town shortly to make her home in Greenville, S. C. As a token of their esteem, the guests, numbering 25, presented Mrs. Purdon a traveling case and hand bag containing a sum of money.

The house was effectively decorated, the costumes of the guests contributing to the Halloween effect. Games and stunts were enjoyed and refreshments were served by Mrs. Edward J. Sullivan, assisted by Mrs. Annie Geary, Mrs. Thomas Welsh, Mrs. James Purdon, Sr., and Mrs. George Baker.

Entertained at Halloween Party

ACADEMY FACES WINDHAM HIGH THIS AFTERNOON AT WILLIMANTIC

The Academy was due after a real jinx this afternoon at Windham in a regularly scheduled conference game for the Red and White has not beaten the Thread Cityites in their own back yard since the latter part of 1917 when Al Heneault blocked a punt for a touchdown and Cliff Oat kicked the goal for a 7 to 6 victory.

The game this afternoon is the Academy's third league start with much of importance hinging on the tussle. The Wildcats, tied with Stonington in the Eastern Conn.-Western Rhode Island conference, must win today to keep in the running for the first championship in this circuit. Stonington, likewise, must win over Chapman Tech, but that fact is not of so much importance to the local fans.

Windham is in the midst of one of her most disastrous seasons and really has little hopes of victory, wishing only to keep the score down. However, there are too many shining examples in Eastern Connecticut annals of this sort of a team making plenty of trouble for the highly touted favorite and today may be one of those days.

Has Not Won a Game

Windham has not won a game this year. Her best showing was against Stonington last Saturday when she lost in the final minutes on a fumble. Whether that indicates Windham's grid fortunes are on the upward trend or whether Stonington had an off-day is unknown but the fact remains that if Callaghan's men play as they did a week ago they can make it a battle, at least.

A "pep" rally was held at Windham yesterday and the school in general, is foot ready for a victory. Windham highly prizes its age-old rivalry with the Academy and considers this game as the major tilt of the year.

Windham's starting lineup will probably be: Merrill, Ahern and Berriner, ends; Monast, Whitford and Tomasko; Harlow, Smith, Kelleher and Rose and center, Capt. Nelson with Warren at quarterback with Chase and Woodward at halves and Meikle at fullback.

N. F. A. to Use Regulars

The Academy's probable opening array will be: Bergbinzo and Tobari, ends; Kahn and Hertz, tackles; Fox and Miah guards; Cruickshank, center with Brock at quarterback, Fagan and Capt. LaCroix at halfbacks and Jack Marks at fullback.

Johnny McGrath, East Hartford coach will referee with two men from Wesleyan assisting. The game is at Recreation park starting at 2.30.

Wildcats Hold Big Series Edge

The Windham-Academy series, dating from 1907, finds the Academy on the big end of an uneven slate, having won 21 games, lost five and played four ties. The Academy has scored a total of 747 points against 155 for Windham.

However, where the shoe pinches for the Red and White followers is that Windham has not been vanquished on her home field since 1917 and to make it worse the last time (in 1923) the locals invaded Willimantic for football they were sent home with a 54 to 0 beating. It is to erase that defeat that will add a bit of extra fight to the Wildcats today. Last year Windham lost 7 to 0 at the campus.

BEAUREGARD TO FIGHT LUCCI AT HARTFORD ARENA

HARTFORD, Nov. 2—Foot Guard hall on next Thursday night will be the sceno of the fourth meeting between Pete Lucci of Clinton, Mass., and Al Beauregard, formerly of Norwich and now of Hartford, in one of the feature bouts of a program of action that calls for four eight-round star bouts.

Both Lucci and Beauregard are credited with turning in three real humming bouts that bristled with action all the way and in their former encounters at New London and at the New Haven Arena; in each bout the decision was booed considerably on account of the closeness and the fact that each have staunch rooters.

Dark Cloud Ruby Bradley of Holyoke, who has been going great of late, will meet the hard-punching Vernon Cormier of Worcester, who won a close decision over Bradley at Springfield this past summer. Bradley's record in the last six months has shown all wins excepting that of the Cormier fracas. This time Bradley hopes to even up matters.

Hop Wah, the Chinaman from New Haven who made himself a favorite here, will meet Mickey Roberts of Hartford who recently beat Brownie Tucker. This bout should bristle with action as both boys are of the ever-busy type and willing.

Another eight-rounder and a four-round preliminary will be announced in a few days to balance off a card that will make next Thursday night a real home of action at Foot Guard hall.

C. F. C. Basketball Team Starts Practice

The Central Fellowship Basketball team, commonly known as the C. F. C. team will hold their first practice of the season at the "Y" gym, next Monday evening at 8 o'clock. Coach Emery Davis wishes to have all his men on the floor for their first workout of the season. Any team wishing a game with this fast and hard battling team will please communicate with Manager S. J. Smith, 65 Waren street, Norwich. He would like especially to hear from the Putnam Silk Sox for a game in Putnam, also the Stonington Iron Men and the Mebs of New London.

MANY NEW FACES ON BLUE-GREEN TEAMS TODAY

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 2—(AP)—The twelfth gridiron meeting of Dartmouth and Yale here tomorrow, will be played without the main cogs of each machine and 11 regulars all told sitting out on one of the biggest games in the eastern sector of the day. Yale will be weakened by the absence of five first string men, including Garvey, its offensive threat. The Green numbers six cripples on its list of players, foremost of whom is Masters.

For the first time this week Stevens men took a respite from knocking each other around in scrimmage, a light signal practice, without detection, being held in the bowl this afternoon. Up in Hartford where Coach Hawley quartered his players, word came that the team went without the daily menu of practice, not even donning togs. They will not have a chance now for a drill until they arrive in the bowl tomorrow afternoon. Despite the loss by both teams of their best ball carriers, a record breaking crowd of 70,000 fans is expected to look at the spectacle of star-less teams. New faces all around will be seen in both backfields and out of the lot may appear a future luminary. Dartmouth will call upon four second string men to carry the ball and the Elis have only Decker to produce of those who have started previous games.

Because of the number of injuries Dartmouth is being considered an even chance to win its first victory in 12 starts. In 1924 they came away with an even break but suffered defeat in the other ten clashes.

J. B. MARTIN SOCCER TEAM PLAYS BRADFORD SUNDAY

All roads head to the J. B. Martin grounds Sunday afternoon, when a large crowd is expected to be on hand for the soccer game between the Velvet men and the fast traveling Bradford F. C. of Rhode Island; this being one of the best amateur teams in this part of the country, having such stars in their lineup as the Weall brothers, who are well known in these parts, having played on the Bradford team that won the Bulletin cup and so they are coming to Taftville feeling confident in carrying off the honors. So the J. B's knowing what they are up against and wanting this game badly, the management has decided to rearrange the lineup and add new strength, the teams will be chosen from amongst the following players:

J. B. Martin—Day, Greenhalgh, Troeger, Labenski, Headon, Hargreaves, Pepin, Eccleston, Deceles, Archibald, Joubert, Houston, Burke.

Bradford — Billings, Waddington, Weall, Harrison, Hopwood, Rae, Young, Atkinson, Weall, Weall, Spencer, Willis, Holt, Ferranova.

Referee: R. Pilling; linesmen, Gregory, Patnaud.

HIGH STRUNG WINS THE PIMLICO FUTURITY

BALTIMORE, Nov. 2—(AP)—High Strung, Marshall Fields' chestnut two-year-old, winner of the Belmont Futurity, added to his honors today by winning the Pimlico Futurity today in the classic of the second day of racing at Pimlico.

The two-time Futurity winner beat out Walter J. Salmon's Dr. Freeland by a head in a thrilling finish. Neddie, E. B. McLean's entry, was six lengths in the rear for third place.

There were ten starters. The race was worth $51,650 to High Strung, a heavy favorite in the betting. The winner paid $3.70 to win; $3.20 to place and $2.60 for show. Dr. Freeland paid $7.50 place money and $3.70 to show. Neddie paid $2.90 for show.

The victory marked Marshall Fields' second Futurity win here, as his Stimulus won the race in 1924.

High Strung, ridden by Pony McAtee, ran the mile in 1:39 flat.

Football Finals

At Ashland, Ohio: Ashland college, 30; Findlay college, 0.

At Berea, Ohio: Hiram, 6; Baldwin-Wallace, 0.

At Gambier, Ohio: Kenyon, 6; Mount Union 31.

AGGIES TACKLE COAST GUARDS TODAY

(Special to The Bulletin)

STORRS, Nov. 2—Several changes will be apparent in the Conecticut Aggie lineup that faces the New London Coast Guard tomorrow at 2:30 in the annual gridiron contest between these two elevens since Head Coach Sumner A. Dole is anticipating a hard game next Saturday with New Hampshire and is attempting to save as many regulars as possible. The Nutmeggers cannot be too confident at the prospect of the game here Saturday for the service eleven has been sporting a strong aggregation all season.

Three regulars, Edward Colacurcio, William McCombe, and Rhoar Flydal, will grace the sidelines in the Coast Guard game in order to give them a rest while their positions will be occupied by substitutes. John Stangle will play the guard berth in place of Colacurcio while Sam Harger will take the full back position with Flydal getting an off day. Another change in the backfield will place Eugene Lamoureux at quarterback and Ray Ryan, regular signal caller, will take McComb's place at half. All of these changes will have very little effect on the Blue and White machine since it has always been the custom of the Nutmeg coaches to mix up the players in practice in order to acquaint everyone with the position that they may be called on to play.

All the first string men were given another day of respite today and only three regulars appeared on the field for practice. Coe Hawkins, regular tackle and punter, drilled on kicking the pigskin. Pheno Tombari practiced on long forward passes that worked to perfection and Knaut, who has been on the sick list for awhile, resumed his duties as center by passing the ball to the punters.

The probable starting lineups are as follows:

| Connecticut | | Coast Guards |
|---|---|---|
| Wilson, le | | le, Piekas |
| Hawkins, lt | | lt, Winbeck |
| Stangle, lg | | lg, Diehl |

Referee, French (Hamilton); umpire, C. A. Webber (Boston); head linesman, R. W. Coutes (Springfield). Time of kick-off, 2:30.

HIGH SCHOOL SPORTS

Prospects of gray skies and probably rain for today's grid battles fails to damper the enthusiasm of high school sport enthusiasts in this section. Two important conference games are down for settlement today, the Windham-Academy at Willimantic and Stonington-Chapman Tech at New London. There is a possibility of a break in the first place tie in this league before nightfall. The Academy and Stonington are now running neck and neck with two victories and no defeats.

The Academy ought to beat Windham by two touchdowns today; Stonington should take Chapman Tech by about the same margin and Hartford High should set back Bulkeley in New London by a little greater margin.

The Academy lost its cross-country run to Bulkeley Thursday afternoon, 29 to 28.

Westerly turned back LaSalle academy of Providence in both football and cross-country Thursday afternoon at Westerly. The football score was 14 to 12 and that in cross-country 26 to 29.

Capt. Powers of Stonington who was hurt in the Windham game a couple of weeks back is about again and is expected to be ready for the game with Westerly, one week from Monday.

KOZIOL KAYOES MORRISSEY THEN LOSES TO MCNUTT

(Special to The Bulletin)

PROVIDENCE, Nov. 2—Al Koziol, the Cranston Crasher, won and lost in his two bouts here tonight at the Arcadia arena. Koziol flattened Jim Morrissey, the Fall River slugger in the first round in a furious attack that had the Fall River boy completely smothered. In his second bout Koziol took on Emil McNutt of Milford in a return engagement, Koziol having knocked out McNutt in the third round here three weeks ago. McNutt had apparently learned something from his past experience and boxed the Crasher rather than mix it with him. At the end of the third round the judges ruled the bout a draw and ordered a fourth stanza. In this round McNutt slightly outpointed Koziol to take a hairline decision.

Through his remarkable knockout record Koziol has earned the right to represent New England in the 135 pound class at the international bouts to be held at the Boston arena on January 23rd. The controlling body of the New England A. A. U. was unanimous in naming Koziol as its representative.

COLLEGE ELEVENS ENTER HOME STRETCH IN RACE FOR GRID HONORS

By ALAN J. GOULD
(Associated Press Sports Editor)

NOTEWORTHY, NEW YORK, Nov. 2—(AP)—Approximately 2,500,000 football fans will turn out tomorrow for the November blast that carries college teams down the home stretch.

Gridirons of the middle west are in the path of a Rocky Mountain snow storm.

Nevertheless the turnout appears certain to break all records so far this season.

Three of the outstanding affairs of the day promise to attract about 80,000 each, with Illinois invading Michigan, Princeton traveling to Ohio State and Stanford journeying to Southern California.

Close to 50,000, or more, are expected to be on hand for such other noteworthy games as Georgetown-NewYork university at the Yankee stadium, Yale-Dartmouth in the Yale bowl, Alabama-Wisconsin at Madison, Notre Dame-Penn State at Franklin field, Chicago-Pennsylvania at Stagg field, Oregon-California at Berkeley and Cornell-Columbia at New York.

Here are ten games over a widespread area that alone should contribute around 600,000 to the game's astonishing attendance figures.

The experts have emerged from the scramble of figures and portents with sufficient unity to establish favorites in these important events:

New York university to beat Georgetown in a battle between two of the east's leading unbeaten arrays.

Yale to conquer Dartmouth because the latter faces a double barrier—the Eli jinx and a crop of injuries.

Ohio State to beat Princeton, with line play a deciding factor.

Cornell to nose out Columbia in a tight battle.

Wisconsin to defeat Alabama.

Nebraska to trim Kansas.

Utah to vanquish Colorado college.

Southern Methodist to check the Texas rush.

Stanford to beat Southern California in another close affair.

Notre Dame to beat Penn State.

In most of the other outstanding games a toss-up is the best average of opinion. In this class are such games as: Pennsylvania-Chicago, Holy Cross-Brown, Pittsburgh-Syracuse, Illinois-Michigan, California-Oregon and Minnesota-Northwestern.

In its importance to claims upon the eastern title, the N. Y. U.-Georgetown game overshadows the Yale-Dartmouth contest, the edge of which has been a bit dulled by the defeats behind the Illini will be dropped from the top group of the "Big Ten," now shared with Ohio State and Iowa.

Nebraska, after the Huskers' crushing defeat of Missouri, is confident of moving along toward the "Big Six" title over the opposition of Kansas, just as Utah's adherents predict the momentum their great team has gained so far will carry it through Colorado college's defeat and toward the Rocky Mountain peaks again.

Pop Warner's Stanford Cardinals are out to stick around the Pacific Coast conference top for the third straight year but they must shake off their 1927 championship rival, Southern California, to do it. These two teams are only a single point apart in two years of fierce competition. They tied last year at 13-13 and Stanford won in 1926 by 13-12. It would not be surprising to see another close conflict tomorrow, even though the Cardinals have the heaviest backing.

DE VOS WINS VERDICT OVER DAVE SHADE

COLISEUM, Chicago, Nov. 2—(AP)—Rene De Vos, Belgian menace to the world's middleweight crown held by Mickey Walker, defeated Dave Shade, San Francisco, in a ten round battle in the Coliseum tonight.

The verdict of the two judges and the referee was unanimous. It was the second victory the Belgian invader has scored over the San Francisco veteran.

Benefit Bout Cancelled

DETROIT, Nov. 2—(AP)—The proposed benefit boxing show for the widow of Kid Lavigne was cancelled tonight when creditor sof the promoter attached the gate receipts and the main events fighters. Lone Tenario and Ray Miller, refused to exhibit their wares without financial recompense.

COMMISSIONER RULES AGAINST MARQUETTE PROTEST

NEW YORK, Nov. 2—(AP)—Football savants may be called upon to decide the question, when is a foul not a foul.

Frank J. Murray, football coach at Marquette university has written Walter B. Okeson, commissioner of eastern officials, asking if a referee was right in depriving his team of an opportunity to kick a goal after touchdown in a game with Holy Cross resulting in a six to six tie.

As explained to Commissioner Okeson by Coach Murray, Marquette had tied the score with five minutes to play. The referee, James E. Keegan, of Pittsfield, Mass., brought the ball out and placed it on the three yard line. Holy Cross assumed the defensive and Marquette went into its accustomed huddle.

"But when our place kicker got ready to kick for the point, the referee ran up, seized the ball and notwithstanding remonstrances paced up the field with it and put it on the 40 yard line with the declaration that they had forfeited their right to try by taking over 30 seconds."

The coach said that he had been informed by his captain and players that they did not know that play was ready.

Coach Murray, in his letter to Commissioner Okeson, asked for an interpretation of the rules and especially as to when the ball was placed in play after the touchdown.

Referee Keegan in reply to a telegram from the Associated Press asking his position, said that a foul is any violation of the rules, under rule 6, section 8, that Marquette violated rule 14, section 3, by failing to put the ball in play at expiration of allotted time, and that under rule 10, if a foul is committed by the side making a try for a point after touchdown, it forfeits the opportunity to score the additional point.

Burgess Bedtime Story

Rusty Barely Escapes.

Be margin great or margin small,
Be thankful for escape at all.
—Rusty the Fox Squirrel.

When Rusty the Fox Squirrel parted from his cousin, Happy Jack the Gray Squirrel, over in the Green Forest, he headed straight south. He intended to make a long journey. That is, he intended to make what would be a long journey for a little fellow like him. He intended to keep going until he found a place where food was plentiful. Presently Rusty came to the edge of the Green Forest. Before him stretched the Green Meadows. Rusty didn't like the looks of the Green Meadows. He didn't like the idea of crossing them. You see, while he feels very much at home on the ground, he wants trees very near at hand, and on the Green Meadows there were no trees, save a few widely scattered ones.

"Oh, dear!" said Rusty. "I suppose there's nothing for it but to go ahead. I haven't any wings, so I can't fly. To go around would take too long. I do hope that Reddy Fox and Mrs. Reddy are nowhere around. Well, if I've got to do it, I've got to do it, so here goes!" Away went Rusty the Fox Squirrel, bounding along as a Squirrel does. When he started there wasn't an enemy in sight, but he was only about two-thirds across when Redtail the Hawk came sailing over the Green Meadows. He saw Rusty at once. He saw Rusty long before Rusty saw him. When Rusty did see him, Redtail was coming fast. Rusty's heart almost stopped beating. What should he do? Just ahead of him was an old fence. Some bushes were growing along that old fence. If he could once reach those bushes perhaps he could find a place of safety. You should have seen him run then! And you should have seen Redtail fly! He saw where Rusty was heading and he meant to catch him before he could get there. The wind whistled through the feathers of his wings as he swooped for Rusty. But Rusty had reached the bushes just in time. They didn't give him a great deal of protection, but they gave him enough. Try as he would, Redtail couldn't catch him. After trying a few times, Redtail flew to the top of a tall tree some distance away. From there he could watch Rusty and he doubted if Rusty could see him.

"If I can once get him out on the open meadows again I'll have him!" said Redtail. "Yes, sir, I'll have him. All I need is to get him away from those bushes. And he's got to cross the open meadows to get away. I believe he was on his way south. He must be leaving the Green Forest. I have heard say that nuts are scarce this year. That must be it. He's going to look for a place where nuts are more plentiful. Well, perhaps he'll get there and perhaps he won't. He won't if I can help it."

Poor Rusty! He was in a peck of trouble, as the saying is. His eyes were not quite good enough to see Redtail on that distant tree, but he had guessed where Redtail had gone. "He hasn't given me up yet," thought Rusty. "No, sir, he hasn't given me up yet. He's watching somewhere and he'll come swooping down after me as soon as I am far enough away from these bushes. I can't stay here forever. This is no place for a Squirrel, anyway. My, my, what am I going to do? Well, I can stay here as long as he can watch, and I guess that's what I'll have to do. Goodness gracious, what would I do if Reddy Fox should come along now?" At the very thought Rusty's heart seemed to flop right over and little shivers seemed to run around underneath his skin.

POETRY

A Song of the Seasons

Sing a song of Springtime,
'Tis world is going round,
Blown by the south wind,
Listen to its sound.
"Gurgle" goes the millwheel,
"Cluck" clucks the hen;
And it's O for a pretty girl
To kiss in the glen.

Sing a song of Summer,
The world is nearly still.
The millpond has gone to sleep.
And so has the mill.
Shall we go a-sailing,
Or shall we take a ride,
Or dream the afternoon away
Here, side by side?

Sing a song of Autumn,
The world is going back;
They glean in the cornfield,
And stamp on the stack.
Our boy, Charlie,
Tall, strong and light;
He shoots all the day
And dances all the night.

Sing a song of Winter,
The world stops dead;
Under snowy coverlid
Flowers lie abed.
There's hunting for the young one
And wine for the old
And a sexton in the churchyard
Digging in the cold.
—Cosmos Monkhouse, in the Indianapolis News.

Sunshine and Shadows

When your soul is in the shadows and you're feeling sort of blue;
When the world seems cold and dreary and the way seems dark to you;
Just remember for each shadow that may fall on you or me
Sure, there must be sunshine somewhere, or that shadow could not be.

Don't sit brooding in the shadows, don't give up to feeling blue;
For the sun is always shining if you'll let it shine on you.
Raise your eyes above the shadows; in the clouds a rift you'll see;
That's to let the sunshine through to brighten life for you and me.

What's the use of being gloomy—just as easy to be glad?
What's the use of hugging shadows, when there's sunshine to be had?
What's the use to broadcast sadness, try to scatter words of cheer;
If your face is toward the sun, your shadow's always in the rear.
—S. Morris Meck

DERAILED FREIGHT CARS DELAY TRAVEL AND PAPERS

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, R. I., Nov. 2—Westerly commuters east-bound on the New Haven railroad, and metropolitan newspapers were delayed for hours this morning, due to the derailment of two freight cars on an east-bound train, New Haven 10 Providence, which occurred near Aptuxnang and blocked both main lines. The 4:15 east-bound express had passed the location before the wreck, but the 4 o'clock mail and express train proceeded east only to have the train backed up through Westerly to Boston, thence by way of Norwich and Plainfield to proceed to Providence. Both New York and Boston papers did not arrive until noon. A Stonington woman and guest, when she found that the east-bound morning expresses were delayed and uncertain, declared that she must be in Boston and, securing a taxi, accompanied her guest to Boston by automobile. Many commuters took the morning motor bus to the city and others were cared for by local passenger train service and buses to their city destination. Incoming school children were delayed an hour or two in reaching Westerly school rooms.

Tuesday, Nov. 6, election day, the polls in Westerly Town hall in the two Westerly voting districts will be open from 9 a. m. to 7 p. m. In round numbers there are 4,700 freemen in Westerly qualified to vote, the largest number in the history of the town.

At the board of canvassers' meeting of Westerly town council, Thursday night, Councilman James Nacarata was named as gate-keeper in the First voting district and A. Barclay Robertson, in the Second voting district.

No cases were tried by Judge Oliver H. Williams at the Friday morning session of Third district court. Court matters were disposed of as follows: Criminal docket—State, James A. Norman, department of state police, vs. Clary V. Palmer. Infraction of motor traffic laws. Continued one month. Civil docket—Charles H. Gavitt vs. Joseph A. Guarino. Continued two weeks. The court had been in session but seven minutes when Sheriff Fred T. Mitchell declared it adjourned.

LIST OF VOTERS HAS INCREASED 1,015

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, R. I., Nov. 2—In the nearly two-hour canvass of the Westerly voting list on Thursday night, the result was the addition of just 20 names to the list, which brings the total voting strength of both districts up to 4,752, an increase of 1,015 votes over 1927. In the presidential election of 1924 there were 4,258 qualified electors in the town of Westerly, showing an increase at this election of 492 votes. During the canvass, 13 names of citizens of the town were added to the real estate list; four were added to the registry list; eight qualified as registry voters when the star was removed from their names, most of these having become citizens and six names were stricken from the real estate list. Nineteen changes were made in the lists by shifting of names from one district to the other.

The names of two former residents of Westerly, a man and his wife, who had moved to Fishers Island, were taken off the list. These former voters in Westerly are now voters on Fishers Island, N. Y. Thomas V. Clancy and James Salimeno, local democratic leaders, appeared before the council in the interests of parties who wanted their names placed on the list or stricken from it.

Previous to the canvassers' meeting last evening the record of registration in the town clerk's office showed that there were 2,072 qualified voters in the First representative district and 2,660 in the Second district, making a total of 4,732 for 1928. The total number was increased last night by 20 votes, making the voting strength of both districts 4,752. It has not been figured just how the additional votes are distributed by districts, but there will be a slight variation in the distribution of 20 votes.

IN NORWICH FIFTY YEARS AGO

Prentice Avery was nominated as candidate from the first district and Ira B. Rude was named the second district candidate. The week in Norwich a half century ago was an unusually quiet one, as little of note worth chronicling occurred. Interesting extracts taken from the files of The Bulletin of fifty years ago are as follows:

Monday, Oct. 28, 1878—The greenbacks of Preston, to the number of ten, gathered at the town house, Saturday night, for the purpose of nominating candidates for representatives to the general assembly. ### RELIGION

If a man is square and decent and is doin' all he can,
To be livin' as he ought to, as an honest, manly man
I believe it's pretty likely, when his days on earth are through,
And he goes to his Hereafter, he will get his rightful due.
I believe that his religion, though with him I can't agree,
Makes but mighty little difference, or at least it does to me

I don't think St. Peter will ask us, when he sees us at the gate,
To explain what we believe in, nor our doctrines make us state
For it's not what we're professin', nor the Church that we attend,
That decides what life awaits us when this life has reached its end.
But it seems to me the answer as to what's our final worth,
Is the life that we've been living while here upon this earth.

I think every man's entitled to believe just what he wants,
And I'm sure he's not deservin' of our ridicule and taunts,
If we have a faith that's different: for the chances are that he,
In his faith is just as earnest, just as worthy as we are.
Man's religion's pretty empty if it can't be put to use
By a show of toleration, and by freedom from abuse.

No, it's not the race nor color, nor the doctrine, nor the creed,
By which Heaven's goin' to judge us, but the life we daily lead.
You can have your own religion, and I'm sure I'll stick to mine,
And I think our chances even, at the judgment seat divine
If we both are clean and honest, keep our banners wavin' high,
Pray to God with heart that's thankful—we'll not worry when we die.

MY FIDDLE

My fiddle!—Well I kindo' keeps her handy don't you know!
Though I ain't so much inclined to tromp the strings and switch the bow
As I was before the timber in my elbows got so dry,
And my fingers was more limber-like and capersian and spry;
Yet I can plunk and plunk and plunk, and tune her up and play,
And last lean back and wink
At every rainy day!

My playin's only middlin'—I picked up when a boy—
The kindo'—sorts' fiddlin' that the folks call "scrapin'"
"The Old Fat Gal," and "Rye-Straw," and My Sailvor's on the Sea,"
Is the old cowtillions I "saw" when the chice is left to me:
And so I plunk and clonk and plink, And rosume up my bow
And play the tunes that makes you think
The devil's in your toe!

I was allus a-romancin', do-less boy, to tell the truth,
A-fiddlin' and a-dancin', and a wastin' of my youth,
And a-actin' and a-cuttin'-un all sorts o' silly cranks
That wasn't worth a button of anybody's thanks!
But they tell me when I plunk and play,
My music seemed to have the kink
O' drivin' cares away!

That's how this here old fiddle's won my heart's indurin' love!
From the strines nearest her middle to the screechin' keys above,—
From her "apern," over "bridge," and to the ribbon round her throat,
She's a woopin' coin' pigeon, singin' "Love me" ev'ry note!
And so I pat her neck, and plink
Her strings with lovin' hands,—
And, list'nin close, I sometimes think
She kindo' understands!

RAIN ON THE ROOF

When the humid shadows hover
Over all the starry spheres,
And the melancholy darkness
Gently weeps in rainy tears,
What a joy to press the pillow
Of a cottage-chamber bed,
And to listen to the patter
Of the soft rain overhead!

Every tinkle on the shingles
Has an echo in the heart;
And a thousand dreamy fancies
Into busy being start;
And a thousand recollections
Weave their air-threads into woof,
As I listen to the patter
Of the rain upon the roof.

Now in memory comes my mother,
As she used, in years agone,
To survey her darling dreamers
Ere she left them till the dawn;
Oh, I see her leaning o'er me,
As I list to this refrain
Which is played upon the shingles
By the patter of the rain.

Then my little saraph sister,
With her wings and waving hair,
And her bright-eyed cherub brother—
A serene, angelic pair—
Glide around my wakeful pillow,
With their praise or mild reproof,
As I listen to the murmur
Of the soft rain on the roof.

And another comes to thrill me
With her eyes' delicious blue;
And I mind not, musing on her,
That her heart was all untrue;
I remember that I loved her
With a passion kin to pain,
And my heart's quick pulses vibrate
To the patter of the rain.

Art hath naught of tone or cadence
That can work with such a spell
In the soul's mysterious fountains,
Whence the tears of rapture well,
As the melody of Nature,
Thus subdued, subduing strain
Which is played upon the shingles
By the patter of the rain.

DELICIOUS DISHES.

Dear Social Corner Editor and Sisters: I used to go to New York to do my buying for my store. Sometimes we ate luncheon at New York's most exclusive hotels and restaurants. Not always, but occasionally, I could find something so good, and yet so easy to make, that it was adapted to my ability to make it as it was by the highly skilled chef. Is there a hostess who does not welcome a new idea, whether for a brand new dish or the newest wrinkle in serving?

At the Manhattan hotel, one of the famous Commodore, Belmont, Biltmore group, was served to one epicure guest who himself directed the first mixing, a Frapped Camembert so good that the process cannot be accused of "painting the lily." His directions call for a Camembert cheese well ripened and thoroughly beaten with two tablespoons of butter, 1-2 teaspon of paprika, 3 or 4 dashes of tobasco and 3 drops of Worcestershire sauce. Beat until smooth, then chill thoroughly and serve in a dish surrounded by finely crushed ice. Accompany it with piping hot toasted crackers. The ice-cold cheese with crisp hot crackers and a brew of black coffee—is there anything more needed with which to end one's dinner perfectly? I tried it again when I came home in my own kitchen with the same directions. I was able to reach nearly the perfection of the hotel. Try balls of this frapped Camembert—can be rolled in paprika until they are a bright red—serve four or five of these on leaves of lettuce or romaine with French dressing.

At the Beaux Arts at the corner of Fortieth street and Sixth avenue they serve a wonderful cheese and egg dish. Of course, it had a French name but here is just how they made it. We called it Poached Egg with Rarebit Sauce. Poach eggs until they are set in salted water and be sure they are well covered. Remove each to a round of toast which has been placed in an individual shirred egg dish. Pour over them a Welsh rarebit sauce made of milk, in the double boiler and brown quickly in a hot oven or under the broiler frame. Serve at once.

We had mock turtle eggs from the same restaurant. Melt one tablespoon of butter in a shallow casserole, cover with one-half cup dried bread crumbs and add one cup of condensed mock turtle soup mixed with one tablespoon of hot water. Break in three eggs carefully, sprinkle sparingly with salt and paprika. Add another one-half cup of dried bread crumbs and dot with one tablespoon of butter. Brown in a quick oven.

Here is a suggestion of serving the simplest of soups. This is for quick tomato soup. Place in a stew kettle one quart can of tomatoes, one pint water, three tablespoons each of butter and flour, two teaspoons of salt, two teapsoons of sugar, one-half teaspoon of mustard, three-fourths teaspoon of pepper. Stir well together. Bring gradually to a boil and boil 20 minutes. Strain and serve with toasted crackers.

To make a delicious macaroni custard prepare a rich boiled custard. In a double boiler scald one pint of milk. Beat four egg yolks slightly with one-fourth cup of sugar and one-eighth teaspoon of salt. Over the egg yolks gradually pour the hot milk. Return to the double boiler and cook until it thickens, stirring constantly. Remove and pour in one cup of stale almond macaroons all crumbled and two tablespoons of jelly. Beat hard and cool thorough on ice. Serve in glasses topped with whipped cream.

PLEASED WITH CRETIA'S LETTER

Dear Social Corner Sisters and Editor: It has been some time since I sent a line to the page. I have read the letters and miss them if I don't get my paper. Some very interesting letters and recipes and every good thing. Was pleased to read Cretia's letter of Hampton. I know all those places and people. Mr. and Mrs. Owen were my aunt and uncle. She was my Aunt Ruth, my father's sister. The two youngest girls were Lydia Jeanette and Josephine Victoria Owen, always called Jennie and Josie. Jennie married Mr. Dexter Young of Brooklyn, Conn., and lives there now. And Josie married Charles Lewis Enock Dewis' son. She went out west at the time Dr. Gardner went and lived in Kansas. She died several years ago, so only Jennie is living now.

My, how the people have passed on since I left Hampton 29 years ago. Can't count but a very few that were living there when I was 20 to 30 years old, but we all have got to pass the same way sooner or later.

Ann Tenna: I think I know where you live, not far from where I lived four years ago when my husband worked for Mr. C. P. G., then your mother and father were living there.

Aries: Don't think I have forgotten you. Oh, no. My head and eyes have been on the blink and so I did not use them very much to read or write, but had to spend my time out with my turkeys. I had 81 hatch out, but only have 37 living now. I don't intend to try any more for I can't stand the sun nor work. Not as young as I used to be. You see I haven't much to write about. Don't get out much. Would like so much to meet with the sisters but don't seem to be able to. With best wishes to everybody as ever and always. AUNT JERUSHA.

NEED KITTY LOU

Dear Social Corner Editor and members: It is quite a while since I sent a letter for the Corner page. As the membership grows we find there is always room for one more member, and taking the place of those who have left us—keeps the membership up to the usual.

Kitty Lou: By all means keep writing, as your letters are always so very interesting and helpful. It is nice to feel sure that we will hear from you. I always look for your letter on the Corner page. Let the good pen keep pushing.

Calla Lily: I agree with you and join you in urging Kitty Lou to keep on writing for our page. We need her faithful cheer.

Keep on writing. I like the idea of having the letters as they will publish. As some subjects take longer time and space as the all cannot.

What a beautiful fall we have had and everything now in the way of winter. With the election, Armistice and Thanksgiving approaching, November will be a very important month for us all. There has been so much excitement all over the country over the coming election that we hope before this time next week to know whether our vote won or not. Whatever you do, members, vote and vote right.

Sincere season's greetings to all, especially shut-ins, those in sorrow or trouble of any kind. I send deepest sympathy.

Now to all who are able and are voters I will close, and perhaps some of us will meet at the voting booth.

Sincerely,
ECLIPSE.

SURPRISED AND DISAPPOINTED

Dear Social Corner Sisters: When I opened my last Chatter I was surprised and disappointed, for that printer's devil had got busy and mixed things up quite considerable. The Corner page was just the same as it had been the week before.

Triple E: Thank you for the poem Ode to Lisbon, which you sent in some time ago. It was of interest to me, as I lived in that town more than 50 years ago. My school days began in the little schoolhouse in Newent. Can you tell me where the new one is built? We lived for five years quite near the school and church but we didn't have any R. F. D. man in those days. We had to go two miles away to Jewett City, for our mail and groceries.

Nema: Thanks many times for the poem, Edward Grey. It is the one I wanted, but you see I had forgotten the beginning of it. I think it is nearly 50 years since I read it.

I have been making a four days' visit with relatives and had a fine time. Have had a number of visitors in the summer, so I will have something to think of through the cold winter. Best wishes to everybody.

MOTHER SHIPTON'S PROPHECY

Dear Social Friends and Editor: This version of Mother Shipton's was first published in 1641. Mother Shipton's prophecy was cut from the North Star printed in Danville, Vt.

"Carriages without horses shall go, And accidents fill the world with woe; Around the world thoughts shall fly, In the twinkling of an eye; waters shall all more wonders do now strange shall yet be true; through hills man shall ride, and no horse be at his side, under water men shall walk; shall ride, shall talk; in air men shall be seen, in white, in black, in green; iron in the water shall float as corks and as a wooden boat; gold shall be found and found again, then in a land that's not now known; fire and water shall wonders do; England shall at last admit a Jew The world to an end shall come in 1951"

From an Old Scrap Book

Blinks: Do any swimming while you were on your vacation.

Jinks: No but when I got my bill at the hotel, it made my head swim.

Nonesopretty: I am still in the house by the side of the road (just around the corner).

When is the best time to read the Book of Nature? When autumn turns the leaves.

How many of the readers know that a dash of salt in a cup of coffee greatly improves its flavor.

HINTS FOR THE HOUSEHOLD.

Dear Editor and Members: If your skin is shiny and burns after washing it, it is probable that you are not rinsing the soap off carefully. After washing your face rinse it first in warm water; then in cold water. Use plenty of water. After the skin is well dried, try patting on witch-hazel, with just enough tincture of benzoin added to make a milky solution. This will remove the shiny look.

Here are a few hints for the household: Add the white of an egg to cream that will not whip.

Wet salt will remove egg stains from silver.

Fill a medicine dropper with water and press slowly as you move down a seam to be ironed or pressed. This gives just the right amount of moisture and makes the pressing easy.

Use adhesive tape instead of tacks to fasten the edges of oilcloth tables or shelves. You will find the job neater and easier.

The best way to reduce the meat bill is to cut down the amount of meat.

Always see that the water is boiling before putting in the vegetables.

Use scissors for cutting fruits for salads.

Tough meats require moisture and prolonged cooking at a gentle heat.

A yearly health examination by your family doctor is a big help in keeping well.

Please send in more spaths, I am making a collection. Thanks.

Mah Jongg's put upon the shelf,
Cross-words kept us busy,
Don't know what will be next,
It's enough to get you dizzy.

POEMS FROM ANN TENNA

Dear Social Friends and Editor: When I looked out this morning (Oct. 22nd) I said to my trees, "How bare and stylish you look with so few clothes on." (For nearly every leaf had fallen to the ground). When it was time for the mail I received a letter from my grand-daughter, with two of nature's descriptive poems which I am sending to surprise her, and which she kindly sent to me. I am sending them to you, as follows:

October Days

When the golden days of summer
With reluctant steps depart,
Then October paints her beauties
With a touch of master art;
When the rose of summer lingers
In the first autumnal days,
Then the rays of sunshine filters
Through the trees o'er woodland ways.
Yes, the landscapes all are lying
In the stillness of a dram,
Then my heart pulsates with rapture
As I view the glorious scene.
In the days of bright October,
Breezes soft float through the air,
Soothing hearts of troubled creatures—
Peace is resting everywhere;
In the meadow, near the roadside,
And in wood, a smile, and nod,
I behold a field of yellow—
'Tis the graceful goldenrod;
'Tis the sign of coming autumn,
When the leaves from green to gold,
And to brown and various colors
Change their dress for winter cold.

Fall

I like to see the winter freeze
And scatter crystals from the trees;
I like to see them bud and flower
And then to see a petal shower.
But yet I like the best of all
When golden leaves of autumn fall.

She writes: "You don't have to close your eyes to picture these poems—just look out of your window."

Said she, "What lovely fashions, dear;
They do so change from year to year."
"There's not much change that I can see—
In bookbooks," responded she.
"They're worn a little shorter, though,
And lighter than a year ago.

TWO WEEKS IN "THE LAND OF THE SKY"

Editor and Social Corner Readers: Our rest was undisturbed near the summit of Clingmans dome, 6630 feet altitude, until midnight when we were awakened by what seemed to be a stampede of the horses. Waking Trew, we told him something was disturbing the horses; no doubt a bear was looking for some of our provisions. "No, bar up this fur on the mornding, they know nuff tew keep down near when folks live; hit air some other varmint." Just then we heard a most phantive cry like that of a child, not far away. We have neighbers very near, we said to Trew, don't you hear the cry and mourning of some child? "That air a child of the devil I reken. You'd thing so if you seed him; hit air a catamount an he air a bad feller tew meet." Saying this Trew reaches for his trusty rifle and out he goes. The moon was bright, and we could see nearly as well as in daylight.

Following in the direction of the cry, Trew soon saw the glare of the eyes of the panther cat more than 30 feet above the ground lying close to an overhanging limb of a beach tree. We heard the crack of the rifle and soon Trew comes to the tent and said: "I reken I got him at the fust shot, fur he cum tumblin down nayway, as ded as Jeff Davis ever wor. In the mornin he'll luse his hide, as shure as shutin, an sum uv yew fellers will hev another rullock tew shew tew your folks the kind uv neighbors weuns hev heyr in the mountings."

The rest of the night was spent in peaceful slumber. Before the sun had appeared over the top of the Balsam range we had struck our tent, packed up our belongings and hastened up to the top to prepare breakfast and watch the beauty of a sunrise, as it shortened the ever changing shadows on the Carolina side of the "Great Smokies."

We are now standing astride of the boundary line between two states. The sky was clear and blue; the moon like a silver boat was sailing down the western slope of the headlands of the Chilhowees, and the Smokies stood in sharp outline in awful height; the sun had scaled the highest peak of the "Balsams," "Jones Knob," 5,224 feet high. The shadows were beginning to creep slowly up the precipitous side of the dome, as if they came from the depth of the earth.

A roseate suffusion idialized the range and peaks to the east. The balsams shed upon the air their perfume. What a tonic for lungs to breathe. Overlooking the Balsams we see the distant Pisgha Ridge with its Cold mountain, 6,000 feet in height, standing blue and misty against the horizon. We advance a few rods down the slope; we stand upon a precipice overlooking the wooded valley so far below, sheltered by a beething crag and shadowed by white oak, spruce and pine. Even in this wilderness far below us a clearing shows here and there and the roof of a humble log cabin. In the valley far, far lower still, a red spark at dusk may suggest a home nestled in the cove.

The sumer day climbed slowly over the distant mountains. Long the morning lingered among the crags and chasms, and the dwindling shadows. Again we look with reverential fears upon the scene spread out below and beyond us. So enchanting was the scene, we had forgotten breakfast until our guide, with his hands to his mouth shouts, "Air yuuns all gone plumb crazy tew forgit hit air breakfas time? What kin yuuns be er tewin on the mounting? I hev had the coffee er stewin fer an hour, more er less, an that air venison air a spliin tew be et, along uv that air corn bread Miss Ray giv us. I hev skinned that air varmint an he wor a likely one; never seen one more hansomer. Your folks will be proud uv that, fur a rug, ill warrant."

Breakfast ate, we saddled our horses and were soon on our way to view other scenic attractions. We are now on the North Carolina side of the mountains, having crosed the boundary line several times on our ascent of Clingmans dome. The boundary between the two states runs over the peaks of the Great Smokies, from the Georgia state line to Virginia. If one should follow this line he would "box the mariners' compass" more than once. Few of the readers may know that there are 82 peaks in the "Land of the Sky" that are over 5000 feet high.

To scale them all would take a month if they were accessible; many of them are not by either wagon or horse back. Continuing on the Carolina side of the mountain for nearly 6 miles, far away from any habitation or signs of life, and at an altitude varying from 5,000 to 6,000 feet not a sound was heard, except the clatter of the horses feet on the hard ground or broken shale. In a short time we enter the gorge of a rapid mountain stream, being a tributary of the Big Pigeon river that rises midway between the Balsam range and the Smokies. As we stop to rest ourselves and horses, we note the complete solitude of the location; not the same forest setting as that upon the dome, but shelving rocks, precipices of dizzy heights. Far above the clinging forest trees, angular and gnarled are the cedar, hemlock and other virgin forest trees, so thick as to almost turn daylight to darkness. These trees find soil and moisture, even among the shelving rocks; showing a tenacity of life that is truly wonderful.

We admire the wonders and wild pictures of nature. Grandure and solitude are twin companions; not a sound greets our ears; no sound of the fall of a mighty forest tree, felled by the woodman's axe, or the drum of the partridge or the whir of her wings or the twitter of the woodland birds fall upon our ears. Solitude is master of the situation. Unlike the solitude of which Alexander Selkirk complained: he cries out "O solitude where are thy charms." With us the charms are here; sublimity and grandure.

Passing along the edge of a precipice for nearly a mile, we commence the ascent of Mt. Guyot, almost a twin to Clingman's dome, 6,636 feet altitude. Halting at a spring we make coffee and eat lunch and feed the tired horses. There were so many wonders to see we have made slow progress up the rugged slope of Mt. Guyot. Now we ford a swift mountain stream, then down into a gulch, up again, turning sharp about to shun monstrous boldera and broken stone, some looking as if they had been fused in a terrible heat. Our horses stumble from near exhaustion. Urging them along we soon are on the pinacle of Mt. Guyot 6,636 feet above the wash of the tide.

Looking to the east we see the long shadows of the Balsams; to the west the roseate hues of the dying day. Darkness soon covers the crest, that has been so difficult to reach. Like a station to us who have always lived on a lower level, (but now as one might say nearer Heaven) the stars show greater brilliancy; this twinkling like a lighted torch, swayed by the wind, the size a third larger. All above is glorious, all around is solitude, all within is peace to the tired travels and jaded horses. Two hundred feet below on the Tennessee side, we find a shelter for the night under a "shelterine ledge," in a cavern large enough for ourselves and horses. Supper eaten and the tired horses cared for we indulged in a few game of auction pitch. Then to [illegible] land.

COOKING BEEF LIVER

Dear Social Corner Members: Isen where None-so-pretty lives her way of washing windows, so I will give mine. I give the window a good washing in soapy water, then wring a chamois out of clear water and go over them. I have tried several ways, but to me this seems the best, and if there is one thing I dislike to do more than another it is to wash windows.

Will tell you how I cook pig's or beef liver. So many times I have bought it and after carefully cooking it, it would be so tough. Now I put it through the meat grinder and drop it by spoonfuls in the hot fat in frying pan. Push pan to back of stove and cook slowly. When underside is done sprinkle with salt and ground sage. Turn, sprinkle with salt and cook until done on other side. Remove to hot dish. Pour a little hot water in frying pan and a shake of salt, scraping the sides and bottom of pans. Pour this gravy over the cooked meat. Had this for dinner yesterday with Rhode Island Johnny cakes, boiled potatoes, lima beans with cream and pumpkin pie for dessert. Just as we were sitting down to eat some one came to see the mister on business, so we invited him to have dinner and he said as well as seemed to enjoy it. I was more than glad I had not cooked the liver in the ordinary way.

Crimson Rambler: My! what a fright you must have had. Hope the patient will soon be all right.

Perhaps all of our members do not know that death has entered the home of Social Corner Sister Caille, taking the daughter, a beautiful girl who has been ill a long time. I know all will sympathize with the family in their loss.

Blandina: I am glad you had the chance to enjoy the beauties of Ole Devil's Hop yard. I like to go there, but have not been this year. Not long ago I went over the new road you spoke of from Colchester to Willimantic. It seemed too bad the mill was gone at Amston. It was a pretty little village with good looking tenements. I have often heard of Hebron, but had never been there, quite a village. When we got to Columbia we went out to the lake. It must be lovely there in summer. Everything so clean and well kept. We had thought we would eat our lunch there, but it was so very windy and cold we went on toward Willimantic and in a sheltered spot where we ate we were glad to remove our coats it was so warm. Quite a difference. From Willimantic we went to Storrs, very pretty up that way, around through Mansfield, back to Willimantic again, then we kept on the well known road through Norwich, home. From Colchester around to Storrs was new to me, and I do like to go on new roads or rather those I have not been over. It was at a time when autumn foliage was at its best and everything was very beautiful. I wondered Theoda if we went past your house.

Frances L.: Did you have a good time Friday afternoon? I went the next day and enjoyed it very much.

Rebecca and Lucile Drew: Have been trying to call on you for some time. I think you both better get out your pen and ink and use it.

Laurette: Glad to hear from you and that you are to be hostess at North Stonington next time.

Can any one tell what to do for a new iron sink to keep it from rusting or clean it from rust?

E. L. M.

WINTER CHESTS

Dear Social Corner Sisters: It's been quite a while since I have written, so will try and do my bit this week. It has so happened, I haven't attended any of the Social Corner picnics this past summer. I have enjoyed reading about them, also the trips the different sisters have taken.

Aries: I haven't forgotten that I owe you a letter. Would enjoy having a cup (?) of coffee with you again.

Votami: I have given up trying to win a prize when you are where I am.

Papa's Boy: I was surprised when I received your letter. I will try and answer soon. Hope the little ones are all well.

Nonesopretty: You see I am doing as you requested me to do. If we were all as faithful about writing as you are the editor wouldn't be bothered filling our page up with advertisements.

Whoa Emma: I have written to your sister. Think she is as well as she has been.

Moses' Wife: Can't you take your auto and come down some day to see 1492 and myself.

While you are looking over your chests, getting them ready for the winter, don't you think it would be a good plan to take one, or a trunk, or even a large box and fill it with sheets, pillow slips, towels, face cloths, pure soap, old pieces of soft cloth, rubbing alcohol, in fact whatever is needed in a sick room that you can get. Then if any of your family, or yourself, are taken ill you will know just where to look without having to hunt for the things needed. You will find it's worth the trouble, especially if you have to have a nurse. Place the box in a convenient place with a list of the contents on the cover. It will tide you over till there is time to get others, if needed.

Hope to hear that those who are ill have found the road to "Wellville".

KEZIAH DOOLITTLE

TIME FOR HIKING

Dear Social Corner: November we greet you! Isn't this the most interesting world one can imagine? Just the time of year for hiking. Don't you love to walk through dried leaves and hear them rattle?

We think the letters to the Corner page have been most instructive and pleasing. We hope Bella Dee will tell us how to make the bead curtains. When I was a child we had one hanging between our dining room and hall. It was almost entirely of beads and the design was a pair of storks; one in flight, the other standing; also there were palms, etc. It was a heavy thing but fashionable, at that time, so of course, we had to have one. The kittens and puppies used to play with the fringe or end of the strands and try in vain to climb upon them. This curtain (or portiere) was of Japanese make and not made of wall-paper.

I think the happy jokes and jingles are quite like the filling between a good bread sandwich. They add a little zest to the more solid letters of travel, etc. So I will add one, if I may.

"A nushful young fellow of Groton
Whenever he put a dress shirt on
By way of a stunt
Would let out the front.
As space to display an advertisement on."

"I announce," said the doo, "with much pleasure,
That your wife has two boys—what a treasure!
Unlike some physicians
(The stingy precisians!)
I always give one for good measure!"
"Immortality," said Dr. Cole,
"Should ever be everyone's goal!"
Why doubt we're immortal?"
And bound for the Portal
When even a fish has a sole!"

BRICK-TOP.

MIRANDA AT ST. JOSEPH'S HOSPITAL

Dear Social Corner Sisters: How glad we all are of these nice days before the cold finally sets in.

Kitty Lou: I for one am always glad to see your long letters and many times I think you have saved the Corner's skeet. On seeing your sponge cake I thought as the first I wished it was a smaller receipt. On going further found as usual you do the thing up right and found one. Have you ever run across a receipt for those all wheat cookies. They do not have any fat. You find them in the stores at 30c a dozen. If you ever do will you kindly send it in.

Olga: Your letter in Lavender's dairy was very good. I was looking for one.

Nema: I got what I went after that Sunday.

One of the nice Saturday's a few weeks ago I went down to Westerly for a ride and on starting I first met Windham, Blue Bell and Hand. Then in Stonington I saw E. L. M. Did you know who spoke to you. On coming out of Groton I saw Red Rose.

This morning it is quite snappy, but makes you feel like working.

How many knows that Miranda is in St. Joseph's hospital. Why not send a shower of cards to Mrs Susan Sweet, in care of St Joseph hospital, Willimantic, Ct.

The harvest moon is just beautiful. I just like to ride then. I've heard people tell about the husking bees they used to have at this time of year and on finding the red ear, but I never went to one. They went by before my time. There is one thing I don't like and that's to see the trees bare of their leaves. So as ever

SERVE TRIPE FOR VARIETY.

Dear Corner Members: Tripe is an excellent dish to serve when one is looking for something different. As an article of diet, it has economy in its favor, and from this standpoint alone it is worthy of consideration.

Tripe is of two varieties, honeycomb and plain. There is little, if any difference in the cooking qualities of the two varieties, but I always use the honeycomb tripe. The honeycomb is about 5 cents more a pound than the plain, and I usually use that for broiling. Its golden brown comb presents an attractive appearance on the serving platter.

Tripe depends for its palatability upon generous seasoning. It should also be very tender, although there is a divergence of opinion at the length of time tripe should be boiled before it is ready for use. I find one hour makes it tender enough to use in recipes I am going to give you.

The tripe should be washed in three waters and in the last it is advisable to place a teaspoon of bicarbonate of soda. It should be placed in a kettle and covered with boiling water. Do not salt the water in which the tripe is boiled—when it has boiled sufficiently—remove it from the kettle and drain. Tripe contains and holds a considerable amount of water and therefore should be allowed to dry sufficiently before use.

Tripe dishes are excellent for luncheon and when prepared in certain ways make an excellent breakfast dish. One of the simplest methods of preparing tripe: Par broil it and prepare it as I suggested above, then cut it into suitably-sized pieces. Sprinkle with salt, pepper and a dash of paprika. Place a piece of butter or fat in a skillet; when hot, turn the pieces as when broiling steak, and when done place on a hot platter, dot with butter and serve with lemon or tartar sauce.

Tripe sausage is a substantial dish. Boil two pounds of tripe in accordance to directions. In the meantime cut one-half of an onion into small pieces and saute it in one-half tablespoon of butter. Mix one-half pound sausage meat with two tablespoons of chili sauce, add the onion and one and one-quarter teaspoons of salt. Make into a paste-like mixture and cut the tripe into strips about five inches long and three inches wide. Spread each strip with sausage mixture, being careful not to place it too near the edge. Roll tightly and fasten with two toothpicks. Dredge with cracker dust, dip in beaten egg and cover again in cracker dust. Put the rolls in a frying basket and fry in deep, 360 degrees F. Serve on a hot platter garnished with chopped cabbage and pimentos.

Tripe roll is delicious for luncheon. Boil two pounds of tripe as directed. In the meantime boil, wash and season four large potatoes, add to them one tablespoon of chopped onion, two cups of soft bread crumbs, one-half green pepper, chopped fine, one teaspoon salt, one-eighth teaspoon of pepper and a little paprika. Lay the tripe on the board and spread with this mixture. Roll tightly and tie with a string. Roll in flour, then in vegetable oil and again in flour. Lay six strips of bacon over the top and place in a roasting pan on a trivet. Bake one hour at a temperature 450 degrees F. Cut the roll in slices and serve with hot tomato sauce.

To prepare tripe with mushroom en-casserole—Boil one pound of honeycomb tripe one hour. Mix together one-quarter cup of mild vinegar and two tablespoons of olive oil. Cut tripe when boiled in narrow strips about two inches in length and place them to soak in vinegar and oil 30 minutes. In the meantime clean one pound of medium sized mushrooms, and slice crosswise in rather thin slices. Heat four tablespoons of olive oil, in a skillet; add one teaspoon each of salt and lemon juice and one shallot cut very fine. When the shallot is partly browned add the mushrooms and cook for five minutes. Place in the top of a double boiler one tablespoon of sauce in which the mushrooms were cooked. Add to it two tablespoons of butter and one and one-half teaspoon of salt, then add the mushrooms and the tripe. Cut in small pieces into the double boiler, heat, then place in encasserole in the oven.

GRIEVANCE COLLECTORS.

Dear Social Corner Editor and Sisters: Sometime ago a sister wrote about her grievances. I often think if we should gather together all the grievances we have suffered in a comparatively short life we would have a big collection.

Fair deals are not too common in this world. Always we find there is some one who is willing to take undue advantage. Always there are surly or ill natured people ready to offend. Remember them, think about them, indulge in self pity because of what they have done, and as John Blake says, "You will have something to worry about all your life."

I have known a great many grievance collectors, and all of them were so unhappy and so given to self-pity that they made everybody else around them uncomfortable. Naturally they had a few friends, and that gave them additional grievance. It is not always to forget deliberate injuries, or to forgive them either. But they can be forgotten and they can be forgiven. As long as they are not they will remain to fester in the soul and make life bitter.

As a matter of fact most grievances are imaginary. Haven't you ever fancied some friend was neglectful or some friend owed you an obligation and is too ready to forget it. It is easy to believe that your office associates for some reason or other, are conspiring against you or are not greeting you as you expect them to when you meet them. Well, you want to forget about that. You know I find the chances are if you use people decently they treat you the same way.

You get just about what you give in this world. Very few people go about trying deliberately to injure others.

Lying awake nights thinking of your injuries robs you of good healthy sleep and is liable to give you bad dreams in the bargain. In an imperfect world you cannot expect perfect people. You must make up your mind to be ill used once in a while, now and then, but what of it.

Think about your own job. Associate with people who like you and when you feel injured read a book or play a game. That will sweeten your life and you will never be oppressed with wrongs, real or fancied.

Mrs. L. Did you receive my letter?

VISITS KITTY LOU

Dear Social Corner Friends: I will try to write a few more lines as short letters seem to be caled for, so hope to see many this week.

I have just returned from a visit with my sons in Norwich and Lisbon and while in Norwich I had the pleasure of calling on Kitty Lou one evening. She is one of those people who is very pleasant to meet. She gave me a beautiful bouquet to bring home and I have it in my sitting room, so I can look at it every day. She is just the same in making boquets as she is in writing letters, always good ones.

It is a very dark and rainy day just the right time to sit down and write a few lines.

Primrose: I was going to write you, but have forgotten your address, so if you will write it in a card or I wouldn't mind a letter, I will try and answer it.

Twice Twenty: You had us nearly scared to death some time ago when Mrs. Myrtice Blanchard died. Some thought it might be you, but am thankful that you are still in the land of the living. Of course I feel sorry for the other party as well.

As Thanksgiving is drawing near I will send in a recipe for a very good and cheap fruit cake which most any one can afford to make. Here it is:

Fruit Cake: 2 cups of flour, 2 level teaspoons of baking powder, 1-4 teaspoon of ground cloves, 1-2 teaspoon of ground nutmeg, 1-2 teaspoon of salt, 1 teaspoon of ground cinnamon, 1-4 cup of butter, 1 cup of sugar, 1 cup of milk, 1 egg, 1-2 cup raisins, 1-2 cup currants. Sift together the flour, salt, spices and baking powder, rub in the butter and add the sugar and fruit. Mix to soft dough with the egg and milk and bake in a loaf cake pan in a moderate oven about 45 minutes. A bit of candied orange peel or lemon peel or citron is a great addition to the cake. It isn't much too early to make it anytime, to have at Thanksgiving. It is rather better if kept awhile. I hope some sister will try it and have good luck. As my letter is getting rather lengthy I will close and give the others room. A good way to think every day is when you get up in the morning to say to yourself, I think there will be something that will make me feel happy and in most every case there will be, so cheer up and don't feel blue and try this way and you will say I am glad some one told me about it. Best wishes to all.

ATTENDS GRANGE MEETINGS.

Dear Editor and Sisters: I should have written long ago to thank those helping us at the meeting of Club No. 6 at Wequetequock chapel, but time slips by so quickly I didn't realize until too late each week. The people brought such a variety of food that with the meat pies there seemed to be plenty to eat. I had to leave before the program, so consequently missed it, but it was Neighbor's night at our grange and as I was chairman of the feast committee it meant preparing refreshments for about 200 people.

We had 210 when the time came, but had plenty for them and some left over. We made four kinds of sandwiches, cake, pickles and coffee. That night when I went to bed all I could see was endless rows of plates of sandwiches and cake. It was too bad they both had to come the same day but with willing helpers at both places I had a lovely time boosing.

Last Friday night I had an invitation to go to Slocum grange for neighbor's night with Pyrethum and her daughter. At the last minute Pyrethum was unable to go, but the rest of us went. We left Westerly about 7.30 and didn't have any idea where to go after leaving Kingston, but by stopping along to enquire we reached our destination in time for the program. Pyrethum's daughter and another girl who went with us furnished two numbers.

The next night Milky Way and I with my son and a friend went to Quonocontaug grange where they put on a competitive program, the ladies against the men. The ladies won, of course. Powaget, who was one of the comb quartet, showed talent not hitherto unthought of. But after the whistling chorus I didn't know but we would have to resort to artificial respiration. The men, knowing they couldn't do as good, tried to make the women laugh while they were whistling but didn't succeed. I don't have a chance to go very often but when I do I make up for lost time.

Now, as I haven't anything else to do I am caning the back of a rocking chair and have a seat to put in an old-fashioned chair. It is fascinating work though I love to do it. I must bring this to a close and get dinner or I am liable to be fired. Hope every one is enjoying good health.

CLUB NO. 1 MEETS NOV. 14.

Dear Social Corner Readers: It is a long time since I have sent a letter to our Corner, but I have thought of you often and have enjoyed reading the letters written by each and every one of you. I attended the last meeting of Club No. 1 of which I am a member and enjoyed Theoda's fine dinner very much. It was the first regular meeting of the season. Frances and I are going to be in partnership as hostesses at the next meeting and hope as many as possible will come. You know "the more the merrier." Don't forget to bring something good for the table as well as your own plate, cup, etc.

If you happen to read or hear something witty or pretty before our meeting please store it in your memory to pass on to the rest of us as it helps to make the meeting socially pleasant. The meeting will be held in the Chamber of Commerce rooms in Willimantic, Nov. 14, 1928.

I am writing this letter on Hallowe'en just after dark and our street is full of gobbling witches and ghosts while the air is full of sounds that are spooky and unearthly. The children are surely enjoying themselves here as no doubt they are wherever those live who will read this letter.

Hoping for a large attendance at our meeting I will close with best of wishes to you all from JUST JILL.

THANKS MEMBERS FOR KINDNESS

Dear Editor and Social Corner Sisters: Here we are almost to the winter time and we still have the bare ground and no signs of snow. Every day we have of fine weather makes one less of winter. I am going up to Sister Lily's picnic at East Brooklyn today and I know there will be a goodly number there.

I lying awake nights thinking of your injuries robs you of good healthy sleep and is liable to give you bad dreams in the bargain. In an imperfect world you cannot expect perfect people. You must make up your mind to be ill used once in a while, now and then, but what of it.

Think about your own job. Associate with people who like you and when you feel injured read a book or play a game. That will sweeten your life and you will never be oppressed with wrongs, real or fancied.

BEARISH DEVELOPMENT IN MARKET OFFSET BY DROP IN CALL MONEY RATE

NEW YORK, Nov. 2—(AP)—The stock market generally held its ground today in the face of the second largest weekly increase in federal reserve brokers' loans ever reported. Practically the only effect of the new record total of loans was a slackening of trading. This bearish development was largely offset by a drop in the call money rate to 7 per cent for the first time in a week. There was also a slight ease in time money, and the credit outlook was considerably improved as the month-end dividend and interests payments made their way back to the banks. Call money was available in the outside market at 6 1-2 per cent.

Member loans as announced by the stock exchange for October after the close, usually substantially larger than the federal reserve totals, were not as large as had been expected, only exceeded the October reserve figures of about $387,000,000 by approximately $30,000,000. This brought the stock exchange total to nearly $5,830,000,000, while a figure in excess of $6,000,000,000 had been rumored.

The market experienced a sharp rally during the afternoon, after some selling around midday, and again sold off somewhat in week-end profit taking in the last hour. Losses of a fraction to 2 points predominated at the close.

Oils were a strong feature, Sinclair selling up 2 points in a tremendous turnover, then falling back in the last transactions. The stock was heavily bought by the Cutten interests, which recently acquired a large block of the treasury stock. One bid for 100,000 shares at 42 was made Marland and Pan American B also attracted a large following on reports of improved earnings.

The action of General Motors was typical. It equalled its previous high at 224 1-8 in the afternoon, then fell back to 221 5-8, down about a point. Radio sold up 2 points, then receded for a net loss of 3 1-2. American Express mounted about 9 points to 287, then tumbled to 253.

Kelly Springfield common sold up 3 points to 24 1-2, within a fraction of its high, on announcement that 645,000 shares of stock recently offered to shareholders had been subscribed and paid for at $21 a share. The preferred shares advanced 5 and 6 points. Kelvinator responded to elimination of $5,000,000 in bank loans in the last fiscal year.

There was slight response to the steels to announcement that the New York Central had placed an order of $2,250,000 for steel rails. U. S. Steel strengthened, then lost about a point. Midland Steel Products preferred gained 8 1-2 points.

International Harvester and Advance Rumely went ahead about 5 points in expectation of increased business as result of higher purchasing power in the agricultural areas. U. S. Rubber sold up about 4 points, and International Telephone nearly 5 points at one time.

A long list of recent favorites yielded to realizing, particularly the coppers, Greene Cananea and Kennecott losing about 2 points each. Barnet Leather fell 9 points, while Atlantic Refining, Canadian Pacific, Kolster Radio, and Shubert Theatre lost 3 to 4 points. Collins & Aikman preferred and Coca Cola lost 5 points each, and Yellow Truck preferred dropped 7 points to a new low at 85.

The commodity markets were featureless. Cotton closed barely steady, lower Liverpool cables offsetting reports of cold weather in the south. Foreign exchanges were generally steady, although sterling eased slightly, heeding just below the gold import mark. Another shipment of about $5,000,000 in gold from England was announced.

Who Passed Away Nov. 3, 1926

Just two years ago today,
Our beloved one passed away,
What would we give his hand to clasp,
His loving voice to hear,
His smiling face once more to see,
He whom we held so dear.
We're thinking of those days gone by
When we were all together,

ACTRESS MISSING FROM NEW LONDON FOUND FRIDAY TO BE IN NEW YORK

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 2—The mystery surrounding the disappearance in this city yesterday afternoon of Cloeine Faye Johnson, an actress and a member of the vaudeville team of Elliott, Faye and Johnson, booked to present their act at the Garde theatre yesterday, today and Friday, was partially cleared up this afternoon by the woman being located in New York. What prompted her to return to New York within a half hour after she had arrived here and a short time before her act was supposed to be staged, has not been explained, although other members of the act said that the woman was suffering from a nervous complaint. The three members of the act arrived in New London at 1:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon, coming here from New York in Miss Faye's Chrysler sedan. Immediately upon their arrival here the three went to the theatre and after a stay of but a few minutes, Miss Faye started to drive to a garage. When it came time for the presentation of the act and Miss Faye had not returned to the theatre a search was made for her. It was learned that she had not gone to the garage to which she had been directed. She failed to appear at night and this morning a request was made of the police to institute a search for the woman. This was done and the state police were requested to send out an alarm for it was represented that because of the actress' nervous condition, injury might come to her through the driving of the automobile. It was not believed by the members of her act that Miss Faye had returned to New York, but this afternoon the police received information which showed that she had driven to New York, arriving there last night.

No change was reported today in the condition of Patrolman Braxton Hill, who is seriously ill at the Mitchell ward of Lawrence-Memorial hospital suffering from pneumonia and erysipelas.

Commissioner of Motor Vehicles R. B. Stoeckel today ordered the suspension of the driver's license of R. K. Middleton, U. S. coast guard. Commissioner Stoeckel also ordered the return of the license of Joseph F. Joseph, 43 Bank street.

Joseph Lawsky, 125 North Bank street, drove his Chrysler touring car to State street at 5.15 o'clock this morning and while he alighted to purchase a newspaper some one, evidently an acquaintance of Lawsky entered the car and drove away. Believing that the car had been stolen, Lawsky reported it as such at police headquarters. A half hour later Patrolman William Riordan found the car parked on Water street, but a short distance from the owner's home.

An automobile driven by Adrian V. Ysseldyk, Prospect street, Allendale, N. Y., struck and killed a dog on Main street, near Hill street, last night.

NOT SOUTH BUT TO JAIL TO ESCAPE WINTER'S RIGORS

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 2—William Dooley, of the type of men who do not relish work, but who manage to obtain an existence through the charity of others, made his annual visit to the county jail today, there to remain until spring. In the police court this morning Dooley was sentenced to six months in the workhouse. It is a yearly occurrence for Dooley to be arrested when cold weather approaches and he usually gets a sentence that provides with a home until April or May.

Another old offender will have a home at the county jail for six months or more for he, also, was sentenced. Bruno, a cobbler, when employed, was presented in court for his 33rd time today on a charge of intoxication. He went to police headquarters last night intoxicated, seeking lodging.

William McLaughlin and Richard M. Hawkins were charged with breach of the peace and intoxication, having been arrested on State street last night by Patrolman George Cockell and Motorcycle Officer Augustus Ray. Judgment was suspended in each case.

John Leavey was sentenced to Norwich state inebriate farm, for his indulgence in strong drink has become such that relatives have frequently been compelled to make complaint to the police because of his condition. This occurred last night and Leavey was arrested by Patrolmen Harry Watterson and Louis Tooker.

John A. Sullivan was charged with evading payment for a taxicab bill and intoxication and was sentenced to jail for 30 days. Sullivan hired a cab of the Union Cab company and after running up a bill refused to pay the driver. Complaint was made to Patrolman Arthur Feeley and Sullivan was arrested.

Robert Buschard, submarine base, was charged with violation of the city's traffic laws in passing an automatic traffic signal which was set at danger. He was arrested by Motorcycle Officer Clarence Martin and today was given a suspension of judgment.

A half dozen cases of intoxication were also presented and in each case a suspension of judgment was meted out or where the men charged were members of the United States coast guard, they were turned over to a shore patrol and taken back to the state pier for discipline.

Tax Collector Hibbard N. Alexander today issued a release of a tax warrant against Julius Weinstein.

Three of the cars were piled up on both the east and westbound rails and it was not until this afternoon that wreckers cleared the tracks so that traffic became normal. As a result of the wreck trains from Providence this forenoon were delayed in arriving in this city. The cause of the wreck was a broken wheel.

VONG SHOT IN THIGH DIES AFTER AMPUTATION

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 2—Arthur Vong, 338 Bank street, died at Lawrence-Memorial hospital late this afternoon as a result of an operation for the amputation of the upper portion of his right leg. Vong went to the woods of Center Groton, this afternoon in search of game and after seeking quail and partridge he wandered through the woods. In some unaccountable manner he discharged the shotgun. The contents entered Vong's leg bringing about a compound fracture. It became necessary to perform an operation on that member and Vong was unable to withstand the shock, as he expired at 8:50 o'clock. It is presumed that Vong while after game unconsciously pulled the trigger of the gun and that the contents of the gun entered the thigh and shattered the bone. After Vong had received emergency treatment he was taken to the hospital, where it was imperative that amputation be performed. Vong, who was of Greek parentage, had resided in New London several years and has a brother residing here who is in business. He was well and favorably known in this city.

The second of the republican rallies was held last night in Lyric hall, was attended by a large gathering of voters, prior to which the 103d band gave a fine programme. The speakers were Hon. Sample ballots, fac simile of those that will be used by voters in the third ward Tuesday have arrived in New London and are at the municipal building for distribution. Because of an insufficient number of voting machines, the voters in the third ward will use the old time method of voting by ballot. In all other wards the voting machine will be used and in the second and fifth wards extra machines have been provided.

Chairman Ezekiel Spitz, of the finance committee of the Armistice day celebration, is seeking to obtain a fund for defraying expenses connected with the celebration. Three thousand dollars is desired and to date but $2,500 has been obtained. Chairman Spitz has suggested that the members of the New London police department make contributions, but to date only 16 members of the department have contributed $1 each, out of about 50 members on the force.

Patriotic Moving Picture at Y. Sunday

The public, 14 and over, are invited to see the second half of the wonderful moving picture, Griffith's "America," at the local Y. M. C. A. gymnasium on the coming Sunday at 4 p. m.

The first half of this splendid picture story of the making of America, was most impressive, and doubtless a large audience will take advantage of the opportunity to see the second half.

The scenes and incidents are all true to history, and portray in a very vivid manner the hardships and sacrifices, etc., which men have undergone to lay and maintain the solid foundations upon which our country rests. Such a picture as this is bound to impress all who see it with the tremendous cost that has gone into the building of America as we have it today, and to lead them to a realization of what their attitude should be in their relationship to our glorious country.

A brief talk will be given in line with the picture.

Bread Theatre

Reckless youth, intoxicants and road-houses and a prodigal son who leaves home because of parental misunderstandings furnish the dramatic material for Fox Films' "Road House," opening tomorrow night at the Bread theatre for a three days' engagement.

This picture is said to be beautifully screened and contains a well-told tale which proves the adage, "Like father, like son." Cast in the featured roles are Warren Burke as Larry Grayson, the son; Maria Alba, as Sally Carroll, the girl who leads Larry astray, and Lionel Barrymore in one of his strongest screen characterizations as the father, whose own character is not above reproach.

The story concerns Larry, the boy who thinks he is in love with Sally Carroll. She is playing him for everything she can get out of him. When Larry's father reproaches him Larry recalls to his father that he, too, indulges in the same things and the elder Grayson, furious, orders his son from the house.

With no place to go but to Sally, he there becomes involved with a gang of thieves. Larry at first refuses to join them, but is so enamored of Sally that eventually he consents.

The night of Larry's first offense is a hold-up of a road house. In the fray one of the gang shoots the proprietor and Larry is seen with a gun in his hand before he escapes.

Trailing his fleeing boy, Grayson finds and tells him that he knows he didn't do it and offers to help him escape, but Larry decides to take his medicine and face trial.

How this dramatic situation is brought to a finish is intensely interesting. The picture brings the son and the father to a real understanding and Larry to his childhood sweetheart.

Broadway Theatre

Depths of tragedy are sounded by Al Jolson in "The Singing Fool," the production in which he is presented by Warner Bros. at the Broadway theatre for the entire week, beginning tomorrow (Sunday) evening.

In "The Singing Fool" he is first seen as a carefree, wise-cracking entertainer—a singing waiter in a New York cabaret—but eventually there comes to him a weight of sorrow and mental stress that entirely changes the course of his life. Everything which he has attained through years of striving is suddenly stripped from him, and the way he meets and copes with his misfortunes makes a story of absorbing heart interest.

Jolson's amazing gift for recognizing those who have, like himself, the ability to transmit their feelings to others, was demonstrated in his choice of adorable three-year-old Davey Lee to play the part of Sonny Boy in "The Singing Fool." The child was chosen from among nearly 200 applicants.

Betty Bronson and Josephine Dunn are seen in the principal feminine roles, and other well-known players in the cast are Reed Howes, Arthur Housman, David Lee, Robert Emmett O'Connor and Edward Martindel. C. Graham Baker made the adaptation from a Leslie S. Barrows story. The production was directed by Lloyd Bacon.

The management of the Broadway theatre announced that the theatre will be opened at 6 p. m. tomorrow evening in order to avoid any inconvenience and crowding of their patrons. The second showing goes on at 8:25 and a full performance will be given.

Sale of Property on East Side

James L. Case has sold for Mrs. Mary C. Crandall of New Haven, Conn., the property owned by her property and located at No. 169 Palmer street, with a frontage of about 133 feet to John Krucinski. The buildings consist of a six-room cottage and garage. The new owner plans to improve the

TUDISCA DEATH CAUSE REMAINS MYSTERY; NO POISON TRACES FOUND

Failure to find any traces of poison in the vital organs of Giuseppe Tudisca, 38, Pawcatuck cobbler, whose body was found floating in the Mystic river two weeks ago leaves the cause of his death a mystery. No marks of violence were found upon the body and an autopsy failed to reveal the cause of death.

Sergeant Henry Albright of the Groton state police barracks received the report Friday from the state chemist that no traces of alcoholic, metallic, volatile, or other type of poison were found in the vital organs of Tudisca. Following the finding of the body, an autopsy by Dr. E. P. Douglas of Groton revealed an irritant in the vital organs and the analysis by the state chemist was held to determine whether or not this might be poison.

The body was found floating by two fishermen and had evidently been in the water but a few hours. As there was an absence of air in the lungs, the probable theory of the fatality is that Tudisca was dead when the body was placed in the river. Tudisca's body was found almost a week after he had been in New London and participated in the Columbus day parade, prior to which a mob fight occurred on Steward street between members of the Fascisti and anti-Fascists. It was a known fact that prior to Tudisca's coming to this country he was prominently connected with the Mussolini government and it is the general belief among a majority of New London Italians that Tudisca was murdered and that his body was thrown into the Mystic river in an endeavor to remove any possible clue that might be revealed in a search being made for the murderer.

The funeral of Tudisca was held from the home of his brother, Gaspere Tudisca, at 87 Stillman avenue in Pawcatuck Friday morning at 8:15 o'clock. A requiem high mass was celebrated at St. Michael's church by Rev. Joseph A. Weston.

The body was brought to New London at noon and was taken to the Fascisti hall, Shaw street, where it will lie in state about two weeks before it is sent back to Italy for interment. Friday afternoon a member of the Fascisti party, of which Tudisca was a member went to police headquarters and requested that permission be granted for the body to lie in state in the Fascisti hall, but that request was not granted, being referred to Prosecuting Attorney Daniel M. Cronin. That official has not granted or refused the request to date, but nevertheless the body of Tudisca was in the Shaw street meeting room Friday night, and will remain there until such time that his fellow countrymen cause it to be shipped to Italy. There is no doubt in the minds of the Italian populace in New London that Tudisca was the victim of foul play and the failure of the autopsy or the analysis to show the cause of death has not dispelled the foul play belief that is held by his fellow Fascisti.

Mr. Tudisca was born in Tulsa, Italy, Dec. 21, 1890, the son of Castrenze Tudisca and Rosilia Curris Tudisca. Besides his mother he is survived by a wife, Maria Gruzzia Mini Tudisca, one daughter, Rosilia, all of Italy, and a brother, Gaspere, of Pawcatuck, Stonington. He was a member of the New London Fascisti League of North America and followed the occupation of a cobbler.

RED CROSS WILL ASK FOR 5,000,000 MEMBERS

More than 250,000 men and women, many of them in this community, will between Armistice day and Thanksgiving extend personal invitations to the people of the United States to join the American Red Cross for 1929 during its annual roll call, which will be held at that time.

A membership of five million is the goal the national organization has set as against four million enrolled last November. The local chapter of the Red Cross is completing plans for participation in the nation-wide enrollment, and is preparing an extensive solicitation in which every resident will be asked to renew his allegiance to the "Greatest Mother."

Increasing demands for service in disaster relief, and the necessity for extending its work in public health nursing, first aid, life saving, nutrition and other activities is declared to make this larger membership essential if the organization is to meet the responsibilities placed on it by congressional charter. With expenditures for many years exceeding its income, Red Cross leaders stated that the time has come when larger support must be had or its activities curtailed. Increasing demands and growing needs for Red Cross work in every branch of its activities make curtailment virtually impossible, they say. Although practising the most rigid economy in operation, the organization has set five million members as the minimum with which it can carry on its activities through the next year on a scale commensurate with existing needs.

Four types of memberships will be sought here by the local chapter of the American Red Cross when it begins its Twelfth Annual Roll Call Armistice day, November 11. The enrollment will continue through Thanksgiving day.

The bulk of the 2500 members the chapter expects to enroll will be dollar memberships, local officers say, but many persons will be asked for the other three types of memberships carrying with them fees of five, ten and twenty-five dollars.

The larger memberships are necessary, it was explained for the support of the local work of the chapter, inasmuch as only fifty cents of each membership fee goes to national headquarters for the financing of national and international work. From the one dollar membership, fifty cents goes to national headquarters and fifty cents remains in the chapter treasury; while from the five dollar membership $4.50 remains here. The $10 fee will net the chapter $9.50, while $25 memberships will put $24.50 into the local treasury.

As many of the larger types of memberships will be secured as possible as chapter officers say it is virtually impossible to carry on the local service program from revenues derived from the one dollar membership alone.

THE TRUTH ABOUT BRAN AND CONSTIPATION

Thousands of people eat bran regularly for the healthful roughage it provides. But be sure you are really getting all the roughage you need when you eat bran. Doctors say it takes 100% bran to relieve constipation. Part-bran products, at best, can only accomplish part-way results. That is why they fail!

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is 100% bran. It furnishes roughage in effective quantities—and in the most effective form: cooked and krumbled. Just two tablespoonfuls daily—chronic cases, with every meal—are guaranteed to relieve constipation.

You'll like the flavor and crispness of ALL-BRAN. Serve with milk or cream. Delicious with fruits or honey added. Mix with other cereals. Sprinkle into soups. Use in cooking. Sold by all grocers. Served everywhere. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

CONNECTICUT CLAIMED BY LEADERS OF BOTH PARTIES

Republican Party Looks For a Hoover Plurality of 50,000 to 75,000—Demonstrations Accorded Gov. Smith Have Made the Democrats Hopeful—Both Parties Are Counting on Victories in New Hampshire, Rhode Island, Delaware and Maryland—Republicans Are Putting Up a Fight in New York, New Jersey and Massachusetts, Which Are Generally Regarded as Democratic Territory —G. O. P. Insists West Virginia is Safe For Hoover.

By CARL S. BRANDEBURY
(Associated Press Eastern States News Editor)

High points of interest in the Hoover-Smith campaign along the Atlantic seaboard have been the onslaughts of the democrats on territory—New York, New Jersey, Massachusetts—heretofore generally regarded as republican in presidential election years. In a lesser degree the war for votes has been waged in New Hampshire, Rhode Island, Connecticut, Delaware and Maryland. Leaders of both parties claim each of these states as their own.

Pennsylvania also has felt the flame of party warfare, Smith having made a personal invasion of this republican stronghold which the democrats assert today has been won for their cause. This the republicans stoutly deny, Gen. Edward Martin, republican state chairman saying that Hoover will come with 500,000 to 600,000 to Philadelphia where he looked for a "magnificent majority. John R. Collins, democratic state chairman, said Smith would carry Pennsylvania by 150,000 to 175,000, and if the New York governor received a larger plurality than that, the democratic state ticket would also be elected.

In industrial New England the republicans expect that Maine and Vermont will give their electoral vote for Hoover while the democratic chieftains assert vigorously that the other four normally republican states, New Hampshire, Rhode Island, Massachusetts and Connecticut, will be found in the Smith column.

Many impartial observers class Massachusetts with its 18 electoral votes as doubtful, though both sides claim it. Gov. Alvan T. Fuller has said the republican nominee would carry Massachusetts by 250,000 while National Committeeman Edward T. Collins believes that Smith's lead will reach 125,000. "Coolidge prosperity," the tariff and prohibition have been the main issues of the campaign. Religion has not been debated on the stump.

Rhode Island is being claimed by both parties. National Committeeman Frederick S. Peck, republican, says the state will give Hoover a plurality of about 10,000. Thousands of citizens of French-Canadian descent will probably swing the election. Traditionally republican, they are Catholic and opposed to prohibition, which makes it difficult for the leaders to forecast how they will cast their ballots.

New Hampshire also has a large French-Canadian population which may figure largely in how the state will go. Benjamin F. Worcester, chairman of the New Hampshire republican state committee, says Hoover will be given the normal republican majority. The democrats say there has been a large turn-over in sentiment and that Smith can carry the state.

Leaders of the republican party look for a Hoover victory in Connecticut by 50,000 to 75,000, while the democrats are enheartened by the demonstrations given Smith during his recent trip through the state.

The whole gamut of campaign issues has been dangled before the voter of New York to lure him to the republican and democratic folds. Smith and Hoover adherents each claim the state and its 45 votes in the electoral college. Republican leaders assert that the heavy registration upstate presages an enormous vote for Hoover, which will more than offset the vote that Smith is expected to have in the democratic confines of Greater New York. Some political sharps say that the cross currents have been so puzzling that the state may be classed as doubtful.

Delaware is claimed by both parties, the democrats saying they expect to carry the Blue Hen state by pluralities ranging from 2,000 to 5,000, while the republicans predict that Hoover and the state ticket will have a plurality of 15,000 to 20,000. Prohibition and religion received unusual attention in the Delaware campaign. There has been a hot fight for United States senator between Thomas F. Bayard, democratic incumbent, and former Gov. John G. Townsend, Jr., republican.

Observers of political currents in Maryland seem to have classed that state as doubtful, with both sides claiming it by 25,000 to 30,000. Religion has been the overshadowing issue in Maryland, with the wet and dry question next in importance. The democrats say that Baltimore will roll up enough votes to overcome any Hoover vote that may be cast by the counties outside the city.

The republicans insist that West Virginia is safely republican, while the democrats believe the state's eight electoral votes will be for Smith.

SMITH PREDICTS COMPLETE DEM. VICTORY TOMORROW

NEW YORK, Nov. 4—(AP)—The shouting and the tumult of the campaign over, Alfred E. Smith rested today with his family and his friends in his suite at the Biltmore hotel. Except for two radio speeches tomorrow, both to be delivered before silent microphones in broadcasting studios, his drive for the presidency is at an end.

On Tuesday, along with millions of other Americans, he will go to the polls and cast his vote—and then, as the others will do, he will await the counting of the ballots.

For more than three months he has been one of the two central figures in a campaign which has aroused the interest of the nation to a higher pitch than has been known in recent years and during this period, from beginning to end, he has battled with sleeves rolled up for the democracy which he leads.

He has traveled far in this time from the towering skyscrapers in the shadow of which he was born and raised—the Atlantic and the Rockies have been the boundaries of his campaign. All told, he has journeyed more than 11,000 miles.

In the "solid south" he heard the tunes of "Dixie" and the "Sidewalks of New York" blended and here as in the political border country, the midwest and the far west, he was greeted by thousands who turned out to meet him; who cheered him and his waving brown derby and shouted out a "Hello Al".

Then, waving the derby for the last time west of the Allegheny mountains, he came back to the industrial east where his name first rose to prominence for the last move of the campaign—a drive which, to use his own words, was the "battle of the Atlantic seaboard."

This started in Boston, penetrated as far south as Baltimore and came to a close last night in Madison Square garden where he faced his largest audience of the campaign—a gathering of home folks who cheered for 19 minutes before they would let him say a word.

And before this crowd which overflowed into the streets outside, the democratic nominee summed up into one speech all the charges he had buried against his opposition since he took the stump with his first normal address of the campaign at Omaha.

The Madison Square address was his campaign valedictory so far as appearing in person before audiences is concerned with all the force at his command he ripped into his political foes. He attacked Herbert Hoover, his rival for the presidency, for what he said was a refusal to enter into debate on the issues before the nation and had his audience shouting and applauding when he declared:

"We have had in this country, in my opinion, about all we could stand of the spokesman idea."

He wound up with the declaration that his travels over the country led him "to sincerely state to you that the American people are alive to the necessity for a change."

"They are enthusiastic for it," he concluded, "and they are looking to the democratic party, and I am satisfied that the overwhelming, reawakened sentiment of the American people will be reflected in complete democratic victory next Tuesday."

Today, the nominee attended 10 o'clock mass at St. Agnes church and then started for a short walk only to be forced indoors by a drizzling rain. After this he spent practically all of the day in his suite in the hotel working on his two radio speeches.

Tonight, he arranged to appear for a few minutes at a dinner in the hotel for the cast of the radio play "Up from the City Streets."

LANDSLIDE FORECAST BY SENATOR CURTIS

TOPEKA, Nov. 4—(AP)—Tired but confident, Senator Charles Curtis came home today from his long and strenuous republican vice presidential campaign to cast a vote and await the verdict.

"It's going to be a landslide," Curtis predicted. "I have been from Maine to Idaho, back and forth and up and down the nation. Interest in the election has been tremendous everywhere. This is as true with the women as with the men this year. The enthusiasm and interests of the crowds; their attention to the discussion of issues and their eager manifestations in behalf of the republican ticket can mean but one thing—an overwhelming republican victory. I have never seen such interests and such activity. Every one of the hundred meetings I addressed dismayed this same enthusiasm. The Maine landslide was a true prophecy."

RORABACK PREDICTS CONN. WILL GO REPUBLICAN BY 75,000

HARTFORD, Nov. 4—The following pre-election prediction has been made by J. Henry Roraback, chairman of the republican state central committee:

"The registration indicates that approximately 500,000 votes will be cast on Tuesday's election. At the McKinley dinner in Bridgeport last winter I suggested as my opinion then that in the coming election the republican nominee for president, whoever he was, would lead the democratic nominee by more than 75,000. Conditions today do not in my mind justify any change in that statement except to be more specific and say indications are that Secretary Hoover will lead Governor Smith in Connecticut by more than 75,000. Senator Walcott and the state ticket will receive substantially the same vote and the five republican congressmen will be re-elected."

ITALY CELEBRATED TENTH ANNIVERSARY OF ARMISTICE

SENATOR ROBINSON TO TAKE LONG REST

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 4—(AP)—Completing a speech making campaign that has carried him into 34 states since September 2 and more than 25,000 miles by train and automobile, Senator Joe T. Robinson, democratic vice presidential candidate, arrived here at 8:05 o'clock tonight and left 40 minutes later for Little Rock, Ark., where he will vote on Tuesday.

He will make a single speech before the campaign closes, an address tomorrow night to the home folks at Little Rock and then, he says, he is going into retirement for several weeks, no matter what the outcome of the election may be. He said tonight he believes that the democrats will win on Tuesday.

Senator Robinson feels that any man who has made 211 speeches in two months is entitled to a rest and both he and Mrs. Robinson, who has made every step of the campaign with him, are prepared to seek out some place where there are no crowds, no train schedules to meet, no press conferences, and no political prognosticators.

TO SEND IDENTICAL NOTES TO GERMANY

PARIS, Nov. 4—(AP)—The efforts of the allied governments to couch in identical terms their replies to Germany's note on the constitution of a committee to discuss revision of the Dawes plan for reparation payments, occupied a busy day here. The fact that it was Sunday failed to halt the activities of the statesmen and diplomats who have been engaged in the negotiations for the past week.

Premier Poincare conferred with the Belgian and Japanese ambassadors and at various times since Saturday noon he also has talked with S Parker Gilbert, the American who is agent general for reparations Signor Pirelli of Italy, Ambassador Von Hoesch of Germany, and Sir William Tyrrell, British ambassador.

Despite attempts to keep proceedings in the closest secrecy, it is understood that a compromise has been reached concerning the interpretation of "independent" as applied to members of the committee, on which the French and German viewpoints had been reported at variance. Poincare is said to have yielded to the extent of abandoning his idea of appointing experts government functionaries to the committee although he is understood to be adamant in providing the experts with instructions on the minimum demands of France, below which they would be unable to treat or bind the French government. This position is said to be acceptable to the others.

FLIER INJURED WHEN PLAN EFELL IN STORM

BRADFORD, Pa., Nov. 4—(AP)—George Eyer, Hornell, N. Y., aviator, was brought to a Bradford hospital this afternoon in a critical condition after having been removed from the wreckage of a plane which crashed during a storm in a dense forest eight miles from here nearly 24 hours previously. Eyer, who suffered a fractured skull and other head injuries, was not expected to live.

Miss Helen Crandall, of Alfred, N. Y., owner and co-pilot of the ship, which was flying from Oil City to Hornell, at the time of the crash, suffered several fractured ribs and cuts and bruises. Despite her injuries she hiked six miles to summon aid.

As a guide back to the plane Miss Crandall tore pieces from her dress and tied them to trees as she made her way through the trees and underbrush. She said adverse winds "rolled" the ship over in the air and it came down into the trees. Eyer was at the controls at the time.

Plane Yankee Doodle Crashed; 2 Men Killed

Pilot C. B. Collyer and Harry Tucker, the Owner, Were Trying for New West-to-East Non-Stop Record.

PRESCOTT, Ariz., Nov. 5—(AP)—Fragments of an airplane and bits of the bodies of two men scattered along the side of Crock Canyon in the Bradshaw Mountains, 23 miles south of here, were positively identified today as the Yankee Doodle monoplane and its pilot, Captain C. B. Collyer, and Harry Tucker, the passenger-owner.

Scattered bits of airplane wreckage, strewn along the canyon today told searching parties the story of the wreck and resulted in positive identification of the aircraft and the bodies of Collyer and Tucker.

It was believed by members of the sheriff's searching party, which found the strewn wreckage late today, that the craft had struck the canyon side with a tremendous force and that the heavy load of gasoline exploded with the impact.

The open parachutes of the pilot and the passenger indicated that the pair, realizing their plight too late, had made an effort to jump. Their landing flares also had been released.

J. B. Tomlinson, manager of the Storm Cloud Mines was the only eye witness of the crash. He said he heard the plane come down through the canyon, sputtering as if the motor was failing, and after it had scraped the tree tops for a distance, crashed. He said a loud explosion immediately followed the crash.

The rugged character of the terrain did not enable searchers to reach the scene of the tragedy until late today when a 20 year old youth, Frank Shields, found the scattered remains of the proud cross-continent record holding monoplane.

Only the fact that the rocks were plowed away at the spot where the plane hit enabled the searchers to fix the exact location of the crash, for parts of the craft were scattered for more than a quarter of a mile along the mountainside.

Letters and photographs, along with a few personal effects of the fliers, served to identify them as the two who hopped off at Mines Field, Los Angeles, yesterday afternon at 3:29, with the intention of keeping a business engagement in New York city today.

Pack mules were expected to bring the bodies down to the highway. There was no part of the Yankee Doodle worth salvaging. One strip of the fuselage bearing the name served to help identify the plane.

The fatal crash, which snuffed out the lives of two aviational men who had recently took place between 7:30 and 8 o'clock last night. A monoplane was reported seen over a little cluster of mining prospectors' cabins about five miles from here, about 7:30. At that time it was said that the motor apparently was not functioning properly.

In this crippled condition it was swallowed up in the mist and rain of the night, which authorities here believe was responsible for its becoming lost in the mountain fastness.

RECORDS MADE BY COLLYER AND TUCKER

ROOSEVELT FIELD, N. Y., Nov 4—(AP)—Capt. Charles B. D. Collyer and Harry J. Tucker, who were killed when their plane crashed in Arizona yesterday in an attempt to break the record for a west-east hop across the continent, only ten days ago had set a new mark for a westward non-stop flight from New York to Los Angeles.

They hopped off from Roosevelt field, Oct. 24 in the monoplane Yankee Doodle and landed in Los Angeles the following day, making the hop in 24 hours and 51 minutes. The previous record for the east-west hop was 26 hours and 50 minutes, made in 1923 by Lieut. John MacReady and Oakley Kelly.

Collyer, a well-known skywriter, previously had come into prominence in flying circles when he and John Henry Mears set a new record for a trip around the world. The two left New York June 29 last, in a seaplane, in which they landed beside the outbound Olympic. A pilot boat put them aboard the liner, on which they had shipped their monoplane "City of New York."

Traveling by airplane, steamer and rail, they returned to New York, July 22, setting a new record of 23 days 15 hours, 21 minutes and three seconds for the trip. The previous record of 28 days, 14 hours, 36 minutes and five seconds was held by Linton Wells and Edward Evans, New Yorks newspapermen.

YOUTH KILLED IN CRASH OF COMMERCIAL AIRPLANE

KEENE, N. H., Nov. 4—(AP)—An 18-year-old boy airplane passenger was fatally injured and a pilot and another boy passenger, were less seriously hurt here this afternoon, when a commercial biplane nose-dived onto the flying field of the Granite State Flying school.

Raymond Smith, of Royalston, Mass., died while being taken to the Elliot Memorial hospital here in an automobile. Alfred Burnham, of Hartford, Conn., the pilot and Joseph Seymour, 12 years old, of this city, a second passenger, each suffered a broken leg and other injuries.

Burnham was unable to explain the cause of the accident. He and the two boys took off safely and, when a short distance from the field, were seen to circle and start back. When the airplane reached a point over the field, it tipped slightly and slipped sidewise. Then it plunged nose down, into the field from a height of about 100 feet.

Bodies Of 2 Women Found In Cornfield

Both Skulls Had Been Crushed — Apparently Had Been Killed Saturday Afternoon or Early Sunday Morning.

DALLAS, Tex., Nov. 4—(AP)—The bodies of Mrs. Bessie Lynch, 21, and Mrs. Cleo Denton, 18, of Dallas, were found at the edge of a corn field three miles west of Dallas today.

Both skulls had been crushed and there was a knife wound in Mrs. Denton's throat. Apparently the women had been killed late Saturday afternoon or early Sunday morning.

Two boys, hunting pecans in the vicinity, stumbled upon one of the bodies and immediately telephoned detectives, who later discovered the other. Both women apparently had been beaten to death with some tool from an automobile.

Near the bodies detectives found the tracks of an automobile which had been driven into the field, turned and driven out again. The broom corn in the vicinity gave evidences of a struggle and blood spots were found on the ground.

Detectives had no clue as to the identity of the slayer. They were inclined to believe that the women were killed by jealous sweethearts or by highjackers. Friends of the couple saw them early Saturday evening, but at that time they were unescorted and apparently held no one of any plans for the evening. Mrs. Lynch is said to have been separated from her husband.

Friends of Mrs. Denton said she had been married recently, but that her husband was out of town Saturday.

Detectives were inclined to turn from the robbery theory because two purses were found within 30 feet of the bodies and a pay check from a local candy company, where Mrs. Denton worked, had not been taken.

MAN DIED AT FOOTBALL GAME IN PROVIDENCE

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Nov. 4—(AP)—Theophile E. Beausoleil, 44, of Pawtucket, jumped from his seat in the Providence cycledrome bleachers this afternoon to cheer "Wildcat" Wilson, of the Providence Steam Rollers as the player completed a 40-yard forward pass which resulted in the only score of the game against Benny Friedman's Detroit Wolverines.

A moment later Beausoleil slumped between the seats dead, while thousands around him continued to cheer, unmindful of the tragedy. A nephew who had accompanied the man to the game attracted the attention of others sitting nearby when the excitement had subsided, and doctors were summoned, but were unavailing.

SMITH HAD TWO-HOUR CONFERENCE WITH RASKOB

NEW YORK, Nov. 4—(AP)—In a 29-word statement Gov. Alfred E. Smith tonight said that the information in the possession of Chairman John J. Raskob of the democratic national committee clearly indicated democratic success. The announcement from the governor's suite at the Biltmore hotel, read:

"I just had a two-hour conference with the chairman of the democratic national committee.

"He reports that advices in his possession clearly indicate a democratic victory on Tuesday."

COLLYER'S SWEETHEART INFORMED OF TRAGEDY

ROOSEVELT FIELD, N. Y., Nov. 4—(AP)—Miss Eleanor Waddell, of Great Neck, L. I., received a wire from her father, D. W. Waddell, of Los Angeles, today, saying the monoplane Yankee Doodle, in which Captain C. B. Conver, and Harry Tucker were attempting a non-stop record flight from Los Angeles to New York, crashed last night in Arizona. No definite location was given.

"Charlie and Tucker killed," the message said.

Miss Waddell is described as Charles Collyer's sweetheart.

FOUR MEN FOUND DEAD IN NEW BRITAIN; ASPHYXIATED IN A TENEMENT HOUSE

NEW BRITAIN, Nov. 4—(AP)—Four men were found dead in a tenement house today from gas asphyxiation, believed caused when one of the quartet blew out a gas light, mistaking it for a candle. The bodies were discovered by Peter Bendas, father of one of the victims and owner of the house. The dead: Michael Bendas, 18; Michael Granoleesky, 19, both plumber's helpers; Peter Maxen, 35, truck driver, and Stefan Glisciak, 60, iron moulder.

Police said that Glisciak and Maxen had been drinking with the landlord and that the two youths went to bed at 10:30 o'clock. The boys were asleep when the landlord left the room shortly before midnight and it is thought that Glisciak, in a drunken stupor, forgot that gas had been installed in place of candles and blew out the light before retiring.

Another theory, which police studied, is that Glisciak not knowing how the gas jet worked blew the light out and left the jet open. The room was found filled with gas and the gas meter empty.

The discovery was made by Peter Bendas, who said he awake after being troubled that something was wrong in the house. He found the door to the room locked and summoned firemen from across the street. Entrance was made through a window and the four bodies were found in two beds. The body of Glisciak was warm and police, who were notified, used a pulmotor but without success.

Both Glisciak and Maxen were married and have families living in Poland. It is not known whether or not they have relatives in this country. The bodies were brought to different undertakers and, after being embalmed, the youths were laid in caskets facing each other, in the room where they died. They will have a double funeral.

HOOVER AND SMITH BOTH CONFIDENT OF VICTORY

Tonight the Radio Will Carry the Closing Arguments of the Presidential Candidates—Senator Moses Claims 408 Electoral Votes For Hoover—Chairman Raskob Predicts Smith Will Win 402 Votes in the Electoral College—Tomorrow 34 States Will Elect Governors—37 Members Will Be Chosen For the U. S. Senate and the Full Complement of 435 Members of the House Will Be Elected.

By E. FIELD BRITTIN
Associated Press Staff Writer.

The political year is at an end. One more day remains to the candidates in which to make their parting bows and tomorrow an audience of millions held in rapt attention for months will express its pleasure at the ballot box.

The two central figures in an electoral contest for the highest office within the gift of the American people, Albert E. Smith and Herbert Hoover have retired from the field of conquest, awaiting the hour that will carry their last appeals to the country. An army of other candidates for federal and state honors rest upon its arms, listening for the mandate of public opinion.

In its own turn an enthusiastic electorate is nearly ready to assume its duty after long deliberation. With unprecedented interest it has been prepared for a decision that not only will write history as it selects a president and vice president, but as well will send 32 spokesmen to the United States senate, a full complement of 435 members to the house of representatives and will appoint governors of 34 states.

The campaign dies in the buffeting winds of partisanship that attended its birth. To the last Hoover and Smith have been deaf—red by the noisy acclaim of their fellowmen and in the shattering echoes both have sounded the note of victory. Each returns to his own hearthstone proclaiming confidence that his is a winning case. The customary last touch of officiality has been given that confidence by the campaign generals. Senator Moses of New Hampshire claiming 408 electoral votes for Hoover and Chairman Raskob claiming 402 for Smith. Both cannot be right, and the people will decide.

The radio whose agency has given the remotest hamlet a new and personal interest in national politics will convey the closing arguments of the standard bearers. From his home in Palo Alto, California, Mr. Hoover will speak to the eastern listeners for 15 minutes. Two such appeals remain to Governor Smith, a special talk to the nation's women tonight and a noon hour and another half-hour of an hour's duration to the electorate at large.

The candidates spoke before audiences for the last time Saturday night. Mr. Hoover at Pueblo, Colo., and Governor Smith in his own New York city. The republican leader in a brief stop at Pueblo spoke directly to Colorado but his argument was intended as well for the country as a whole for its theme was tariff and prosperity, the high note of the Hoover campaign. He insisted upon the need of protecting home products against foreign competition and attacked the democratic party as inimical to that protection.

Governor Smith devoted his own address at Madison Square Garden to a summarization of all his arguments espoused in his many speeches and renewed his criticism that the republican party has lacked leadership. He took Hoover to task on the ground that he had evaded issues and had unfairly refused to debate them with Smith. Hanging over all the questions brought into the struggle Smith promises quick and efficient settlement of them through his proposed recourse to the people themselves particularly as to prohibition.

None of the questions of the day has escaped the torrential discussion that has poured from the lips of not only Hoover and Smith, but their running mates. Senator Curtis of Kansas and Senator Robinson of Arkansas, and a helping army of stump spankers as well. Tariff, prohibition, prosperity, governmental economy, water power, waterways farm relief, immigration—all those and more, too, including religion, in full or muted tones, have been vocally paraded before the electorate night and day. There is no way to discover which issue or combination of issues will govern the ballot-marking tomorrow. Nevertheless a hum of religious discussion has coursed through the public's deliberations and it is conceded by politicians that it will have its effect.

The fact of Governor Smith's Catholicism inspired much of the recrimination that entered the campaign. Certain evidences of argumentative use of Catholicism by republicans drew condemning utterance from Mr. Hoover himself, and Governor Smith and others in his camp have repeatedly charged that party with deliberate intent to divide the country on religious lines. That has as often been denied. Both sides have charged.

Also that whispering campaigns have been in force against the candidates, concerning religion on the democratic side and questioning Hoover's American citizenship on the other.

The latest development brought allegations by Chairman Raskob of the democratic national committee that publications in southern newspapers of religious attacks on Smith had been sought by Senator Moses from his republican headquarters in New York. Raskob exhibited documents as proof but Senator Moses replied that he had not seen the correspondence in question and he intimated that forgery had been practiced. From the republican camp has come a fresh charge by Henry J. Allen, director of publicity, that the democratic campaign was premeditating to circulate thousands on a last minute endeavor to establish that Mr. Hoover was for a time a British citizen.

The charges and denials have filled the air from the beginning and what part they will play in the shaping of the electorate's verdict will not be told in the few and simple ballot markings in answer to a score of questions. It is known that unless the registration of more than forty millions of men and women is a false indication, more votes than ever before will be counted tomorrow.

HOOVER GREETED BY LARGE CROWD AT SALT LAKE CITY

HOOVER TRAIN EN ROUTE TO PALO ALTO, Nov. 4—(AP)—Herbert Hoover [illegible]

Memorial hospital here in an automobile. Alfred Burnham, of Hartford, Conn., the pilot and Joseph Seymour, 12 years old, of this city, a second passenger, each suffered a broken leg and other injuries.

Burnham was unable to explain the cause of the accident. He and the two boys took off safely and, when a short distance from the field, were seen to circle and start back. When the airplane reached a point over the field, it tipped slightly and slipped sidewise. Then it plunged nose down, into the field from a height of about 100 feet.

TRIAL AGAIN EXONERATES MOTHER CONCEPCION

SAN ANGEL, Mexico, Nov. 4—(AP)—Jose De Leon-Toral, assassin of President-elect Alvaro Obregon, resumed the witness stand today at his trial and again exonerated Mother Concepcion, his co-defendant, of having any part in the killing of the Mexican general who was about to become president of the nation.

Answering questions of counsel for Mother Concepcion, Toral insisted that it was to hear mass that he visited the nun's house and for no other reason.

"On the brink of the tomb and before all the nation," the attorney said to Toral, "I demand of you to say sincerely what responsibility did Concepcion have in Obregon's assassination?"

"None, absolutely none," Toral answered.

He testified that he "was prepared to do something of the sort," when Mother Concepcion casually remarked to him that only by the death of General Obregon, President Calles of Patriarch Perez, of the Mexican Schismatic Catholic church, could the religious situation in Mexico be solved. Toral said that this remark, although the nun was utterly unaware of its effect, was the "last drop in the bucket." Without telling Concepcion of his plans, he immediately resolved to kill the president-elect, he asserted.

ARNOLD ROTHSTEIN SHOT AND SERIOUSLY WOUNDED

NEW YORK, Nov. 5—(AP)—Arnold Rothstein, alleged millionaire gambler and race track man, was seriously wounded by shots fired from a passing automobile tonight as he was walking up Seventh avenue, near 55th street. He was taken to a hospital, where his condition was described as critical. He refused to discuss the shooting with police.

Although the bullet entered the right side of Rothstein's abdomen, he walked on to 55th street, crossed the avenue and entered a side door of the Park Central hotel, where he asked the timekeeper to call a doctor, and collapsed.

A policeman who was called recognized Rothstein, roused the wounded man and asked what had happened.

"Never mind," he replied, "get me a doctor."

He also steadfastly refused to discuss the shooting with detectives who questioned him.

Rothstein figured in the 1919 world series scandal, Ban Johnson, at the time president of the American league, having accused him of paying $10,000 for stolen confessions of indicted Chicago White Sox players. Rothstein denied the charge and insisted he had no connection with the scandal.

INDICATIONS THAT PEASANTS WILL GOVERN RUMANIA

BUCHAREST, Rumania, Nov. 4—(AP)—Unless all present indications fail, the week will see Rumania governed by a group of stalwart peasants led by Juliu Maniu. Thus the powerful capitalistic Bratianu regime which, except for brief intervals, has for half a century held the richest country of the Balkans in a firm political and commercial grip will give way to farmers who form 80 per cent of the population and constitute the most industrious and sober elements in the country.

The sudden change from a government of professional politicians, precipitated by the resignation of Premier Vintila Bratianu at the request of the regency yesterday, to that of unsophisticated but earnest and conscientious peasants, represents one of the most novel political experiments in recent times.

FATAL ACCIDENT DUE TO FOG AND WET PAVEMENT

ANDOVER, Conn., Nov. 4—(AP)—An accident early this morning which took one life and caused injuries to three others, was laid by the driver of the machine to a dense fog and wet pavement which contributed to obscuring his vision of an approaching automobile. William E. Olson, Jr., nine months old child, was crushed to death between the machine and a telegraph pole.

Mr. and Mrs. William E. Olsen and Mrs. Mary Olson, all of Bridgeport, were treated for injuries. The four were on their way to Willimantic, the child riding in a hammock, when Olson was blinded by lights from another machine at Lindholms corner and drove off the highway into a pole. The child was thrown through an open window and pinned between the ma-

TWO DIVORCES GRANTED AT SHORT CALENDAR SESSION

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Nov. 4—Two uncontested divorce cases, one of them of local interest, and several cases were disposed of at a short calendar session of the Windham county superior court held in this city Saturday afternoon with Judge Edward M. Yeomans of Andover on the bench. In the divorce cased Lovina E. Doubleday of this city was granted a decree on the grounds of desertion from Walter Doubleday, now of Hartford. The plaintiff was also given the custody of two minor children which had been left for her to support. They were married in 1913 and the desertion was alleged to have taken place several years ago.

Nolida R. Ayotte of Putnam received a decree of divorce on the grounds of desertion from Edgar L. Ayotte, the couple having been separated for four years. Mrs. Ayotte testified that they were married in Woonsocket, R. I. August 2, 1920, that her husband deserted her five years later and was in the habit of associating with other women.

Fred B. Shippee and Andrew E. Meech of Danielson vs. Charles A. Haggerty of Webster, Mass., a suit for merchandise furnished the defendant, a road contractor, and not paid for, was the first case taken up. The court found judgment for the plaintiffs allowing Shippee to recover $516.30 and Meech $395.15.

Judgment for the plaintiff was also found in the case of D. Blumenthal vs. O. H. and Mavina Wilcox, both of Danielson, Blumenthal to recover $249.08 on a bill due for the purchase of a radio set.

In the case of Eckley R. Storre of New York vs. Chauncey E. Macfarlane of this city, a continuance was granted until Friday, November 16, to follow the short calendar. The defendants were ordered to file briefs in two weeks in the case of the Empire State Finance corporation vs. Stanley Obara of this city.

The following assignment of cases were made: Wednesday, November 7, Charlotte M. Bennett vs. Harley Perrin of Woodstock and Nick Vitiaz vs. John F. McAllister, both of Plainfield Thursday, Nov. 15, Leonard P. Morrison vs. Eugenia St. Germain of Danielson; Almer Forcier vs. Oscar J Bernier, both of Putnam and the Jordan Hardware company vs. William T. Schmeelk of Windham, assigned to follow the short calendar on Nov. 16. The jury case of Dewey Bourgus of Danielson vs. the Dayville Coal and Grain company was assigned for Tuesday, Nov. 20. Court adjourned until Wednesday, November 7, at 10 o'clock.

After one year of unbending effort by the chamber of commerce and other interested groups, new paragraphs are now being written daily into the history of growth and prosperity of Willimantic with the continued arrival into the city of truck-loads of new looms that will be used in the manufacture of the product of the new Willimantic Silk Co. Inc., in No. 2 mill of the old Quidnick-Windham plant. As the heavily laden trucks roll up Main street bearing the new silk looms they attract much favorable attention and the suggestion has been made by several that a band and parade escort would not be out of keeping. Up to Saturday afternoon 18 looms had already arrived at the mill and a total of sixty will have been installed by December 1. A warper has already been installed and parts of other machinery used in the making of broad silks are being received. The cable and power lines that will supply the power for the mill are being run by electricians. Although but a small percentage of the machinery will be in operation by the latter part of the coming week, a supply of raw silk is expected to arrive at that time and officials plan to get into immediate operation. Sufficient hands for this start have already been employed and are awaiting notification to report to work.

With the new silk industry and a metal screen plant already assured for Willimantic, the new industries committee of the chamber of commerce has turned its attention to pressing negotiations with still another concern that is contemplating taking over a space in the No. 2 mill while a conference was also held the past week in New York city with a fourth company deed a likely prospect for a sizable space in the No. 3 mill on the opposite side of Bridge street from No. 2.

The eleventh hour of the big politician campaign is bringing into every home a veritable avalanche of "reminders" through the mails. Committees of both parties and individual candidates turned to Uncle Sam this week end to help them in bringing before the public their final plea for votes. Beginning with a batch of 5,000 pieces of political mail at the local post office Friday night the number jumped to 15,000 Saturday. Substitute carriers had to be called in to assist the regulars in handling this flood. It is expected that several thousand more pieces of political mail will reach the post office sometime tonight for delivery Monday.

CHILD KILLED WHEN CAR CRASHES INTO POLE

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Nov. 4—William Edward Olsen, Jr., eight months old son of William E. Olsen Sr. and Liddy Gerber Olsen of Bridgeport, was almost instantly killed about 7:45 o'clock Saturday evening when a Buick coach in which they were riding from Bridgeport to this city was wrecked in a crash against a telephone pole at the sharp curve in the highway near the August Lindholm home in Andover. Mr. Olsen was blinded by the lights of another machine that approached from the opposite direction. Driving through rain and fog he misjudged the width of the highway in veering to his right and the right front side of the car crashed into the pole. The child, which had been sleeping in a swinging hammock in the rear of the coach and was being watched over by Mr. Olsen's wife and his mother, was hurled through one the shattered side windows and pinned between the car and the pole. It died soon after being extricated by the frantic parents and grandmother and members of the Lindholm family, who had rushed out upon hearing the crash. The other machine was seen driving off in the direction of Hartford, the occupants apparently unaware of the accident. Medical Examiner Dr. William L. Higgins of South Coventry was summoned and upon examining the infant at the Lindholm home pronounced death due to multiple injuries. The parents and Mr. Olsen's mother were treated for cuts and bruises and shock. The body of the child was turned over to the undertaking firm of Avery and Van Zandt and the parents continued on to this city where they were coming to spend the week end with Mr. Olsen's aunt, Mrs. Anna Erbacher of 20 Winter street. The deceased was born in Bridgeport, February 22, last. Mr. Olsen, who is a garageman in Bridgeport, said today that the condition of the car was such that he would not make any attempt to repair it. The accident was investigated by officers of the Hartford State police headquarters and no action was taken against the driver. Lindholm's corner has been the scene of several serious accidents, the highway taking a sharp turn at this point which is also the junction of the back road to Columbia.

MISS M. G. BURNS BECOMES BRIDE OF H. E. NELSON

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Nov. 4—On Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock there was a quiet wedding at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Burns when their daughter, Miss Mildred Gardiner Burns, was united in marriage with Haddon Eugene Nelson of Collinsville, this state.

Only immediate relatives and a few intimate friends of the young couple witnessed the ceremony, performed by Rev. Albert Abbott, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church, the double ring service being used. The bride was given in marriage by her father.

She was simply dressed in a gown of white crepe de chine and wearing the wedding veil worn by her sister, Mrs. Harold Bradford Atwood. The bride carried a shower bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley, and the lace handkerchief which her maternal grandmother carried on her wedding day—in 1872.

Mrs. Harold Bradford Atwood, the bride's sister, was matron of honor. She wore a gown of lemon yellow crepe taffeta and carried a bouquet of yellow roses and blue lace flowers.

James Thompson of Hartford acted as best man.

The bride is a graduate of Killingly high school in the class of 1923, and of the Hartford Hospital Training school class of 1926, and until recently has been on the staff of the Hartford Visiting Nurse association.

The groom is a graduate of the Collinsville high school and is employed in the engineering department of the Hartford Light and Power company.

Mrs. Sidney H. Perry played the wedding march from Lohengrin and Mendelssohn's wedding march, and also incidental music during the reception following the wedding. The bride received a large number of beautiful and useful gifts.

After a wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Nelson will be at their newly furnished home at 67 Vera street, West Hartford.

OBITUARY

Mrs. Joseph LaRose

A death at St. Joseph's hospital in Willimantic Saturday morning was that of Mrs. Albenia LaRose, 43, wife of Joseph LaRose, of Moosup, where the body was taken in charge of Undertaker Martin T. Burns. Besides her husband Mrs. LaRose leaves six children—Mrs. Victoria DesRoches, Huber LaRose, Alexander LaRose, Ovila LaRose, Edward LaRose and Miss Bonita LaRose. She also leaves a sister Mrs. Anna DesChamps of Baltic and two brothers Ovila Savoie of Moosup and Joseph Savoie of Waterbury.

Voting Demonstration

There will be opportunity here on Monday at republican headquarters in the Windham County Savings bank building for all voters to receive instructions as to the proper use of ballots in Tuesday's election. With about 700 voters about to cast ballots for the first time it is felt that numbers of these will be a bit uncertain as to marking them properly. All this doubt can be removed by a visit to headquarters where A. Putnam Woodward and others will be on duty to explain as to any doubtful points and to instruct in marking when asked to do so.

There was no political activity here today. The final last surge of the campaign will begin Monday morning and continue right through until the time that the polls close Tuesday afternoon. Working as never before, it is forecasted, republican and democratic leaders will be engaged Tuesday in getting out the vote. Their efforts will be toward coming as near as possible to polling 100 per cent of the registered strength of the parties in Killingly.

It was said today that practically all election officials to do duty in this town next Tuesday have been selected. Dozens of automobiles will be in use in getting voters to the polls, and these machines will reach out into the byways as well as the highways of the town to bring in the voters. It is promised that there will be no shortage of transportation. Party leaders are urging that all make a point to vote as early as possible. If this is done it will go a long way toward avoiding a rush in the closing hour or two of the voting period and largely eliminate standing in line awaiting a chance to vote.

Fog during the early hours of this morning was responsible for an automobile accident near the Grove street cemetery at Putnam when a car driven by Norman Scott of 29 Westminster road, East Weymouth, Mass., skidded and crashed in making the turn, injuring Mrs. Lillian Scott, wife of the operator of the car, and Mrs. Dora Clark of 7 Clinton street, Everett, Mass. William Clark, also a passenger in the machine, escaped without injury. The accident was investigated by State Officer Theodore Strand of the Danielson barracks.

A matter of very general satisfaction to the County Y. M. C. A. is the fact that operations at Camp Woodstock were conducted the past summer season, it is revealed by the recent report of the executive committee, were conducted without a loss, and that the books for the season were closed with all bills paid and the operation for the current year completed free of debt. A committee that is expected to report at a meeting to be held on November 14, has been named to consider a successor to First Vice-President of the Windham County Y. M. C. A. Ralph C. Jenkins of Putnam, who resigned upon leaving Putnam and the county to enter another field of endeavor. This committee is made up of Harry Richardson and Thomas Seaton of Moosup, Clifford H. Starkweather of Danielson, Attorney Ernest Morse, C. D. Sharpe and Arthur Smith of Putnam and Secretary L. Edwin Hill.

If those who sported tags were indicative of the number of those who contributed to the Boy Scout drive here on Saturday, and they were, the boys must have obtained a considerable sum with which to put their organization into better financial condition and enable them to do some of the things they plan on doing. The boys who were soliciting were alert and active. Individual contributions were not heavy, but the aggregate of them will be considerable.

Reports continue to come in from radio fans in this territory relative to hearing a recent long distance test in which WGY of Schenectady talked with a station in Sydney, Australia. This test was a morning one, about 8 o'clock, and was heard by people here, others in Wauregan and still others in Brooklyn.

Flowers at the Westfield Congregational church today were in memory of Mrs. Frederick A. Jacobs.

Mrs. Daniel O'Leary and daughter, Ethel, returned here at the week end after visiting with relatives in Boston.

Wednesday and Thursday of this week Rev. Harding W. Gaylord and Deacon George B. Guild will be in Greenwich attending the annual meeting and general conference of Congregational churches of Connecticut. J. Wayne Haskell will attend as a representative of the Congregational church at South Killingly.

In Tuesday's election in the town of Plainfield the voting will be by districts, at Plainfield, at Moosup and at Central Village. This is the first national election for which such an arrangement has been made, though the town has held recent local elections in that way.

Observers who realize the amount of work that remains to be done have about abandoned hope that the new Danielson-Brooklyn state highway will be completed before real cold weather stops the work.

Traffic was held up for a time early Saturday evening near Hopkins crossing, nine miles east of here on the Providence route, when a small Massachusetts car skidded and went through a fence. No one was injured in the accident.

William A. Desjardins of Lowell has been spending a few days visiting with relatives in Danielson.

Churches of Danielson will make much of the tenth anniversary of the signing of the armistice that ended the World war, on Sunday next. A pageant of war and peace is to be given Sunday evening under the auspices of the Danielson Federation of Churches.

Mrs. L. E. Kennedy, who has been a patient for observation at St. Vincent's hospital in Worcester the past week, returned to her home here today.

The Putnam Clergy Fellowship, an interdenominational organization of ministers, has arranged for a general exchange of pastors in eastern Windham county communities for Sunday, Nov. 18.

Some manufacturing concerns in town will grant brief leaves of absence to employes during Tuesday to allow them to vote and to overcome crowding at the polling places during the noon hour. The polls will be open in Killingly from 8 a. m. to 5 p. m., and the voting will be done at polling places in Danielson, Dayville and East Killingly.

Mr. and Mrs. Michael Comiskey of Hartford have been visiting for a few days with L. E. Kennedy.

There were representatives of the local American Legion auxiliary at the district meeting held in Rockville this afternoon.

Steady improvement continues to be noted in the case of Dr. W. A. Tanner, who is expected to be able to return to his home here from the Day Kimball hospital in the near future.

EDWARD F. CASEY, PIONEER MERCHANT, IS DEAD

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Nov. 4—Edward Francis Casey, 78, one of the pioneer merchants of the city and highly respected resident, died at his home, 147 Church street about 7 o'clock this morning. Although he had been in failing health for some time he had not been confined to his home until three weeks ago. He was born in Monson, Mass., September 28, 1850, a son of James and Mary Casey. He is survived by his wife, Anna Brady Casey; one son, Dr. Arthur B. Stanislaus Casey of Philadelphia; one daughter, Miss Elcia Eugena Casey of this city; one brother, Lawrence S. Casey of this city; and four sisters, Sister M. Philomenis of the Academy of the Holy Family at Baltic, Mrs. Margaret Anderson of Plymouth, Mass., Miss Katherine Casey of Tewksbury, Mass., and Mrs Hannah Chroniey of Springfield, Mass.

Edward F. Casey, whose passing ended a successful business career of over half a century in this city, had started his self-support when at the tender age of 11 years and it was through his persistence in industry and straightforward dealings that he acquired for himself and his family a desirable home and the benefits of success in business. He left the public schools of Monson at the age of 11 years and for one year worked in a satinet mill making clothing for the soldiers of '61. His father had been connected with the mill for 20 years. He then spent another year in school, when he again returned to the mill. He came to Willimantic in 1867 and at the age of 16 began to learn carpentry. Diligent and conscientious, he mastered that trade and in 1871 began contracting. In 1876 he entered into the undertaking business, being associated with one Mr. Finnigan for a time. He took up the furniture business in 1881 and some time later purchased the large three-story wooden block at 451 Main street from George Lathrop of Windham. Within the past few years as his health declined, he gradually limited the extensive store to smaller quarters in the block so that at the time of his death he retained but one of the three storefronts in the building.

Mr. Casey was married twice, his first wife being Katherine Sullivan, who died in 1886 and was a sister of the late J. O. Sullivan. Their one child, Eugene, died in infancy. He married again on November 29, 1890, to Annie Brudy, who, with their two children, survives him. Mr. Casey was the second Grand Knight of San Jose council No. 14, Knights of Columbus in which he held other offices of honor and he was treasurer of St. Vincent de Paul society of St. Joseph's parish for many years. Politically he was an independent democrat and in past years served as tax collector and assessor. He was keenly interested in the efforts of Charles N. C. Wheeler in the promotion of band music in the community and he annually made a substantial donation to the B. P. O. Elks band, formerly the American band which was received with much appreciation. A builder of his own success he was of kindly disposition and his passing is widely grieved throughout the community.

BARN ON OUTSKIRTS OF PUTNAM BURNED TO GROUND

PUTNAM, Nov. 4—The dilapidated "Poor" barn, situated on the Providence road about one and a half miles from Putnam was burned to the ground Friday afternoon, together with its entire contents of hay and a few garden tools. This ancient cattle home is one of the most widely known haunts and stop over for many members of the great national order of "Knights of the Road," and is a familiar nuisance to every man who in the past was and now is connected with the Putnam police force.

Before the fire destroyed the "Poor" Friday afternoon all tramps who were overtaken by the shades of night always made it their ambition to reach the barn, where its stored hay was extending a warm night's lodging.

The cause of the blaze was not determined today, although it is believed one of the tramps dropped a lighted cigarette in the hay loft not thinking that it could possibly exterminate the "Poor." The barn was in flames but a few minutes before it fell into the cellar. No help could possibly be obtained because of the distance from Putnam.

Through the efforts of Superintendent of Fire Alarm Charles T. Thayer of the Putnam fire department, the north end of the city has been extended greater fire protection. The closing of the Providence street bridge, cut off the east side of Providence street from access to box 36, leaving a large portion of the street several hundred feet from the nearest fire alarm box, which is at the corner of School and Providence street.

Supt. Thayer has installed a new box, 312, in front of the Putnam plant of the Belding Hemingway company at the head of Main street and is urging all persons to use this box instead of climbing over the barriers now on the bridge to sound box 36 which will send the fire department across the Quinebaug river.

Box 312 will be tested Monday evening a few moments after the daily fire alarm tests at 7:05 p. m.

An accident involving Mrs. John Clark and Mrs. William Scott, both of Everett, Mass., occurred this morning on cemetery curve, at lower Grove street. The car, according to hospital officials was proceeding into Putnam from Danielson. The operator of the car is unknown, and is believed to have failed to see the curve and crashed head to the embankment. Both Mrs. Scott and Mrs. Clark were rushed to the Day Kimball hospital where they were treated for lacerations of the scalp, face and hands, and in addition Mrs. Clark sustained a strained ligament in the knee, necessitating the application of a cast. Both were discharged this afternoon. The incident was not reported to the police and little is known regarding the amount of damage to the car.

Republican hopes for carrying the town in the election on Tuesday were somewhat dampened Friday evening when less than a hundred gathered at St. John's hall to attend the French republican rally. The meeting was preceded by a rider of the north end by St. Mary's Boy Scout band in the interests of stirring up the voters.

The meeting was presided over by Town Clerk Henry N. Benoit and republican candidate for re-election as judge of probate. Mr. Benoit introduced Hon. Emile Lord of Suffield. Mr. Pare's text was rendered in French and the chief high lights of his speech were the tariff, farm relief and immigration issues. The second speaker of the evening was Attorney Harry S. Gaucher of Willimantic. The theme of his address was the tariff conditions and the textile conditions in New England. He warned the voters of the effect of democratic rule on the working conditions in New England, stressing the point of protection the working man has is to support the republican ticket. It was apparent that Mr. Gaucher's remarks in the democratic section of the city were not warmly received, as many of his audience left the hall during the course of his speech.

It was evidenced today in the political circles that Putnam will see more split voters this year than in any other presidential election. There is no telling at present just what side will be successful at the close of the polls Tuesday evening, as both parties claim the election. In the state ticket camps leaders and nominees of both parties have been waging a furious battle for the additional votes and neither claims a victory as yet. As in surrounding towns, voters in Putnam who are normally republicans are going to split the ticket and give their support to the democratic standard bearers, but they will remain in the G. O. P. column as far as the state and town ticket goes. There are also a great number of democrats who will be in the same predicament on Tuesday.

Democratic nominees Alexander Gilman, candidate for district senator, Leon A. Talbot and J. Otis Fox, are working in harmony in an effort to break the Peckie-Davison popular wave, and their supporters today expressed themselves that they would be successful in their effort. Both Mr. Davison and Mr. Peckie, who for the past four years have been one of Putnam's members in general assembly, are striving to again obtain the usual republican landslide despite the democratic threats, in the battle for judge of probate, which is being waged between James J. Charron for the democrats and Henry N. Benoit. It is expected that the outcome will be close. Both Mr. Charron and Mr. Benoit are doing extensive campaigning in the north end of the city to place that vote in their favor.

The complete tabulation of Putnam's outcome is not expected to be received until late evening because of the large number of split tickets.

Rain here late this afternoon caused a considerable decrease in the size of the crowd that was expected to attend the "How to Vote" class that was held this evening in St. John's hall on Providence street. Those who braved the adverse weather felt greatly relieved after they had received a knowledge of how to mark the ticket on next Tuesday.

At the regular meeting of the Woman's Relief corps held last week the corps entertained the state grand officers at the annual inspection meeting. Twenty-six from the McGregor corps, Danielson; three from W. W. Perkins corps, New London; two from Sedgwick corps, Norwich and one from Wadhams corps, Waterbury, attended. Four veterans of the Civil war were special guests. A dinner was served at 12 o'clock. At 2:30 the meeting opened with the president, Mrs. Ethel Tourtellotte presiding. Miss Lillian Bailey, department president, and Mrs. Annie Maynard, inspecting officers were presented gifts. There were brief addresses by the visiting

FREEMAN AND WALCOTT

If it is desirable that we should send men to the state legislature who will be in harmony and sympathy with the republican majority, which is certain to exist, it is equally important and desirable that we should send republican representatives from this state to congress for the same reason.

Furthermore it is desirable that our representatives in congress should be men experienced in congressional affairs if such a thing is possible. When vacancies have to be filled new men must be chosen but here again is disclosed the importance of electing those who will be a part of the majority or controlling party.

In this congressional district Richard P. Freeman has served as our congressman for years. He knows his business. He has gained important committee places. He has established a prestige which means much to this district in looking after its interests as such a responsibility should be done. He occupies a position of special advantage because of his long service. The second district needs that advantage, that prestige and that experience to such an extent that it should insist upon his reelection on Tuesday by a rousing majority. The district needs representation that will be favorable to it and intimate to its interests. It has long insisted upon republican representation and it would be a great mistake to change. Congressman Freeman has served faithfully after the interests of the district and state and should be returned to Washington.

As senator from this district Frederic C. Walcott is the man who should succeed George P. McLean. His qualifications are of the highest. He is a close friend of and was a co-worker with Herbert Hoover. He knows the needs of Connecticut and from that knowledge of service which he has given in all offices held, political or otherwise, Connecticut is fortunate in being able to have such a candidate for the voters to support.

Both Congressman Freeman and Candidate Walcott are men who can be relied upon to give the right kind of support to Connecticut's interests in Washington and to uphold the policies of the new administration which it is believed will be republican.

DEPENDS ON REPUBLICAN VOTERS.

According to a careful study which has been made by Theodore G. Joslin, political writer of the Boston Transcript, during a swing about the country he figures that Hoover is assured of 271 electoral votes, or five more than a majority. These would be contributed by California, Colorado, Connecticut, Delaware, Idaho, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Maine, Michigan, Minnesota, Montana, Nevada, New Hampshire, New Jersey, North Dakota, Ohio, Oklahoma, Oregon, Pennsylvania, South Dakota, Utah, Vermont, Washington, West Virginia and Wyoming. He figures that four others, Arizona, Kentucky, Massachusetts and Nebraska, with 42 more votes will be for him.

Smith he considers assured of 96 votes from Alabama, Arkansas, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, South Carolina, Texas and Virginia, with an additional 46 probably coming from Florida, New Mexico, North Carolina, Tennessee and Wisconsin.

That leaves four states Maryland, Missouri, New York and Rhode Island as uncertain.

J. Henry Roraback, chairman of the republican state central committee of Connecticut says that Connecticut will go republican by 75,000 or better.

These are of course opinions, but they are based upon a knowledge of the conditions as they exist. Chairman Roraback has not changed his opinion because of the increased registrations. He sees Connecticut safely victorious, but it cannot fail to be appreciated by the Connecticut republicans that it rests with them to see that the state does go republican by as large a plurality as indicated, if not larger. It cannot be done if they do not vote.

Mr. Hoover and other leaders in his campaign have expressed confidence in the outcome if the republican vote is gotten out. That will be the important requirement from now on. The fact that an unusual number of new voters has been made is impressive as far as it goes, but it will be of no benefit unless the voters are gotten to the polls.

At election time there should be no question about personal interest, but it is a matter of experience that too many have to be urged to do their duty. The real issues of the campaign and the welfare of the nation call for the greatest interest in getting to the polls [illegible] their standard-bearer and the party's principles [illegible]

[illegible] ENDORSES HOOVER

[illegible] Herbert Hoover and his [illegible] presidency of the United [illegible] Coolidge has [illegible] nearly ended [illegible] has conducted [illegible] his approval the [illegible] Mr. Hoover would [illegible] national problems.

[illegible] Hoover's address [illegible] President felt called [illegible] concerning his [illegible] to a clear and [illegible] manner. And [illegible] made such a favorable im- [illegible] upon the president cannot [illegible] make the same effective ap- [illegible] throughout the country. President Coolidge has expressed a sentiment that is widespread. When he said of the St. Louis address "It is a concluding address of a series which have disclosed a breadth of information, a maturity of thought and a soundness of conclusion of public questions never surpassed in a presidential campaign" he voiced what others would have liked to say.

Mr. Hoover's campaign has been conducted upon a high level. It displays the characteristics of the man, and when the president said "You have had the knowledge and judgment which enables you to tell the people the truth. You have been clear, candid and courteous, demonstrating your faith in the people and your consciousness that the truth has a power and conclusiveness of its own which is always supreme," he directed attention to one of the outstanding features of the campaign.

There could be no better endorsement than "You have shown your fitness to be president." It shows that the president has the utmost confidence in such a man as his successor. He knows that the policies for which he has so zealously stood will be safe and well did he say "I wish to congratulate you on the high quality of your leadership. You are able, experienced, trustworthy and safe. Your success in the campaign seems assured and I shall turn over the great office of president of the United States of America to your keeping sure that it will be competent hands in which the welfare of the people will be secure."

If there is anyone who has had the least lingering doubt that Calvin Coolidge did not intend to give Mr. Hoover his backing it has been most effectively removed.

DO YOUR VOTING EARLY

It may not require a voter to spend any more time voting at a presidential election than at any other time, nevertheless with the large number of new voters this year each and every one should be impressed with the importance of getting to the polls as early as possible.

The town officials have been able to obtain added machines for this election and the hours of voting will be from 6 a. m. to 6 p. m., but with over 2200 new voters and the ruling of the attorney general that the machines must be locked at the closing hour, it behooves all to see that the voting is done before the final hours by that great majority of voters who can just as easily vote early as late.

Indications point to a large vote before exist. That will mean that full use will be made of the voting facilities but it calls for keeping the machines busy throughout the day instead of waiting until afternoon or late in the day, before attending to such an important duty. Procrastination under such conditions simply invites congestion, and too often needlessly so.

Those who vote in the morning will be certain that they will not be caught in such a jam at the close of the voting day that it will be impossible for them to exercise their franchise. No one should lose their vote through mailing until a few minutes before 6 p. m. only to find that they are part of a line of late ones who cannot beat the clock. It is highly important to vote right, but it is nevertheless important to vote early.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Go to the polls Tuesday and vote the straight republican ticket.

The man on the corner says: The presidential election is rapidly coming down the home stretch.

Colonel Lindbergh is to fly home from Mexico to vote for Hoover. Those who are within a few minutes of a ballot box ought to be showing as much interest.

While the farmers are looking to the coming congressional session or a special one to extend them aid they should realize the value of doing something for themselves at the polls.

If there have been any efforts by candidates to fool the people they have been conducted by Alfred E. Smith who has straddled, distorted, flopped and promised anything and everything.

There was never a time when republicans had better reasons for going to the polls and endorsing the best kind of a national administration by voting its policies under Herbert Hoover than will be presented on Tuesday. It is a time to vote the straight republican ticket.

WOMAN IN LIFE AND IN THE KITCHEN

SUGGESTIONS FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

Honey will not sour if kept in a dry place.

The more flour is sifted the lighter it becomes.

Tapioca cream pudding is nice flavored with chopped cooked prunes.

A tough fowl may be made tender by rubbing it inside and out with a cut lemon.

Use 1½ teaspoonfuls of baking powder for each cup of flour in making quick breads and cake.

Dimmer protectors may be fastened on with tufts of wool as one would tuft a quilt.

Choose a windy day to wash pillows, as breezes liven up feathers as well as dry them.

Soak dried fruits several hours before attempting to wash them to dislodge dirt in the creases.

Chewing gum spatters may be removed from woolly with strawberry huller, or a pair of pliers.

If salad dressing begins to curdle add a little unbeaten white of egg and it will become smooth again.

Remove fallen leaves from roof gutters to avert clogging and rusting.

An assorted collection of furniture may be transformed into a harmonious set by the judicious use of paint or lacquer.

Figures cut from cold cooked beets make pretty garnishings for a colorless salad.

Popovers may be filled with preserves and topped with whipped cream and then served as a dessert.

Candleholders should be inserted in the icing of the cake before it is entirely set. Then they will not cause any cracks in the surface.

Leftover boiled potatoes may readily be converted into potatoes au gratin by means of a white sauce and chopped sharp cheese.

A small mound of highly seasoned tomato jelly garnished with chopped olives and served on lettuce makes a pretty and good-to-eat appetizer.

KITCHEN WALLS

When cleaning painted kitchen walls, dip a damp cloth into dry baking soda, wipe the wall with this damp cloth, then with another damp cloth it works like magic.

HEAVY FOOD

When frying doughnuts or French-fried potatoes in deep fat avoid using too many pieces at one time, or the fat will be absorbed by the food and the food will become heavy, greasy and indigestible.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY

Oatmeal contains more fat than any other cereal and should therefore be included in the breakfast menus of the hard worker on these wintry mornings.

By combining olive oil, almond oil and lanoline in equal quantities you may enjoy the distinctive, individual benefits of each of these oils, overcome the unpleasant stickiness of the lanoline, and have an effective corrective for brittle nails.

Listlessness and depression are among beauty's worst enemies. They make the eyes dull and uninteresting, the skin sallow and the posture slouching. Sometimes a spell of rainy weather will induce this destructive mood. Our mental skies become clouded in sympathy with nature. When bright, clear days arrive, optimism returns. However, there is usually an internal cause for lack of "pep." Digestive trouble and constipation are the chief offenders in most cases, especially when mental depression is chronic. Lack of sunlight, fresh air and exercise are other common causes.

PUTTING AWAY SCREENS AND AWNINGS FOR USE NEXT YEAR

This is the month to think of putting away and cleaning the dusty-rusty screens. With a hair dustbrush, brush off all surplus dust and then with kerosene wipe them thoroughly from both sides. The kerosene will clean and reduce the rust of those that are not non-rusting. To prevent the frames from warping the screens should be stood straight, each one marked, and the whole group then covered with heavy paper, ticking or carpet.

Awnings, like the success, will need a good brushing and then they, too, should be tagged with room and window number. Any cords or screws that are taken out at this time are best wrapped and fastened to the awning. With awnings on small houses or cottages a good plan is to drop them and then hose them off until clean. Let them dry and then roll. A drop of oil on the hinges or rollers will prevent rust or corrosion. —American Home.

THE RUGS

Go over the rugs once every so often with a broom dipped in hot water to which a little turpentine has been added. This will freshen a faded carpet wonderfully and at the same time prevent moths.

If the rug has faded but otherwise is good, it will pay to have it dyed a plain dark color. A small bright rug, such as a hook or medallion rug, will take away any somber look.

NEW KID GLOVES

If you are caught in a shower and your new kid gloves are hopelessly spotted, do not let them dry, but, while still on the hands and damp, rub very gently with a damp cloth so that the raindrops are scattered. If you can do this in time they will not spot.

NOT SAFE

Never let vegetables cool in aluminum or metal saucepans. Unless the dish is earthenware, the metal is apt to affect the delicate flavor of the vegetables.

LAUNDRY HINTS.

Launder embroidered scallops before trimming and you will have a perfect edge.

A garment will not pucker if it is ironed with a thread of the goods until dry.

A tablespoonful of borax in the water when washing light-colored stockings will remove those stains.

To renovate a chiny coat rub it well with a little turpentine. Ammonia, coffee or a solution of ammonia is also recommended for the purpose.

PAINTED DRAWERS KEEP LINEN WHITE.

Paint color has been found to have a definite effect upon linen. The discovery seems to offer a solution for the long-standing household problem of keeping linen white.

By coating the inside of drawers where linen is kept with blue paint or enamel, the desired end is attained. It has long been the habit of the more fastidious housewives to keep their best linen wrapped in blue paper, but this method, while effective, is decidedly inconvenient.

The painted drawer, however, makes it possible to keep the every-day pieces as well as the finest in tip-top condition. It is a much easier and neater way.

LOOK AT THE FURNACE.

Before starting the furnace, there are several things that should be considered. Assuming that the hot air furnace was not cleaned after the last fire in the spring, nor the pipes taken out and wrapped to prevent corroding, they must now be cleaned out, before the first fire. The water pipes of the steam and hot water heaters should be freed from sediment and one should be sure that the water circulation is clear. Are the fire grate and firebox lining of the stove or furnace in good condition? The middle of the winter will be found a poor time for repairs.

FOR BUTTER PANS.

One woman cuts the waxed paper wrappings from bread into squares and tacks them on the inside of her pantry door. She claims it is a saver of time and disposition when she wants to lard or butter a pan.

WHEN LENDING DISHES.

When lending dishes for socials do away with the chance of their becoming mixed by pasting a label on the bottom of each dish made from adhesive tape, on which is written in ink your name. It will stick through many washings.

GLORIFYING THE DUST-CLOTH.

Behold the humble dust-cloth now appears in all the colors of the rainbow, encased in a bag, which has colored patchwork discs embroidered upon the side. This case can be bought ready to embroider.

HOUSE PLANTS.

When watering house plants, pour the water from a pitcher through a small funnel on to the plant. Then you will not wet floors and rugs by water running off the leaves.

DICTATES OF FASHION

A new vest-blouse is both chic and practical.

Astrachan is one of the very smart flat furs.

Some coats have a decidedly raised waist line.

Collars of bolster scarf and shawl type often end in panel effects.

Evening wraps are long and wide, being cut to conform to the contours of frocks.

Transparent velvet trims many new crepe frocks.

The slender tight hip line is a feature of fall frocks.

Tiers attached to the dress skirt in a bias-like flare at one side.

Bows which knot through bone rings are a trimming feature of new fall suits.

Imported cloth and fur coats show sleeves which widen at the wrist.

Some smart frocks have a light colored bodice and darker skirt.

New coat materials in gay reds, bright blues and striking greens are trimmed with furs of darker shades.

French designers show a tendency toward the molded form and bustle.

Interwoven net and ribbon fashions a parasol among new fall novelties.

A novelty feature of winter coats is the yoke cut in one with the sleeves, which gives a broad effect across the shoulders.

Strings of jade and Chinese amber form a popular necklace.

Many evening gowns are cut on princess lines.

A new fad is to have the fan made of the same material as the evening gown.

Twelve-inch black kid gloves fasten with nine black and red buttons and are adorned with red embroidery.

The beaded jacket is the latest feature of smart afternoon gowns.

Diagonal seaming is used for trimming on many afternoon gowns.

Both cut-in and patch pockets are smartly individualized in fall fashions.

THREE-PIECE VELVET ENSEMBLE

A charming ensemble that will be appropriate for many occasions is made of transparent velvet with a pleated skirt and short jacket of that popular material. The blouse is of nude colored satin with long sleeves and the jacket is lined with the same.

SMOCK OR NEGLIGEE?

A negligee of crepe de chine cut on the ever becoming lines of a smock is a novelty which can be appreciated by many women, especially when the trimming consists of fascinating bands of contrasting color.

CONCERNING WOMEN.

The Girl Scouts' national organization now claims a membership of more than 200,000.

Miss Alice V. Kern of Coppersburg, Pa., has just retired after teaching school continuously for 40 years.

Dr. C. A. Harkness, a Chicago eye expert declares that he has never found a colorblind woman in 30 years of practice.

Classes in which women were taught maternal, infant and child care were held in 72 states during the fiscal year of 1927.

Mme. Delius, 90-year-old mother of Frederick Delius, a famous British composer, recently flew from Le Bourget, France to Croydon, Eng.

The nationalist government in China has decreed that mothers of marriageable daughters are entitled to no more than $150 from future sons-in-law.

USE FOR MAGAZINES

As you sort over old magazines, put the pages of cutouts and pictures of animals, flowers, etc., away for a rainy day. These, together with scissors, will amuse the children for hours.

CLEANING IVORY.

Make a paste of sawdust moistened with equal parts of water and lemon juice. Spread the paste on the ivory and let dry. Brush off with a dry brush. A soft cloth dammened and then dipped in salt will clean plain smooth ivory such as articles for the bureau or dressing table.

RECIPES.

Hamburg Roast: Mix two pounds of hamburk steak with one teaspoon of poultry dressing and two teaspoons of celery and fill with any desired stuffing, then cover the stuffing with the salt. Form into a loaf. Remove the meat. Brown each side of the loaf in a hot pan. Add a little water. Put thin slices of onion on top of the loaf, cover and bake for about 40 minutes. Remove the loaf from the pan add water enough to brown gravy to make two cupfuls, also four tablespoons of flour and half a teaspoon of salt.

Green Tomato Pickle: Run through a meat grinder or chop fine one quart each of cucumbers, green tomatoes, cabbage and onions, one bunch of celery, one dozen sweet green peppers and two or three hot peppers. Pour over this three cups of boiling water to which half a cupful of salt has been added and let stand overnight. Squeeze out in the morning. Take half a cup of flour, half a cup of dry mustard dissolved in one quart of vinegar and a tablespoon of celery seed. Let this boil for 20 minutes then mix it with the vegetables. Place in jars.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Sees Hope in City Meeting

Mr. Editor: In your paper of Nov. 1 is a letter signed a Satisfied Customer. He must have a heart as big as a meeting house.

He has all the conveniences as well as luxuries in the line of electric fixtures, while I have a five-room house and none of the electric fixtures he speaks about, except the little light I use. He seems to glory in the fact that his electricity is cut from $14 to $5.50, which is almost 1-3, while mine is increased about 200 per cent. By his letter I should judge him to be a man of wealth and abundantly able to have all the luxuries of life while I am a working man working for daily wages and have to account for every penny to make both ends meet. He seems to glory in the fact that I am made to help him pay for his conveniences by paying for the electric current I do not have.

I think when he meets St. Peter at the Pearly Gates, Peter, instead of finding wings, will find briefies.

I think there is a passage in Scripture that reads thusly: To him that hath more shall be given; to him that hath not what little he hath shall be taken away.

He says he is strong for the new rate and hopes it stays notwithstanding I shall be obliged, as a taxpaying owner of the municipal plant, to return to kerosene.

But, hold on, we are going to have a city meeting next Thursday evening. Then you may be obliged to pay for what you use that the other fellow is helping you to pay for by the new rate.

A DISSATISFIED CUSTOMER.

Urges Hoover and Curtis

Mr. Editor: This is an appeal to all the public for the election on Tuesday of Hoover and the republican party. Give the prosperity and the happiness to the people and to America. Give to America all that is right for its success. Let Hoover, Curtis and the republican party by your vote continue the great work and add more glory to our country.

The general interest of the country and especially the interest of the working and prospering class in America demand the triumphant success of the republican party. The candidate of the republican party, Herbert Hoover, is the greatest personage of America today. He is the most known American throughout the world. He is the greatest organizer that Europe and America admired during the World war and afterwards. The election of Hoover and the success of the republican party will signify the continuance and development of work and business, the preservation of high wages and the consolidation of the prosperity which prevails in America today. The republican party, which during the last eight years with such a diligence, cleverness and success has handled all the great internal and external questions and affairs of the country. Which upheld the prestige of the United States and which works for the consolidation of peace, asks today the vote of the American people to continue its great job. The ballot for Hoover and Curtis guarantees a new four years of normal work, great profits and the diminution of taxation.

All vote on the 6th of November for Hoover and Curtis and give the victory to all the candidates of the republican party.

NEW BOOKS

The Presidency vs. Hoover. By Samuel Crowther. Cloth, 286 pages. Published by Doubleday, Doran & Co., Inc. Garden City, N. Y. Price $2.50.

The author uses up half his book in the role of attorney for the prosecution. He shows what a tremendous obligation toward his country and fellow citizens any man in the presidency must carry and discharge and traces the long lines of influence reaching out from the seat of government along which the president of the United States may affect for better or worse the peace and well-being of his fellow citizens but also the populace of the world.

At the middle of the volume the author changes roles. He goes over to the defense. Standing side by side with Mr. Hoover, he follows through his previous analysis and shows point by point how the republican nominee in the present campaign measures up to the high stipulations which he has just established for a capable president of the United States. He counts little or nothing on conventional talents for political leadership—except brains, integrity, disinterestedness and courage, the elemental virtues that never grow old. But spellbinding and adroit party strategy and masterful bossing of the political machine are not named among Mr. Crowther's requisites now discovered in his analysis of Mr. Hoover.

Mr. Crowther believes in Mr. Hoover as prospective president fundamentally because—he aforesaid elemental virtues being granted—he is through and through an engineer. The typical modern engineer is a man who gets things done which have been proposed to him, first, by assembling all the factors of the problem given, and then impartially and dispassionately working out practical means of realizing the ends essential. He presents a strong and convincing argument in behalf of Mr. Hoover.

Stories That Recall Others

How Many Holes?

Five-year-old Sally had often heard her father tell about his golf scores. Recently her mother came home from a bridge party and told that the prize had been given to a friend of hers for having the highest score. Sally spoke up: "How many holes did she go around in?"

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4 — To a man like Andy Mellon, whose banking experience began in his 'teens, the notion that any man could arrive at his 28th year without ever having seen a bank check or learned what to do in a banking way with his surplus cash is almost inconceivable.

There has never been a time when the shy little treasury secretary has not known all about the why, where and what-for of the banking business; which makes the tale related to him by that wizard of the electrical world, Thomas A. Edison, at the time of the ceremony at which Edison was decorated with a congressional medal, still a matter for Mellon chuckles whenever he tells it, as he frequently does. It's his favorite dinner table yarn.

Edison's First Check

The inventor, in conversation with Mellon, harked back to a time when one of his contrivances had been snapped up at a $40,000 price, to his consternation and astonishment. He would have considered $3,000 an outside figure and when the purchaser drew him a $40,000 check in off-hand fashion, young Edison was utterly dazed. It was, he told Mellon, the first time he had ever seen a bank check, despite his 28 years, and he had no idea what to do with it.

The maker told him to take it to the bank. He did so, supposing that if the bit of paper he held was actually of cash value, which he doubted, all he had to do was hand it in like a parcel check, and a package of money, real money, would be forthcoming. When his signature on the check was demanded and the young bank attaches talked in a language he failed to comprehend about endorsements and the like, Edison said he was convinced something was wrong, retrieved the check and dashed back to the maker to demand money instead.

Crushed Under Currency

He was laughed at and the need for an endorsing signature explained. The check maker also called up the bank and that let Edison in for more trouble. When he got back there, the bank youngsters had laid a trap for the financial greenhorn and solemnly paid him off in $5 and $10 bills. He was deluged with packets of money. Hastily stuffing all he could into his pockets, Edison gathered the remainder in his arms and fled for home, to sit up all night on guard over this vast treasure. He did not know what to do with it.

Telling Mellon of his plight with a wealth of whimsical detail that set the Pittsburgh banker off in gales of laughter, the inventor said he made the money up into a great package and hauled it off down town again next day in frantic search of rescue from his plight.

That $40,000 was a millstone about his neck. He saw himself facing endless nights and days of sleepless guard duty over his wealth and rushed back to the man who made the check demanding that he take the money back or do something to get this old-man-of-the-sea in greenbacks off the bowed shoulders of the inventor. That led, of course, to Edison's first bank account and to his introduction to the business of banking.

CHILD TRAINING

A Happy Boy Versus a Spotless House.

Lillie M. Saunders.

"Mother, may I make some cookies?" asked nine-year-old Billie Dean.

"I should say you may not!" quickly answered his mother with startled surprise. "What in the world ever put such an idea into your head?"

"Well," replied the lad in rather a shamed one, "Tommy Rogers' mother let him made some and they tasted awful good 'cause he gave me a whole handful of them. He said he made 'em all by himself and I know I could, too. Please, Mother, let me try just once an' if they are not good, I'll never ask again. Honest I won't, Mother," he added earnestly.

"Well, I'm not willing and that settles it. I'm not going to have you messing up my kitchen. Go on out and play with your wagon."

"Oh, shoot!" exclaimed the disappointed boy. "I want to make some cookies. I'm tired of playing with that old wagon."

"Billie Dean, that's not an old wagon and you know it," said his mother. "Why, shame on you! You've had it only a week. Now go on out and keep still, I say." Billie slouched out, shutting the screen door with a bang that caused his mother to exclaim impatiently, "That boy! What shall I do with him?"

Her aunt from another town happened to be visiting her. In answer to the mother's perplexed query she replied, "Mary, I think you are making a serious mistake in not permitting Billie to make those cookies when he wants to so badly. If he were my boy I'd be only too glad to have him want to do such things."

"But, Auntie, just think what a mess he'll make," protested Mrs. Dean.

"I don't see why he should," replied the older woman, "and even if he did he could clean it up, couldn't he?"

"Oh, maybe he could, but he wouldn't."

"Well, have it understood that if you let him make the cookies he is to leave everything just as clean and orderly as he found it. Anyway, Mary dear," continued her aunt, "don't you consider it all a part of your job as mother and home-maker? You can't just feed and clothe your boy and call him raised. You've got to study him, live with him and for him, love him and show him you do. I've been here three days and I've not once seen you play with Billie, or show the least interest in his affairs. He's such a fine little fellow, too, I wish he were my boy," she added wistfully.

"Oh, I don't," quickly replied the mother with a laugh. "I want him myself, but he does drive me half frantic sometimes — always wanting to be doing some unheard of thing."

"Well," returned her aunt, "that's the way Columbus happened to discover America. You'd not want him sitting around like a dummy, would you? Anyway, I like to see a boy take an interest in housework. Mary, if you let Billie make those cookies I'll see that he leaves everything in good condition."

"All right, Auntie dear, you win. I'll call Billie." She found him sitting disconsolately in his wagon back of the house.

"O, Billie, come here," she called. "What you want?" asked the lad sullenly.

"Well, come and see," returned his mother. "I've changed my mind about those cookies. You may make some if you want to and will clean up afterwards."

The lad gave a bound and let out a yell of joy. "Oh goody, goody, Mother! You bet I'll clean up afterwards! You'll see. And I'll make you some good cookies, too."

PROPER FEEDING METHODS REDUCE OFF-FLAVORS IN MILK

While milk producers are giving considerable attention to preventing losses due to sour milk, they too rarely recognize that other flavors and odors also cause an annual loss probably as great as that from sour milk. Milk containing abnormal flavors and odors is rejected by dealers and consumers.

Abnormal flavors result mainly from four causes, according to C. J. Babcock of the bureau of dairy industry, United States department of agriculture. They may be due to the physical condition of the cow, to highly flavored feeds and weeds, to the absorption of odors by the milk after it is drawn, or to biological changes in the milk.

If due to the condition of the cow or to feeds the objectionable flavors and odors will be noticeable just after milking and usually will not increase with time. Those caused by absorption develop only when the atmosphere is permeated with pronounced odors, whereas those due to biological changes become more apparent after some time has elapsed.

Feeds and weeds impart flavors and odors to milk mainly through the body of the cow, although feed-tainted barn air may have some effect. The time of feeding, therefore, is an important factor to consider in preventing undesirable flavors in the milk, according to Babcock. In most cases feeds do not flavor the milk except for a few hours, although some feeds, such as cabbage, when consumed in large quantities may still be noticeable in milk drawn 12 hours after feeding. For this reason, he says, highly flavored feeds should be fed immediately after milking—never just before. When fed as short a time as one hour before milking such feeds as silage made from corn, alfalfa, sweet clover or soy beans, and such feeds as green alfalfa, cabbage, turnips, rape and kale seriously affect the flavor and odor of milk. Green rye, green cowpeas, potatoes, dried-beet pulp, and carrots affect the milk only to a slight degree, whereas green corn, green oats and peas, green soy beans, pumpkins and sugar beets have practically no effect on the flavor and odor of milk.

Weeds that cause abnormal flavors should be eradicated from pastures. Until this is done, cows should be removed from infested pastures as long as possible before each milking. It is necessary to remove cows from garlic-infested pastures four to seven hours before milking to eliminate entirely the garlic flavor from the milk.

MANY TESTS FINALLY FREE COUNTY FROM TUBERCULOSIS

Included in a number of counties certified by the United States department of agriculture on Oct. 1, 1928, as modified accredited areas, indicating their relative freedom from bovine tuberculosis, was Cuyahoga county, O., the most heavily infected county, to establish itself as an accredited area. The records show that on the first county-wide test approximately 9,700 cattle were tested, with nearly 2,400 reactors—nearly 25 per cent. The cattle tested were included in more than 2,350 herds, 550 of which were found to be infected.

The result of this work was intensely interesting, as the milk from this area entered into the Cleveland trade. The city officials having knowledge of the conditions existing in these herds required that they be tuberculin tested in conformity with the uniform plan in effect between the state and the federal government. Following retests of the infected herds a second complete test of the county was made, resulting in infection being disclosed in 147 herds, the average being 3.3 per cent. of all the cattle tested. A third complete test showed a reduction in infection from 3.3 per cent. to less than 1 per cent. of all the cattle in the county. Only 34 herds were found infected. A later retest applied to these infected herds showed only four remaining which had diseased animals.

Inasmuch as there was considerable opposition on the part of the livestock owners to this work when it was first inaugurated, the results are extremely valuable, as they indicate that even in very badly infected counties the tuberculin test functions efficiently. There is no doubt that although losses were sustained by individual cattle owners, they would not return to the old conditions even if it were possible to do so.

Experience in area work fully indicates that, following the application of the test, better sanitation is practiced on the farms, resulting in much improved dairy products, and that replacements in infected areas are almost always made with a better type of livestock. Thus are the producers benefited as well as the consumers, who are consistently demanding a product produced under proper sanitary conditions from cattle known to be healthy.

TESTIMONIAL GIFT OF $4,000 TO DR. HOWE AS ACTIVE PASTORATE ENDS

Rev. Dr. Samuel H. Howe, the beloved pastor of Park Congregational church for the last 45 years, closed his active pastorate there Sunday and after the morning service at the church a committee on testimonial called upon Dr. Howe at his home on Williams avenue and presented him a check for $4,000. The presentation was made by Principal H. A. Tirrell, the sum having been raised through the contributions of present members of the church and former members who are now resident in other cities, all uniting in this gift of affection to the pastor whose ministration had made such a deep impression upon their lives.

Dr. Howe, who is now pastor emeritus of the church, acknowledged the gift with an expression of his deepest gratitude and continued interest in the church and the individuals who constitute its present and past membership.

REV. DR. SAMUEL H. HOWE

APPRECIATION OF DR. HOWE AT COMMUNITY SERVICE

Expressions of appreciation of Rev. Dr. Howe and also of Rev. E. C. Dunbar, who is closing his pastorate at the First Baptist church to go to a pastorate in New Jersey, were given Sunday evening in a community service at the Central Baptist church under the auspices of the Woman's Crusade of the W. C. T. U., at which the address of the evening was given by Professor Albert Levitt of New York, who spoke upon "The Results and Possibilities of Prohibition."

Rev. Joseph Cooper of Trinity Methodist Episcopal church presided at the service, reading the scripture lesson and prayer was offered by Rev. Mr. Dunbar. After the anthem by the quartette, Blessed is the Man That Trusteth in Thee, Rev. C. H. Ricketts of Greeneville Congregational church, spoke the words of appreciation of Dr. Howe.

The long and fruitful pastorate of the Park church pastor is officially ending, said Rev. Mr. Ricketts but in a certain sense no pastorate ever ends, especially one that has continued for nearly half a century. The pastorate of a man who makes a downright impression for his Lord and master never ends, but goes on forever. Dr. Howe has given forty-five years of magnificent constructive Christian labor, continued the speaker and he went on to mention four attributes of the Park church pastor. First was the emphasis he put on the great doctrine of immortality. You always know exactly where he stands on these great vital questions. Second was his unshaken belief in the ultimate triumph of Jesus Christ. So he always placed great emphasis on Christian missions. He had wonderful ability at analysis. There were no long introductions to his sermons, no one could accuse him of wandering from his subject, but he went right at the root of the matter, and in his chaste language you always knew exactly what he meant. That was preaching. A voice so full of the spirit of Christ will live forever. He had a wide acquaintance with theology and literature, a marvelous power of dissection and combination. His was the kind of preaching that never dies. Our belief and our hope, said Rev. Mr. Ricketts in conclusion, is that these crowning years of his life may be his richest and his most blessed.

Rev. C. F. Bailey of the First Congregational church followed with an expression of appreciation of Rev. Mr. Dunbar, speaking of the changing conditions in the ministry in the last one hundred years, which have brought the church and the minister into a closer relation with community life and referred to the participation by Rev. Mr. Dunbar in about a dozen church and civic organization during his ministry in Norwich. He had been loyal to his profession and of great service to the community, said Rev. Mr. Bailey, as he assured the departing pastor of the good wishes that will follow him.

Rev. Mr. Bailey spoke briefly and was followed by the address of Professor Levitt.

Professor Levitt devoted his address to a discussion of the purpose and the results of the prohibition amendment and the possibility of carrying out the purpose if it has not already been fulfilled.

Claiming that the liquor traffic in the United States has been practically abolished, as far as legal sale of intoxicating liquor is concerned, and that there has been a great decrease in the amount of liquor consumed, this being shown by estimates made by Secretary Fox of the United States Brewers' association, Professor Levitt went on to discuss some of the so-called by-products such as the bootlegger, crime and lawlessness, and the good by-products such as greater efficiency in workmanship, decrease in industrial accidents and better financial conditions for the workingman's family.

He charged that it was a slander upon our young people to say that there is more drinking among them than formerly. There is less drinking now in colleges than before the war, he said.

He advocated for the future a process of education for law enforcement, which should be through the church, through the school and through voting in accordance with one's convictions.

He was heartily applauded as he concluded his address. An offering taken at the service amounted to $56.

ACADEMY LOSES TO WINDHAM HIGH BY THE MARGIN OF ONE POINT

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Nov. 4—Windham high scored its first victory of the season at the expense of Norwich Free Academy here Saturday afternoon and also practically eliminated the Rose City club from the title in the Eastern Conn.-Western Rhode Island league. The score was 7 to 6 and it marked the second defeat for Norwich, both incidentally being by this same one point margin, inability to convert the extra point after their touchdown.

Windham Scores First Period

Windham took the offensive early in the fray and scored in the first quarter on a pass, Warren to Ahern. The extra point was made on another pass, this from Warren to Merrill.

Norwich spurted soon after and in the third quarter put the ball over for the touchdown after a line-plunging march. Jack Marks took the ball over for the score. Capt. LaCroix tried for the extra point by dropkick but missed.

The game was well-played despite the muddy gridiron. Both teams were unrecognizable soon after the game started but the aggressive play went into the finish.

Stonington Now Leads

As Stonington was able to get a tie with Chapman Tech at New London, O'Brien's men went into first place in the league standing. The Stonington outfit now has won two, lost none and tied one while the Academy has two victories, one defeat and no ties for its record in conference work.

Each Have One More Game

Both Norwich and Stonington have one more conference game. Stonington plays Westerly one week from today Nov. 12 while Nov. 24 the Academy closes its season with Bulkeley, the annual classic also being a league tussle this season. Stonington can clinch the league title next Monday by winning from Westerly but should a tie or loss come from that game for Stonington then Norwich's Wildcats will still have a chance. Stonington and Norwich meet Nov. 17 at Norwich but this game has no bearing on the league standing.

YALE TO PLAY GEORGIA IN NEW STADIUM IN ATHENS

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 4—(AP)—For the first time in the history of Yale, a football team will travel to the south with Georgia being given the second date on the 1929 schedule in which the Elis will help dedicate a new stadium at Athens, it was announced tonight by R. W. Goss, manager. Yale accepted the trip after an offer made by academic and athletic officials.

It has been the policy of Yale to play seven home games and one game away with Princeton and Harvard alternately. The last occasion a Yale football team played a game other than with Princeton or Harvard away from New Haven, was in 1925, when Brown's stadium was dedicated in Providence. Georgia has now been retained for seven consecutive years in which time they have won but once.

Only one new college was placed on next year's schedule, Vermont replacing Maine on the opening date, October 6. It will be the fourth time Vermont has come here, the last time being in 1921. The game with Princeton will be played here November 16 and Harvard will be met at Cambridge the following week.

The schedule: October 5, Vermont; 12, Georgia at Athens; 19, Brown; 26, Army; November 2, Dartmouth; 9, Maryland; 16, Princeton; 23, Harvard at Cambridge.

PUTNAM TURNS BACK BARTLETT HIGH, 18 TO 6

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Nov. 4—Putnam high school football gladiators successfully hurdled their sixth season obstacle when they hung an 18-6 defeat upon Bartlett high school of Webster in an easy tilt for the members of the Blue and White squad.

Coach Noyes' two horsemen, Bill Shan and Walt Cody, again triumphed when they succeeded in chalking up six points each in the interests of their team, while Massicot, Putnam's heavyweight tackle scooped up a Webster fumble, tearing down the field 65 yards before he crossed the line. Cody whose chief reliance is in his legs indicated that his apparent ankle trouble had been repaired, when he received the ball on the twenty five yard line, girdled right end through Webster interference and crossed the goal. Cody also was instrumental in securing a number of the long gains accredited to the Putnam team. Shann, already a hero in the minds of the Putnam fans, brought rousing cheers when an off tackle play brought him through Websters frontiers for the final touchdown of the day.

In the sixth successive encounter Putnam's Noyes coached eleven stood firm, weakening only when Waldron of Webster received a twelve yard pass from Austin in the final period of the game and trailed about twenty yards for the only Bartlett touchdown.

Coach Lauriston F. Noyes of the Putnam team forecasted during the week that Cally Tourtellotts, Shann and Cody would be on the sidelines, because of injuries received in previous encounters, but his predictions were opposite when all three players were included in the line-up and each contributed his share to the sixth straight victory. Bartlett's second defeat of the season pushed Putnam up one more point in their claim to Eastern Connecticut championship honors.

Thursday will be Plainfield day at Putnam and will most presumably result in another victory for the Noyes's as Plainfield defeat by Killingly high school is no predictions of a victory at Putnam for the orangemen.

GEORGETOWN LOOMS AS BIG SCORING TEAM OF EAST

NEW YORK, Nov. 4—(AP)—It begins to appear as though no college eleven is going to take away from Georgetown's mighty maching eastern college football scoring honors for the season. The great Washington team, which conquered New York university in a bitter battle at the Yankee stadium yesterday to retain its place among the unbeaten and untied arrays of the east, added only seven points to its credit. But those tallies gave Georgetown 247 points for the season to 181 for Pennsylvania, its closest rival. N. Y. U. is third with 173; Lafayette fourth with 175; Carnegie Tech fifth with 167 and Army sixth with 164.

Although the Connecticut Aggies, Lowell Textile and Canisius have yet to be scored upon, not one of the larger colleges has an uncrossed goal line. Princeton, tied twice, has had only one touchdown chalked up against it. Ohio State turned the trick yesterday in holding the Tigers to a tie.

The unbeaten and untied list dwindled to five—Georgetown, Army, Carnegie Tech, Boston college and Villanova. N. Y. U., Haverford and Temple accepted their first defeats of the season.

YALE SUFFERS NO INJURIES IN DARTMOUTH GAME

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 4—(AP)—Yale came through the Dartmouth victory yesterday without an injury and the entire squad will be available for light work tomorrow. It was thought that Ellis, second string quarterback, had injured his leg when he limped out of the game in the last period, but an examination today disclosed no broken bones.

With the exception of Loeser, substitute center, Coach Stevens is hopeful of having his full strength in readiness for Maryland this week.

VON PORAT MEETS PAULINO AT GARDEN TONIGHT

NEW YORK, Nov. 4—(AP)—Otto Von Porat, hard punching Norwegian heavyweight, invades eastern Atlantic society in a 10 round bout against Paulino Uzcudun, Basque woodchopper, at Madison Square Garden tomorrow night.

Von Porat has done most of his campaigning in Chicago where he had compiled an imposing knockout record, his victims including Sandy Seifert, Ted Sandwina and Tiny Herman. Von Porat hits about equally well with either hand.

The so-called experts are figuring that Paulino is too rough and tough for Von Porat and have made the woodchopper an 8 to 5 favorite.

Tiny Roebuck, huge Choctaw Indian heavyweight, battles Arthur Dekuh, the Italian giant, in the ten round semi-final.

Groat fractured a small bone in his back and is in the infirmary bound in a plaster cast. The Aggies have three more games listed and in five games already played have kept its goal line intact while scoring 59 points.

E. G. P. Trojans Lose

Sunday afternoon in a drizzling rain the Internationals defeated the East Great Plain Trojans by the score of 12 to 6. This defeat was the only defeat the Trojans suffered this year. The playing of Frank Barber for the Internationals was easily the outstanding feature of the game. Barber, most every time he took the ball advanced it from 30 to 50 yards and running 65 yards to a touchdown. S. Green, right end of the Internationals, recovered a fumble on his own 1 yard line and ran the distance for a touchdown. The defensive work of Murphy, Quarto, Mingo, Economus and Stevens also was a great line. Krohn and Frink were the shining lights of the Trojans while their line also helped. The Internationals challenge the Laurel Hill Bulldogs for a game next Sunday at Mohegan Park.

The lineup: re, Green; rt, Mingo; rg, Barry; c, Bamber; lg, Maine; lt, Christy; le, Stevens; qb, Quarto, lhb, Murphy, rhb, Economus; fb, Barber. Referee, Goodrow.

PRESIDENTIAL ELECTION IN NICARAGUA YESTERDAY

MANAGUA, Nicaragua, Nov. 4—(AP)—Citizens went early to the polls in Nicaragua today to choose a president, senators and deputies. Voting in the towns was practically completed by noon, indicating unusual interest in the national elections. Every available vehicle, flying party banners, was employed to carry the electorate to the polls.

No reports of disorders anywhere in the country had been received late this afternoon. Advices from the northern area, where for so long Augustino Sandino had opposed the marines, showed an early and heavy vote cast in that section without disorder.

Brigadier General Frank R. McCoy, who supervised the registration and election, said tonight "the American mission is deeply grateful to President Diaz for his fine cooperation in making the election free and impartial.

Although General McCoy has promised that the returns will be published as fast as received, it is expected that the complete results will not be received for several days. Adolfo Benard heads the conservative ticket for president and General Jose Maria Moncada the liberal. Half of the membership of the chamber of deputies and a third of the senate also was voted for today. A total vote of 120,000 was expected.

A series of spring and fall burglaries of summer cottages in Bar Harbor and vicinity, in which articles valued at several thousand dollars were stolen, were cleared up with the arrests by state highway police of William Robideaux of Worcester, Mass., at Keene, N. H., and Frank G. Sylvester at Clinton.

WEATHER PLAYS LARGE PART IN UPSETTING LEADING FOOTBALL TEAMS

NEW YORK, Nov. 4—(AP)—Old man upset, with an assist here and there from pop weather, spilled the championship football of three of the foremost contenders by way of celebrating the start of the crucial November gridiron campaign.

There were others who fell by the wayside in the storm and strife of yesterday's scramble for the slippery oval but nowhere was the detonation so terrific as that accompanying the downfall of Illinois, 1927 western conference champions, Stanford, pace-setters for the past two years on the Pacific coast, and New York university, one of the east's mightiest arrays.

Illinois was the victim of the Michigan Wolverine, which decided it had been kicked around enough and broke a losing streak of four straight with a little booting of its own, the final score being 3 to 0.

Stanford's Cardinals, big favorites to ride the far-western crest once more, ran into the Trojan wall and took a 16-6 licking from Southern California to help scramble the coast situation.

New York university's hitherto unbeaten eleven, squandering its opportunities by inability to handle a muddy ball, bowed to a Georgetown team that cashed in on its big chance to score and won, 7 to 2, to keep its own slate clean.

Add to these reversals the overthrow of the University of Texas hopes in the southwestern conference by Southern Methodist, plus the defeats of Texas Christian and Clemson college, after each had won six straight games, and old man upset's main accomplishments are about complete.

Texas Christian's Horned Frogs ran afoul of the Baylor Bears, who had snapped Centenary's long winning streak previously, and lost a one point decision. Clemson was dumped unceremoniously from the top of the southern conference heap by "Ole Miss" to the tune of 26 to 0. In the east, Temple university, after an impressive streak of victories, was knocked over by Little Schuylkill college in another conscientious reversal.

It wasn't all rough going for the favorites, however, at least so far as the final results were concerned. Two of the country's mightiest arrays, University of Utah and Nebraska, virtually clinched the respective conference races in which they are involved.

The Utah Tigers, scoring their third straight triumph over an un-eastern rival, turned back the challenge of Colorado college in a 27-21 thriller and just about clinched the Rocky Mountain title for the second time in three years.

Nebraska led by their candidate for All-American fullback honors, Elsie Howell, rallied in the second half to beat Kansas 20 to 6. The Cornhuskers now stand alone at the top of the "Big Six" since Oklahoma fell before Iowa State.

In the southern conference, although Clemson suffered its first setback, the "Big Five" composed of Georgia Tech, Vanderbilt, Tennessee, Florida and Georgia rode along triumphantly. Florida rolled up an impressive total of 71 points against Sewanee. Tech's 32-7 triumph over Oglethorpe indicates there will be plenty of trouble for Vanderbilt's Commodores in the outstanding clash this week at Atlanta.

The net result of yesterday's struggles on muddy eastern gridirons leaves Georgetown out in front with the Army and Carnegie, among the major undefeated and untied outfits, with Boston College and Villa-Nova in the same class. This week the Cadets after a good workout in beating De Pauw, face Notre Dame in the main intersectional spectacle while Georgetown debates the issue with Carnegie on a neutral gridiron at Albany.

The "Big Ten" race, with Illinois dropped by the wayside, is narrowed down to a brace of contenders, Iowa and Ohio State, who meet in Columbus this week for the decisive test. Iowa had an easy time with South Dakota Saturday while the Buckeyes were held to a tie by Princeton after beating all previous opposition.

On the Pacific coast, California, by beating Oregon, 12 to 0, moved ahead with Southern California. These two are the only eleyens unbeaten in conference competition but they played to a scoreless tie in their own engagement.

POETRY FOR THE WIDE-AWAKES.

Asleep at the Circus.

Now the last roasted peanut is swallowed,
The last clown has gone on parade;
The last sugared popcorn been followed
By sips of the last lemonade.
His eyes, once so big, that shone brightly
Through all of the glad afternoon,
Are shut, and his fingers close tightly
And cling to his gaudy balloon.

The last acrobat's been applauded.
And shuffled his way from the mat;
The last bareback rider's been lauded;
The clown, with his sugar-loaf hat,
Has gone with his powder and spangles;
The diver has made his last leap;
And here in my arms are brown tangles
Of curls, and a boy fast asleep.

One sticky hand rests on my shoulder,
One holds fast the gaudy balloon,
That shrinks, and before it's much older
Will fade like the glad afternoon.
His dreams, it may be, of the maddest
Of somersaults, recklessly hurled;
The tiredest, sleepiest, gladdest,
And stickiest lad in the world.

And oh, but the spangles were splendid!
And oh, but the music was grand!
The side-splitting clown laughter blended
With soul-stirring airs by the band,
Till naught of the glad marvel lingers
Save what in his dreams he may keep,
As he clasps his balloon with close fingers
And rests in my arms, fast asleep.

And so from these joys without number,
Ere aught of the glitter was gone,
He went to his dream-laden slumber,
Where on plays the music, and on.
For him all the revel is maddest,
For him not a flag has been furled,
The tiredest, sleepiest, gladdest,
And stickiest lad in the world!

—James Foley.

UNCLE JED'S TALK TO THE WIDE-AWAKES.

We, who live on the surface of the earth, give little thought as to conditions high up in the atmosphere or deep down in the sea. We live, talk, eat, and walk along our streets, thinking little, if at all, as to what would face us should we go up, say six miles, or down six miles, into the ocean. Few of us realize it, but if we should ascend six miles into the skies, we could not live. The air is much too rare there for our body needs. There is no life on the highest heights in the world. Neither human nor animal life could exist there.

On the other hand, although there are living creatures on the bottom of the ocean, in its deepest parts, we are not able to visit them, even in a submarine. The reason for this is because of the enormous pressure in the ocean depths. The deeper we go the more the pressure becomes and, if we went deep enough, we and our submarine would be crushed into shapeless masses. We are limited in our traveling above and below the surface of the ocean, or sea level as it is known.

Although there is little, if any life, high above us, so far as known, there is no depth too deep for life. There is life on the bottom of the deepest parts of the ocean. However, the forms of life at the bottom of the sea have been hard to become acquainted with, although they are very near neighbors—not more than three to six miles away. The most successful visit ever made them was by Sir Wyville Thomson and his staff, who, from 1872 to 1876, in the ship Challenger, visited 362 places with the long arm of his dragnet. From this and several other attempts to study the life of the deep, deep sea a new world has been discovered, which is more than half as large as the whole earth. And just as the earth has high mountains, so the sea has deep valleys. The deepest of these is called the "Swire Deep" off Mindanao, and is actually more than six miles deep. Our highest mountain Mount Everest, could be thrown into this great hole and the top of it would be more than 2,600 feet under the surface of the water.

The reason that we cannot comfortably visit our friends of the deep is because of the unendurable pressure under the sea. At 2,500 fathoms the pressure is said to be twenty-five times greater than that exerted by the steam on the piston of our best railway locomotives. We would be crushed to bits if we attempted to tour the great world at the bottom of the ocean.

The animals that live in these depths are so constructed as to enjoy life under such pressure. In fact, they could not live at the surface of the water. While we are afraid of tumbling down the deep sea animals are afraid of tumbling up.

The floor of the ocean makes a very funny world. One which we would not like even though we could breathe freely there. For one thing it is very cold at the bottom of the sea. The heat of the sun does not penetrate more that 150 fathoms, and, again, the cold, water from the North Pole and South Pole is continually moving toward the deepest parts of the ocean. Not only is the home of the deep sea animals very cold, but it is also very dark. Experiments have been tried which show that there is a little light at the depth of half a mile, but below that all is absolute darkness. Because the inhabitants of the deep live in a world of eternal night they have little use for their eyes. Many of them have organs in their bodies, however, which greatly resemble eyes. These are used to produce light rather than to detect it, perhaps in somewhat the same way that a cat's eyes give a light in the night.

Another odd feature of the deep is that it is very silent. As we see the waves dashing against the headlands and throwing the spray high in the air we might think that the ocean was disturbed all the way through. But those who have studied the sea pressure assure us that the grip of the storm does not go far below the surface, nor are there any swift flowing currents, such as are found in the shallower waters.

We naturally think of the bottom of the ocean as being hard and rock-covered, but while this is so with regard to some of the ocean-bed, it is not the case in the deepest parts. The floor of the deep is covered with a soft substance called the "ooze," described as "the settling down of the dust of the sea." And "in its softer forms it is like butter in summer." Thus we have a world of calm and complete quiet, and here in the cold and dark the citizens of the deep "live, move, and have their being."

My Fright

Dear Uncle Jed: This is my first letter to you and the Wide-Awakes. I think you will like and enjoy my story. This was the first time I went to Ocean Beach. When my father told me that we were going to the beach I was so glad. Out of my gladness I didn't eat any breakfast. I put my bathing suit on at home so when I got there I would jump right into the water. When I got there and saw that the water was big I was afraid to get out of the auto. So my father said to get out of the auto and sit on the sand. Then my father took hold of my feet and pulled me in the water. I was so afraid that I took hold of the sand and thought that I had pulled the whole Ocean Beach along with me. I got so used to staying in the water that I ...d it want to get out. It was so nice to stay in. It was getting dark and we were ready to go home and still I did not want to go home. So we had to stay a little longer. So we stayed till 10 o'clock and when I got sleepy we went home. I think we all had a fine time.

JOSEPH WOJDOLOWEKI, Age 9, Norwich.

The Sheep and The Birds

Dear Uncle Jed: This is my first story to the Wide Awake Circle.

A father and his son were sitting under a tree upon a hill. It was near sunset and a flock of sheep were feeding near them. A man came along who had a dog with him. As soon as the sheep saw the dog they became alarmed, and ran into some bushes which grew nearby. Some of their wool got caught and was torn off.

When the boy saw this he was troubled and said: See, father how the thorns tear away the wool from the poor sheep. These ought to be cut down so they won't harm anybody.

As they were speaking a little bird flew down and took a tuft of wool in his beak and carried it to his nest on a high tree. "See" said his father, "with this wool the bird will make his nest warm for his birdlings. How comfortable they will be. The sheep may as well spare a little wool for the comfort of others." The father said: "Remember that we depend upon each other. It seems very hard that the sheep must lose their wool, but now you see that without this wool the little birds would be cold." The son always remembered what his father told him. We should always remember this lesson.

GENEVIEVE BENASKIEWZ, Norwich.

The Fox

Dear Uncle Jed: One day last summer my little brother and I went into the woods to pick flowers. On the way he said he heard a noise in the bushes, but as I did not hear it myself I said that it was probably just the noise that we made when we were walking. But that was not so, for just then we saw something red walk out of the bushes. It was a fox. As we were afraid we ran toward the house, and I guess the fox was afraid, too, for he ran when he saw us. When we got home we told our mother about it. The next day, without saying anything to anyone, I took one of my brother's traps and went down to the woods. I set the trap. The next day I went to see if I had caught him, but I didn't. I left it there three days, but I didn't catch him, so I brought it home. I never told anyone about it.

IDA W. BROWN, Age 9, Colchester.

Brownie

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to tell you of a dog named Brownie. I do not know what breed he is, but he is a very wise dog. He will be eight years old this spring. He is reddish brown except his chest, where there is a white spot.

He likes to play, but not too much. He does not like milk, but he does like meat.

He can do two tricks that I never saw any dog do yet. When you bring out a piece of meat he will look at you until you say "Brownie, speak!" and he will say "Wow, wow, wow, wow!" Then you must give him the meat or he will bite.

He can do one more trick. If you come out with a piece of meat, he will look at you until you say "Brownie, sneeze," and he will. He is a very good dog to watch the house. He likes to go hunting very much.

JOSEPH CHEMELESKY, Age 12, Lebanon.

Likes Prize Book

Dear Uncle Jed: I thank you for the book. I liked it very much. I was very glad to get it because it was the first time I had ever written to you. This is my second letter.

I was very pleased when one of my friends invited me to go to Hartford. We started out from my house about 10 o'clock Monday morning. This was last summer. When we got to Glastonbury we stopped at his house. Then we went to his father's house. We stayed there until afternoon and then we started for Hartford. When we got into Hartford I saw the Hartford Savings bank. We then passed by where one of my father's friends works. We saw Elizabeth park. There were a lot of wonderful flowers there. I also saw the capitol.

KENNETH ATKINS, Age 12, Eagleville.

My Disappointment

Dear Uncle Jed: This is my second letter to you and the Wide-Awakes. The week before my mother's birthday I bought a present and thought the whole week for a good hiding place. Putting it in the little barn outside I thought it might be a wonderful place. While my mother, father and brother were sitting on a swing and without noticing my little sister, she went into the barn and seeing a package, she brought it out, asking everyone who put it in. But everyone said that they didn't know. Seeing that I was coming out of the house they asked me and I said that I didn't know. I did not want to tell I had hidden it there. My mother knew it a week before that.

NO NAME.

Pilgrims

Dear Uncle Jed: When the Pilgrims came to America they lived in the woods. When the winter was over half of them died. In summer they built log houses to keep themselves warm in winter. They became friendly with the Indians.

The Indians helped them to work and showed them how to raise corn. When the summer was over they had plenty of food which they stored away for winter.

They wanted to thank God for it, so they had a big feast and invited all the Indians. And before each meal they gave thanks to God. We follow their example and we celebrate in November.

HELEN YOVSZ, Age 14, Norwich.

My School Days

Dear Uncle Jed and the Wide-Awakes: This is the first time I have written to you. I am going to tell you about my school days.

In the morning we say the Lord's Prayer and then we salute the flag and we also sing four or five songs. Then come our duties. The first is to take up history and geography and after recess we recite our lessons which we studied in the morning. We recite until noon. After dinner we study our reading. After recess we have arithmetic. My teacher is very good to the pupils. We enjoy studying because we love our teacher.

ELSIE SORRELL, Age 13, North Westchester.

Won First Prize

Dear Uncle Jed: Halowe'en is almost here. It makes me think of last Halowe'en. Last Halowe'en we had a party at our church and we had a Japanese costume. Neither my sister nor I wanted to wear it. I had to wear it and I got first prize.

LORRAINE PRENTICE, Age 9, Norwich.

Book of Connecticut

Dear Uncle Jed: As I have not written to you and the Wide-Awakes in a long time I am writing this letter which I hope you and the Wide-Awakes will enjoy.

We have decided at our school this year that we would make a book of Connecticut. So we are each making a separate book. We have sent to many of the cities for information. We draw pictures of Indians and Dutch people and write many stories about things happening in Connecticut. It is very interesting to know the things that have happened in our state.

ANNA DOWNING, Age 11, Voluntown.

DISCREPANCIES IN ACCOUNTS ON N. H. SECRETARY OF STATE

MANCHESTER, N. H., Nov. 4—(AP)—Governor Huntley N. Spaulding, in a statement issued from his home in Rochester tonight, said that as a result of charges made against Secretary of State Hobart Pillsbury the latter has agreed to tender his resignation tomorrow. The charges against the secretary involved alleged discrepancies in the accounts of his department.

Although an investigation of the book of the department has not been completed, alleged irregularities discovered thus far are said to have totalled $1,000. Among these are two additional expense vouchers made out in the name of A. W. Weller, which was the name of Mrs. Pillsbury before her marriage. Mrs. Pillsbury at present is contesting for re-election as commissioner of Hillsborough county.

Investigation into the accounts of the secretary of state, was ordered after Gov. Spaulding's attention was called to certain expense vouchers from that department.

Heavy—But No Fish

Blackfishing is poor and the fishermen some days don't get enough to pay for the line and hooks. The fish are so plenty all there is to do is tickle them behind the fins and they will jump into the boat. But some days they won't bite. Boat Welika, with Capt. Bert Long at the wheel and Mate William Franklin was fishing at the deep hole Friday afternoon, near Gulf Island and found the fish taking a good hold and they were hauling them in fine. Mate William Franklin got something on the hook and he thought it was a 17 pound blackfish and the line was getting heavier. As he was pulling along he asked Capt. Long to give him a lift on the line and it took both fishermen 35 minutes to haul up the mystery. When they got it on top of water it was a suit case loaded with seaweed. Both fishermen were puffing hard and on opening the suit case they found it had inside a pair of old shoes and a tooth brush and that was the 17 pound blackfish. The suit case looks as if it had been in the water for a long while, might have got lost off a night steamer running from Providence to New York. Capt. Long said "No use to keep that suitcase, it is too far gone!" They also got 100 pounds of fish, being high hook for the day.

The other boats were getting only 15 to 50 pounds of blackfish. The fishermen wanted to know if they had a rabbit foot or if a black cat had ran adross their bow.

A democratic rally was held in the fishing village Friday evening where 100 voters gathered to hear speakers from Hartford and New Haven. They were given a big hand. The rally was held in the Sardine club rooms. Mayor John Ashbey made the opening address and said "I have been a good democrat for the last 30 years and would like to see Smiling Al Smith get into the White House! He is a man that made a big success of New York while he has been the governor for eight years. If us good democrats stick together on election day it will help Al along!" A torchlight parade was held through the streets with the Sardine band leading.

DANIELSON MAN COMMITS SUICIDE AT THOMPSON

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PUTNAM, Nov. 4.—James Whitman of Danielson, employed by the J. R. Gladding estate in Thmpson was found unconscious on the cellar floor of one of the tenements of the estate Saturday morning after he had used a razor to slash his throat. Whitman, according to information, had been acting strange, but there was nothing in his actions that indicated he would attempt suicide and no watch had been kept over him by his employers.

He arose Saturday morning at an early hour and attired in his work clothes entered the cellar of the house and drew a razor under his chin, beginning at the left crossing to the right. Another employe, whose name was not determined, became suspicious of Whitman leaving without notice and about 15 minutes later followed the man, finding him on the floor in a pool of blood. Help was summoned and he was rushed to the Day Kimball hospital in Putnam, where medical attention was rendered. Captain Jarvis of the Putnam police was called to make an investigation of the attempted suicide as was Dr. Robert C. Paine, medical examiner for the town of Thompson. The man was adjudged insane and was later taken to the state hospital in Norwich, where he remains in a critical condiation and is not expected to recover.

Whitman is a native of Danielson and has relatives living there. He was formerly an employe of the Connecticut company, where he operated a bus on the Norwich Putnam line. About two years ago he entered the employ of the Gladding estate and has worked there since.

BIG INDUSTRIES ABOVE NORMAL RATE OF ACTIVITY FOR THIS TIME OF YEAR

NEW YORK, Nov. 4—(AP)—Business came through the pre-election week heretofore characterized by general nervousness, with complete confidence, as major industries held far above the normal rate of activity for this time of year.

Steel production held close to 90 per cent. of capacity as increased orders from the railroads practically made up for the seasonal sag in automotive requirements. Indications are for a small seasonal recession this month and for the familiar upturn in January.

Ingot production is expected to run about 5 per cent. ahead of 1926, the previous record year. There was further improvement in steel prices, and pig iron crossed $18 per ton for the first time since 1918. The United States corporation reported earnings for the first 9 months of the year amounting to $8.17 per share, compared to $7.75 in the like period of last year. During the week the New York Central Railroad placed orders for $8,-250,000 worth of rails.

The automobile industry sagged a little further from its recent peak, but the decline has been far less than normal for this season and production for the first 10 months of the year surpassed all previous records for a corresponding period.

One of the most important industrial developments of the year was announced during the week—the $100,-000,000 electrification program of the Pennsylvania railroad. The metal industry particularly will benefit from this undertaking. Copper prices remained firm, the export price crossing 16 cents.

Earnings statements for the third quarter were particularly encouraging as they poured in during the week. Totals for the first 9 months were in a number of instances more than twice that for the like period of last year. Interest and dividend disbursements at the month-end were estimated at above $350,000,000, in contrast to about $150,000,000 a year ago. Announcement of gold imports totaling about $7,500,000 was an encouraging development in the credit outlook.

Seasonal trade picked up under the influence of cold weather, particularly in dry goods. Freight car loadings for the latest week were again well above last year, but fell below 1926. Demand for lumber increased, and the coal outlook was improved by the weather.

Wheat prices lost most of the gain of last week, with increased estimates of the visible supply. Reports of cold and rains in the south had little effect on cotton prices. There was some improvement in cattle and hog prices as the seasonal movement declined.

Business failures during the week subsided below the high totals of previous weeks and that of the like week a year ago.

New St. Mary's Parochial School At Jewett City

JEWETT CITY SCHOOL CORNER-STONE LAID SUNDAY AND CONVENT BLESSED

(Special to The Bulletin)

JEWETT CITY, Nov. 4—Impressive ceremonies marked the blessing of the new St. Mary's convent and laying of the cornerstone of the new school by Right Rev. Bishop John J. Nilan of Hartford this afternoon. At three o'clock there was the blessing of the convent by Bishop Nilan. The procession of parishioners and automobiles included as large a number as ever moved over a route in the history of the town. The women who marched formed on Canal street, the children on Slater avenue, the men at the Polish Corporation block and the automobiles on Soule street.

There were three divisions in the procession. The first division was led by Marshals Michael E. Shea, Louis Boileau and Stanislas Miszaszek. Rev. Daniel Mullen 4th degree, K. of C., of Norwich in full regalia preceded the Knights of Columbus Boy Scout band of Willimantic who appeared under their new name for the first time. The American flag and color bearers preceded the children of the parish.

The second division was led by Mrs. Edward Rousseau, the American flag and color bearers preceding many women of the parish. Joseph Jaskiewicz led the third division, followed by Swahn's band of Norwich, the American flag and color bearers, and the assembled men of the parish. Guests in a long line of automobiles included state, town and borough officials, school board, clergymen, officers of town court, heads of various manufacturing interests, the architect and contractors of both school and convent.

The officers and directors of the Jewett City Savings bank, who have given such generous aid to the parish corporation in its building activities were honored guests in the procession. The line of march proceeded from South Main street, up East Main, through Palmer avenue and down North Main to the new St. Mary's school building, over which entrance is the name "Sancta Maria." Upon the platform which was decorated with bunting were seated with the clergy, sisters and choirs, a large number of Catholic and non-Catholic guests. The musical part of the service was by the senior and junior choirs and was very harmonious. The musical program included the hymn Veni, Sancte Spiritus, America, Divine Praises, and The Star Spangled Banner.

The ceremonies were directed by Very Rev. Msgr. William H. Flynn of Hartford, chancellor of the diocese. The solemn ceremony of the laying of the cornerstone was performed by Bishop Nilan. The silver trowel properly inscribed will be presented the most generous donor in the parish.

The sermon was delivered by Rev. John Joseph Reilly of St. Patrick's church, Norwich.

A feature of the exercises in the church was the splendid singing of the senior and junior choirs, with James Olsen, organist. The music was wonderfully fine, as directed by Sister M. Cecelia.

REV. JOHN J. REILLY'S CONVINCING SERMON

Preceding this, the sermon was delivered by Rev. John J. Reilly, of St. Patrick's, Norwich, who said in substance, addressing a congregation which crowded every part of the church:

Today should be for you, one of happiness and satisfaction. Step by step, brick by brick, your dream and that of your pastor are approaching a reality and within a few short months your community will be boasting, along with its other attractions and advantages, one of the finest school buildings in a section of the country noted for the excellence of its schools and educational system. You need but look around, your eyes will tell you better than the force of any words I might employ, of the beautiful, artistic, modern building that will soon be housing the children of this parish during so many tender hours of their youthful lives. Far better would it be, I think, to employ the short time given here today in expressing those ideals which prompt a Catholic school, ideals which spell so much of sacrifice and self-denial to Catholic parents, and to clear away, if possible, impressions and wrong ideas that abide in minds other than our own Catholic parochial schools.

Of all the needs man has on earth, one of the greatest is education. Education without moral training is hardly education at all. Education should mold the character; if it doesn't the children are turned out mere intellectual machines. Is it any wonder then that the Catholic church assumes the role of educator? Could she with her mother-love, her zeal for souls, her eye on heaven, do otherwise?

You hear the accusation often that the Catholic schools are un-American, narrowing and inefficient; but the Catholic school needs no apology. You hear a great deal nowadays about Americanism. Of nothing else is ignorance more widespread. Some people think they have it in their blood; some people think Americanism is keeping foreigners out; some people think that Americanism is teaching others how to read and write the American language; but that is not Americanism—not one of these, or all of them together. Americanism is something more than this. It is no wishy washy sentimentalism, no frantic waving of the flag. Americanism is more than that. It is only one degree removed from the love of God—it is love for America and a willingness to sacrifice one's self for it.

In every room of a Catholic school there hangs a crucifix. Before the children's eyes from the day they enter until they are graduated is kept the symbol of the greatest sacrifice that was ever made. During the war and shortly after you heard much about the supreme sacrifice. It was a novel phrase and it caught the American ears and held them. No patriotic speech was complete unless it mentioned it. For a hundred years in the parochial schools of America, Catholic boys and girls have been hearing of it, with the broken body of Him who first said: "Greater love hath no man than this—that he lay down his life for a friend." Before them always, with Christ's own teaching of patriotism drilled into them from their first days at school, could a graduate of a parochial school be other than a real American?

"The Catholic school is inefficient". So runs the oft repeated accusation. You are familiar with the system of our parochial schools. The teaching force is made up of women who have consecrated their lives to the teaching of life young. With them it is no profession, they do not look forward to a monthly pay check. They have placed their lives on the altar of sacrifice and teaching has become to them a holy duty. To take a child at a tender age, human nature in the rough, and to mold its character, to take the noblest element that could be found, the soul of a child, and to fashion that soul into a thing of beauty—that is the lifework of a teaching sister in a Catholic school. Could a teacher with such ideals be inefficient? Well equipped to begin with, kept in touch with new ideas by summer courses, continued study, elevated to a place apart by her love for souls and zeal for Christ, the Catholic sister remains high, isolated, also the finest teacher in the world today.

The parishioners of St. Mary's parish and the people of this town may feel confident that the future, both here and hereafter, is insured as far as the power of human beings can insure it by the presence in your community of St. Mary's school. You may expect a good return on your investment and on your self-denial, for when things material are repaid in things eternal there can never be a doubt as to the wisdom of your action. And if the years to come will find in this community men and women, lovers of their country and lovers of their God, products of St. Mary's school who will be putting into their lives the things that I have mentioned this afternoon, will not the future Jewett City point with gratitude and satisfaction to the day this cornerstone was laid? Rest assured the future is bright and the prospects are fair, for when the doors of this parish school will swing open upon its graduates, "There will go forth children not mailed in pride or scorn, but with the armor of a pure intention, with duties great and small before them, and whether crowned or crownless, when they fall it matters not, God's will is done."

THE NEW CONVENT OBJECT OF COMMUNITY GENEROSITY

The new convent was designed by O'Connell & Shaw of Boston, and is of colonial architecture. The lower floor, outside the cloister proper, is laid out in parlors, music room, vestibule, waiting rooms and vestry. Within the convent there is a beautiful solid oak colonial staircase, and all the woodwork is of solid oak.

On the south side of the building is an exquisite chapel in which are memorial windows. They were done by the noted American artist, W. H. Burnham, of Boston, who has been invited to design one of the rose windows in the restoration of the famous Rheims cathedral. The splendid furnishings of chapel, altar, stations and statues, sanctuary, pedestal, marble holy water font, are done by a firm in New York. The oak furnishings of the chapel and vestry are from Hartford. The large dining room will be furnished with a set of early colonial pieces in walnut. The butler's pantry is fitted with all conveniences, including an electric ice box. The kitchen has all modern furnishings, including gas. There is a large living porch, encased in French windows. A convenient laundry is equipped with electric appliances.

The second floor contains a well lighted community room, simply but tastefully furnished. There is a large lavatory room, conveniently furnished. There are individual sleeping rooms, the mother superior's office and own sleeping room. On the third floor are added sleeping rooms, lavatory and bath room, and all floors have ample linen and clothes presses. The artistic electrical fixtures were furnished from Meriden, and the heating and electrical work done by Edward Rousseau of Jewett City. The electric fixtures were installed by the Jewett City Hardware company. The general contract was done by Guillotte Bros. of Jewett City. The heating of both convent and school is by a unit Electrol burner. Although the blessing took place Sunday, the building will not be completed for several days, when the Sisters will take possession.

The most pleasing feature of the building of the convent to the pastor and good Sisters is the remarkable and almost unprecedented generosity of the Catholic and non-Catholic people of Jewett City and vicinity, who have donated all the furnishings of the parlors, dining and community rooms, and all the other rooms in the convent.

The vision and foresight which made this building possible was due to Rev. J. H. Fitzmaurice of New Haven, a former pastor, who, in addition to building the magnificent parish church, acquired during his pastorate the large parcel of land owned by Alfred A. Brown, upon which today is built St. Mary's new school.

His work was continued by Rev. Edward Hayes, one of the most brilliant priests of the Hartford diocese, who for several years conducted the affairs of the parish with marked ability and signal success, until failing health compelled him to relinquish his pastorate. Father Hayes' pastoral residence here is held in lasting memory by people of every faith in Jewett City, who admired and loved this high type of the Catholic priesthood.

To Rev. J. J. McCabe, who was a curate here when Rev. J. H. Fitzmaurice was pastor, and then 14 years ago was appointed pastor of the parish, is due the credit of erecting the convent. It was a stupendous undertaking, and called for an endless amount of planning and generalship. The result in all its details will stand as a lasting memorial to Father McCabe's unremitting and devoted attention to the carrying out of his plans, aided so generously by his parish and non-Catholic friends.

Town-wise, the entire church property is a fine addition to the main thoroughfare. The general committee in charge of the arrangements for Sunday's ceremonies was Rev. J. J. McCabe, J. H. McCarthy, Joseph Boisvert, M. E. Shea, Stanislas Misaszaszek, Louis Boileau, J. A. Hourigan, Joseph Cadieux, William McGovern, Mrs. Catherine McCoy, Mrs. Frank Kolbuz, Mrs. Edward Rousseau, Mrs. F. X. Cassavant, Mrs. Joseph Malek and Josephine Attenska.

William McGovern and Edward Blake assisted the marshals on horseback.

NEW SCHOOL BUILDING TO HAVE 12 ROOMS

The cornerstone of the 12-room school and future hall was laid Sunday afternoon. The school building is 204 feet long and 48 feet wide. The hall is to be 95 feet in length by 54 feet in width. The floors are arranged as follows:

Sub-Basement. A heating room is located in the sub-basement at the southeast end of the building.

Ground Floor. The main entrance to the hall is located at the center of the building on this floor. The entrance leads to the assembly hall lobby in which are located the ticket office and checking room. The main hall is entered from the lobby through three double doors. The assembly hall has a seating capacity of 600 people. This hall extends through two floors, the gallery being on the level of the first school room floor. The stage is 36 by 20, and has four dressing rooms, each supplied with toilets. The proscenium opening is 30 feet wide. There are two exits at the rear of the hall. The two gallery staircases are located at the front of the auditorium.

On either side of the lobby is located the boys' and girls' play rooms, and boys' and girls' toilets. Beyond these are the two entrances to the school with stairs leading to the first and second floors. The stairs are of steel with terrazzo treads and are enclosed in brick walls on three sides and kalamein screens at the entrances.

At either end of the building is a store room, made school room size. These two rooms can be used as class rooms in the future as the light and area are similar to the other class rooms.

First Floor. This floor accommodates six class rooms, six coat rooms, superior's office, corridor and two staircases in the school proper. The future hall will contain the gallery, accommodating 120 seatings. In the center of the gallery is located the moving picture booth.

The corridor and staircase walls are of fireproof materials. Each class room is fitted with book cases, slate blackboards, tack strips, an electric clock, and each room is ventilated.

The second floor is a repetition of the first floor with this exception: The teachers' rest room occupies the space of the superior's room on the floor below.

The foundation walls are concrete. Outside and staircase walls are Fiske shale brick, backed up with terra cotta tile. The bricks in the outside walls are variegated in color. All interior walls are carried on a steel frame, fireproofed.

The trim is granite composite. Plastering is Universal Gypsum product, and the building is covered with a Barrett five-ply roof. All inside wood work will have a weathered oak finish. All classrooms, corridors, teachers' room and superior's room are dadoed with Fabricona.

The floors in lobby are terrazzo with brass strips. All other portions of ground floor are finished in granolithic. The school portions finished in maple flooring.

The building is designed in the Italian renaissance style of architecture.

The general contractor is Earle E. Gilbert of Jewett City. Heating, J. A. Fitzgerald, Norwich. Plumbing, Edward Rousseau, of Jewett City. Wiring, O'Neil Electric company, Norwich. The school was designed by O'Connell & Shaw, Boston, Mass.

Notes

The procession today was led by Officer Henry Veglard. Supernumerary police were stationed on the streets.

The exercises and the procession drew visitors to the borough from many distant points, as well as from neighboring towns.

Burgess Bedtime Story

A Tight Place Becomes Tighter

By Thornton W. Burgess

When you're in a place that's tight
That's the time to really fight.

Old Mother Nature.

Rusty the Fox Squirrel, sitting in a little tree beside a fence on the Green Meadows, was desperate. Below him, grinning up at him, was Reddy Fox. Far away in the sky was a black spot which Rusty knew to be Redtail the Hawk. With all his might Rusty hoped that at that distance Redtail couldn't see him. But that hope didn't last long. That black spot was becoming larger and larger. Redtail was heading in that direction. In a few moments there was no doubt that he saw Rusty.

Now, wasn't that a terrible position for any squirrel to be in? If that had been a big tree, it would have been a very different matter. Then there would have been some chance for Rusty to dodge Redtail. But this was a small tree—a very small tree. The trunk of it wasn't big enough for even a chipmunk to dodge around. It really looked as if all that Redtail would have to do would be to pick Rusty right out of that tree. Yes, sir, that is the way it looked!

Reddy Fox down below, hardly knew whether to be pleased or otherwise at the arrival of Redtail. He certainly didn't want Redtail to catch Rusty. On the other hand, unless Rusty should come down out of that tree, there was small chance that he, Reddy, would be able to catch him. Perhaps if Redtail should swoop at him, it might scare Rusty into jumping. Reddy looked up at Redtail swinging in circles right above the tree, and grinned.

"I guess some one is going to have a Squirrel dinner pretty soon now, and I hope that I am that some one," said Reddy to himself.

Meanwhile, poor Rusty was trying to make up his mind what to do. For the time being, Redtail was the most dangerous. Up in that tree, or even on top of the fence, if he kept moving, he was reasonably safe from Reddy Fox. But he wasn't safe from Redtail. Redtail could pick him right out of that tree, or right off the fence. He kept his eyes fixed on Redtail. He saw Redtail start to swoop. Rusty made a flying leap to the top rail of that old fence. And how he did race along it! Redtail had to stop himself and once more get into position to swoop. Meanwhile, Reddy Fox went racing along below. Reddy's eyes sparkled with excitement. This was sport! At least, it was sport to Reddy.

Redtail screamed angrily and once more shot down towards Rusty. What do you think Rusty did this time? He just whirled right around to the under side of that rail, and there he clung. There was nothing for Redtail to seize. It was done so quickly that it took Reddy Fox by surprise, and before Reddy could jump, Rusty had once more whisked up to the other side of the rail, while Redtail the Hawk was beating his way up in the air for another swoop.

It was a desperate game. Yes, indeed, it was a desperate game! No one realized it more fully than did Rusty. But he wouldn't give up. No sir, he meant to try just as long as there was any chance at all. He raced along another rail and up on top of the next fence-post. He had just time for a hasty look ahead. Then Redtail came swooping down once more. This time Rusty dodged around the old post. There were some thick bushes right in there and Reddy Fox had no room to jump. So once more Redtail was fooled and once more Reddy Fox snapped his jaws in vain.

But this time, when Rusty once more was on top of the fence-post, he was not altogether without hope. That hasty look he had given before had discovered something. Yes, sir, it had discovered something that gave him a teeny-weeny bit of hope.

"I'll beat them yet!" said Rusty to himself. "Yes, sir, I'll beat them yet!"

By Accurate Record, 98 Out of 100 Women Who Report After Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Say That It Has Helped Them

THERE are three trying periods in a woman's life: when the girl matures to womanhood; when a woman gives birth to her first child; when a woman reaches middle age. At these times Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound helps to restore normal health and vigor. Countless thousands testify to its worth.

FLORENCE BURNETT
12 Withington Street, Dorchester, Mass.

"My daughter Florence is 14 years old and has been very sick for the last two years, able to attend school only half of the time. I saw an ad. in the Boston Post and decided to give her Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. She has taken four bottles and is so much better. She is rather tall for her age and her appetite has improved and she is better in every way. I thought I would let you hear from us as we are nearer than those who live in the West. I shall be glad to help any mother who writes to me."—Mrs. Burnett, 12 Withington Street, Dorchester, Massachusetts.

MRS. CORA CALAHAN
216 E. Ashton Ave., Grand Island, Neb.

"I am a married woman going through the Change of Life. At times I thought I would lose my mind. I would cry for hours. I got so tired of going to the doctor so I thought 'So many women have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I will try some.' Before I had taken the first bottle I began to get better. I have taken eight bottles now. I feel that it has saved my life, also doctor's bills. I work for a family of six, washing, cooking and do all my own work. People say I look like I am 25 years old."—Mrs. Cora Calahan, 216 E. Ashton Ave., Grand Island, Nebraska.

MRS. F. C. HELMING
822 E. Harrison St., Portland, Oregon

"Lydia E. Pinkham did for me what doctors failed to do. When the Change of Life began I was very poorly. Now at fifty-five years of age I do all my own work, attend two dances a week and it is hard to make people believe I am over forty. I never see a woman in ill health but I advocate your medicine because I know its value. Every woman should take it at the critical age, not just for a month or two but until they know they have passed the critical period."—Mrs. F. C. Helming, 822 E. Harrison St., Portland, Oregon.

A BIG POLITICAL OVERTURN PROMISED IN NEW LONDON ELECTION

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 4—A statement has been issued from the New London democratic town committee that this city will unquestionably go for Alfred E. Smith Tuesday. Consequently it is claimed that the majority of candidates on the local ticket will be swung into office by the wave of Smith popularity. Just what has happened in local politics is hard to fathom—but there seems to be an undercurrent of resentment against the present form of government and it is expected that the election returns this year will be the forerunner of a change. Women particularly are showing a keen interest in what is going on. This was borne out Halloween night at the democratic parade and rally. There were as many if not more women in the parade than men. Both parties are making arrangements for getting out voters on election day. Hundreds of cars have been arranged for and workers are prepared to hustle in the interest of their respective parties from the time the polls open until they close. Returns from the election will be available at all of the hotels and most restaurants of the city and it is expected that hundreds of citizens will stay up all night awaiting the announcement of results.

STEALING OF THIS CAR LIKE A DETECTIVE MYSTERY

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 4—An automobile reported as having been stolen in New London six weeks ago was recovered Saturday by the police of Albany, N. Y., and the alleged theft is being investigated by the state police. Sept. 14, Frank O Barber, manager of the Hudson-Essex Sales station, notified the police that a Hudson sedan, owned by some Mr Holmes had been stolen in Waterford. No trace of the car was obtained until Saturday morning when the Albany police informed the New London police that Sept. 12 a car carrying Connecticut markers had been left in a private garage and that the owner, after removing the markers, said he would return for the car in a few days. When he did not return within a reasonble time, the Albany police were notified. Automobiles now manufactured have a secret place for the serial number, other than on the engine, so this was found and resulted in suspicion that the car was stolen in New London simply because a New London newspaper was found on one of the seats. The serial number was supplied in the message received here and Mr. Barber declared it was the serial of the stolen car. The strange part of the finding of the car revealed that the auto was taken to Albany two days before it is claimed that it was stolen in Waterford.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Palace Theatre

"Excess Baggage," said William Haines, "is a lot of extra luggage that you carry with you and pay for but never get a chance to use."

Thus the star defined his idea of the meaning of his new starring picture of that name which opened yesterday at the Palace theatre.

According to John McGowan, the author of the stage play from which Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer adapted the movie production, the term was originally derived from the baggage officers of the railway companies who were accustomed to charge an extra fee for transporting all luggage weighing over 75 pounds per ticket.

So Haines in the beginning of the picture is thought by his wife, Josephine Dunn, to believe her to be "Excess Baggage". Later on after she has won success on the screen, he has the same idea, when he believes that he is so much "Excess Baggage" as far as her career is concerned.

James Orame directed the screen production while the cast includes Ricardo Cortez, Kathleen Clifford, Greta Granstedt, Neely Edwards and others.

She loved wisely, but too well. She met her doom when she really fell in love and incurred the wrath of one of her most ardent admirers.

That, in brief, is the story of "Loves of an Actress," Pola Negri's greatest Paramount starring vehicle, which opened at the Palace theatre yesterday.

Miss Negri's recent productions "Barbed Wire," "The Woman on Trial" and "Beggars of Love" have won wide acclaim, and to top off this list of successes, she is now presented in a story that gives her the greatest chance she has had for displaying her remarkable dramatic talents, and her abilities as a charmer and adventuress.

Full of dramatic moments and fairly bursting with power and gripping scenes, Loves of an Actress is by far the best Pola Negri production we have seen.

Rowland V. Lee directed this picture, and is credited with the screen play, having adapted it from a fact-story written by Ernest Vajda.

In the supporting cast are Nils Asther, Paul Lukas, Mary McAllister, Nigel de Brulier, Phillip Strange and Richard Tucker.

Broadway Theatre

The Singing Fool," Al Jolson's second motion picture, is in the difficult position of following a phenomenal Jolson success, "The Jazz Singer." That it does not suffer by comparison is proof of the tremendous heart appeal of this story of the loves and losses, successes and failures, of a singing waiter of Broadway.

Jolson in his own inimitable way portrays the piercing joys and sorrows of the humble waiter—raising him to heights of beauty—and thrilling audiences as the unique king of jazz has always done—but never quite to the degree which his role in "The Singing Fool" makes possible. Davey Lee, the child who plays the part of the hero's little son, was chosen by the star himself from among almost two hundred applicants. The scene between the father and son are tremendously moving—more so than any the present reviewer has witnessed on stage or screen.

"The Singing Fool" provides him with a story of universal appeal. First seen as a waiter in a New York cafe, in love with a beautiful entertainer, he later becomes owner of a pretentious night club and husband of the same faithless lady, who casts him into the depths of despair by deserting him and their little boy, for a stranger.

For the sake of the child he goes on, urged and aided by the pretty cigarette girl he had known in his less successful days. Then comes a call from his divorced wife—news that Sonny Boy is dangerously ill.

But no more of the story need be told. Suffice it to say that Jolson has never been quite so Jolsonian, never quite so tremendously appealing. The support is especially adequate, the photography is beautiful and Lloyd Bacon has done a masterly piece of directing.

You owe it to yourself to see Al Jolson in "The Singing Fool."

All this week at the Broadway theatre.

ADDRESS TO ITALIANS IN REPUBLICAN RALLY

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, R. I., Nov. 2—The United Theatre was filled Sunday afternoon for the last republican rally under the auspices of the Hoover-Curtis club. The meeting was preceded by an organ recital by Robert Valsmire. President Thomas McKenzie of the club from a platform decorated with the national and state flags and pictures of the republican candidates introduced the chairman of the meeting Samuel H. Davis, Westerly member of the republican state central committee.

Hon. Richard S. Aldrich, of Warwick, R. I., candidate for re-election from the Second Rhode Island Congressional district, was the first speaker and was followed by Senator Jesse P. Metcalf of Providence, a candidate for re-election for United States senator, a member of the national republican senatorial committee, also a member of the republican national committee on finance for the present campaign. He told his hearers that he had just returned from a trip through the corn belt and declared that many of them had shown a swing toward Hoover.

Col. H. Anthony Dyer, of Providence, stated that he was especially interested in having the Italian-American residents of Westerly become familiar with the issues of the present campaign. He said that he had recently returned from one of his many recent trips to Italy, where he had followed his profession as an artist, and recalled the story of an Italian resident who had begged him to take him back with him to America, the land of opportunity. In concluding Col. Dyer spoke for three minutes in Italian.

Governor Norman S. Case detailed much that the republican party had accomplished in state legislation, naming some twenty-two constructive pieces of legislation and urged his hearers to return to the legislature Senator Howard E. Thorp, member of committee on corporations, who, he declared, in contrast with his opponent for R. I. governor when in the senate with himself as presiding officer, talked to the point on the matter for consideration, while he had much difficulty in keeping Mr. Archambault to the subject before the chamber. Gov. Case asked for the return of Representative John D. Nichols from the First Westerly district, on the committee on education and Representative Clifford W. Campbell, of the house committee on finance, from the Second Westerly district.

At the conclusion of the rally a reception was tendered Senator and Mrs. Metcalf and Hon. and Mrs. Dyer.

TAFTVILLE

COLLECTION AT SACRED HEART CHURCH STOLEN

A sum of money estimated to be about $400, representing the collections of the first three masses at Sacred Heart church, and the special All Souls day offering was stolen from the church vestry on October 28th during the celebration of the high mass of the day. The loss was kept secret to better allow the police to follow up on the case. Rev. Omer T. Chartier was celebrating the 10.45 mass and Rev. Frederic R. DesSurmont, pastor of the church was there when the theft was committed. The money had been placed in a large felt bag, awaiting the fourth collection of the day, and was on a table in the vestry. Someone familiar with the habits of the priests and the church premises entered the building and took the bag. As yet there have been no arrests, but police are working on the case and it is believed that there will be developments soon.

Mrs. Charles H. Boyens of Norwich, was a recent guests the members of the Ladies Aid society of the Versailles Methodist Episcopal church. The afternoon was spent in sewing and refreshments of potato salad, vegetable salad, rolls, meat loaf, cake, tea and coffee were served by the hostess. # BELGIAN WOMAN ENDORSING HOOVER CALLS HIM MAN OF DEEDS NOT WORDS

"It is not the things that one said, but the things that one did that really counted," said Mrs. Suzanne Silvercruys Farnam of New Haven, noted sculptor and protegee of Cardinal Mercier, in referring to Mr. Hoover in an address delivered Saturday evening at the town hall at a republican rally under the auspices of the "Hoover club." Mrs. Farnam described the character of Herbert Hoover and the size of the first relief work done by Mr. Hoover in her native country, and Belgium, during the war. Her address was heard by an audience that taxed the seating capacity of the large hall in spite of the disagreeable weather of the evening. Mrs Farnam held the interest of her audience throughout her talk and oftentimes was compelled to stop her discourse because of the applause rendered by them.

George M. Cheney, chairman of the republican town committee, opened the rally at 8:15 o'clock and asked Principal Henry A Tirrell of the Norwich Free Academy to preside, who introduced Mrs. Farnam with a few well chosen remarks. She was greeted with a tremendous ovation.

Mrs. Farnam spoke in part as follows: "Since I was a little girl I have always had the feeling that it is not the things that one said, but the things that one did that really counted. Whether you are a republican or a democrat I assure you in the beginning that I will not hurt your feelings, in so doing I am following the great leader.

"The great war was horrible. Every day of my life I prayed that I would never live through another war. If I should live a 100 years or a 1000 years, I would never forget the sight of those wounded Belgian soldiers lying on stretches, full of blood and with their uniforms torn. All that because men were killing each other. I was going to be shot because I met a number of soldiers escape. I was spared. I was also spared to know the feeling of hunger. That was 14 years ago.

"At that time the American ambassador called in a man and asked him to take charge of feeding the 10,000,000 Belgians and other millions of people. That man did not answer, and left the building. After a few minutes he came back and said 'I saw by the clock that I was in time to buy 7,000,000 bushels of wheat for the Belgians.' That man was Herbert Hoover. His answer was in action and not in words.

"I was sitting at my father's home when I was asked by the republican committee to talk of Herbert Hoover. I ran to the nearest telegraph office and sacrificed all my plans for Herbert Hoover. It is not what one says, but what one does. Action speaks louder than words. So here I am. Here I am, a Belgian by birth. Here I am an European with the European background. Here I am a Roman Catholic. Not a Roman Catholic of a short time. A Roman Catholic of always. And proud of it. I was a great admirer of Cardinal Mercier. I know that he would be happy to hear me talk of Herbert Hoover.

"There is no religious issue in this campaign as far as Herbert Hoover is concerned. Because when he asked people he wouldn't want to know whether the people were Roman Catholics, Protestants, Jews or Quakers. As long as they needed him he was there.

"When a president of a big corporation is to be elected the stockholders are asked to choose him. In this democracy of ours every man has one vote to cast. These Americans are called upon and given the opportunity to vote for the president of the biggest corporation of them all, the United States of America. These Americans are expected to use their intelligence, their unprejudiced common sense and their sound unselfish judgement to retain the best, the most valuable, the most efficient in this corporation, their stock and interests. In is prosperity and safety of their homes. I have come back to help this president and I want to choose for my country one who I can be proud of. A man admired by the whole world. A man whom any corporation in the world would be willing to have at its head. A man who might not have been born on the streets of New York. A man who was born poor in Iowa, a son of a blacksmith. A man who worked his way through school, through college and worked his way to administer to the whole world. A man with a conscientious mind. That man is Herbert Hoover.

"I know the issues and program of this campaign, prohibition tariff, etc. What field for debate. I am for Herbert Hoover because of his stand on protective tariff. I want to see protective tariff and not low tariff. I don't want to see the American market flooded with European goods. We don't want a party that wants to hurt business, but one that wants to help business.

"I don't believe prohibition is an issue. When President Wilson went to Europe during the war he had wonderful plans to save the world. He made treaties with Europe. At that time I was in the United States. I was told that congress was not going to ratify his proposal. Wilson came back and in spite of all the messages he sent and the beautiful speeches congress did not ratify it. That is exactly what would happen with Al Smith on the prohibition question if he were elected president. He would try to amend the amendment. Even supposing congress was even. The amendment would meet the refusal of the republicans and refusal of the dry democrats and in that way it would not become an amendment. That is enough for the issue.

"I can still hear the women with their babies in their arms waiting by the hundreds for food that was to keep them alive. I can still hear their merci. thank you. Women, do you remember the years 1917-18? Do you remember when America went into the war? Do you remember the American doughboys leaving in the trains amid the display of flags? The American doughboys landed in France. But who was to feed those boys? Again Hoover was called upon. He was called upon by a democrat, President Wilson. He worked with the women of America. The women of America worked with America. The war was not only won at Flanders and in the Argonne. The war was won in the homes of the American women in front of their stoves. That's hard work. They only looked at the picture of Mr. Hoover, "to Hooverize." They saved and won. Say again. Hooverize, and thereby win for your homes. I am for Hoover because I am an American. He is a man who acts before he speaks and when he speaks he knows what he is talking about. I want to have Hoover run the ship the same way as President Coolidge, the same way as secretary of commerce. All he did was done behind his desk. He did not talk about what he did. He did not tell the American public I did this and I did that. Hoover does things and when these are done he does other things.

"I have only some luck because my love for the United States was so great. Because of you I wanted to see the man I knew be elected. In my speaking is not involved any personal interest. I am not a candidate for any office. What I am trying to be is a sculptor. I can assure you Herbert Hoover doesn't have to hide his face. He has a wonderful face. I made the bust of Mr. Hoover He didn't like to have it done. He said, 'What do they want my bust for?' He was convinced of the fruitful work done by Mr. Hoover in her native country, and Belgium, during the war. Her address was heard by an audience that taxed the seating capacity of the large hall in spite of the disagreeable weather of the evening. Mrs Farnam held the interest of her audience throughout her talk and oftentimes was compelled to stop her discourse because of the applause rendered by them.

FORMER NORWICH SISTER ILL WITH PNEUMONIA

From the pulpit of St. Patrick's church Sunday the congregations were asked to pray for a former member of the nuns' community on Perkins avenue, Sister Mary Carola, for many years a teacher in the parish school and held in affectionate remembrance by hundreds of former pupils. Sister Carola was transferred to the convent of the Sacred Heart church, Bridgeport, where she is seriously ill with double pneumonia. Prayers were offered to God to grant her either a speedy recovery or the grace of a happy death. In her duties while in Norwich she had charge of the altars, also was most zealous in her visitations to the sick and the poor.

As priests and people desired to attend the ceremonies at Jewett City Sunday afternoon and to hear Rt. Rev. Bishop Nilan, benediction of the blessed sacrament followed the last mass, afternoon services being omitted.

In his announcements at 9 o'clock Rev. John J. Reilly stated that, as he was to take about 25 Boy Scouts to the Yale-Maryland football game at New Haven Saturday next ten cars and drivers would be required, the names of those proffering their machines to be left with him or with John P. Corcoran, the head usher. A number of automobiles were offered Sunday.

Every Sunday is like a mission Sunday at St. Patrick's now and at 9 o'clock mass Father Reilly had to assist Rev. Myles P. Galvin in giving holy communion. Father Reilly preached on Sainthood, as manifested in love for God and in that sacrifice for one's neighbor which follows in the wake of love.

STOECKEL'S IDEA TO JUNK UNFIT AUTOMOBILES

Autos that travel over the state highways when they ought to be relegated to the junk pile will be removed from the road by the motor vehicles department if a new accident prevention program contemplated by Commissioner Robbins B. Stoeckel is adopted.

Mr. Stoeckel says that he will submit a bill to the incoming legislature asking authority to refuse registration for a certain class of cars which fail to pass an examination. The plan is to fix a definite turn-over period for all cars operating on the highways and those going beyond that period will be required to present a certificate of fitness before registration will be granted. If the legislature makes this a law, Connecticut will be the first state in the country to extend its examinations from individuals to autos along these lines.

"The plan for the removal from the highway of such cars which on account of their condition are dangerous is based on the supposition that there are today running in traffic quite a number of broken down, decrepit mechanisms which on account of those facts are dangerous," Mr. Stoeckel said. "If a plan can be produced which will keep such mechanisms up to safe standard then all the traffic will benefit. It is probably a fact that by statistical research a normal turn-over period, so-called, of all cars on the highway can be definitely ascertained. If that can be done, then a plan relating to all cars older than that turn-over date might be valuable. If it cannot be ascertained, then it may be possible to begin with the cars which have been the longest on the highway and which by reason of their long continued use are presumably not as fit as those which have had less use, and work from those to cars which have not been on the roads so long.

"In any event, a time period must be determined in the legislature as a point from which to start investigation of such mechanisms and when such a time-point is determined, it will be a simple matter to order examination, under state authority, for all cars older than the time specified as to their condition. Such an examination would result in the issuance of a certificate, by the examining authority that the car, notwithstanding its age and use, is, in the opinion of the examiner, suitable to run for the registration period projected. Such an examination could be readily enforced because the registration authorities could refuse to register any car which did not have with it a proper certificate of qualification.

"This, in brief, is the plan:

"1. To set a date and to presume that cars older than that date have had so much use and are so worn out that it is fair that they be examined before they continue on the highways.

"2. To pass a law that the registration authority shall not register cars older than that date without a certificate of examination issued under state authority.

"It may be well to point out that such a plan, if practicable and carried through, would result in getting a better average of car mechanisms on the highway and at the same time would put into the hands of each owner of a car so examined a state certificate of examination, which, if thereafter the car is reasonably used, will be a valuable protection for him in event of an accident where it might be claimed that the condition of his car is involved."

This is Mr. Stoeckel's first formal announcement of the plan. Two years ago he advanced the idea at a meeting of auto dealers here and it was received favorably. Recently he presented it to the convention of police chiefs in Bridgeport where it also won satisfactory response. He has also mentioned it in addresses in other parts of the state, although not in the present crystallized form.

The commissioner at this time consented only to make public the skeleton of the program. He emphasized the fact that the plan is purely an accident prevention and safety measure and is in no way a taxation scheme. Mr. Stoeckel believes that the time has come when autos as well as their drivers should be examined and he is sure that the time is coming soon when speed on the roads will be based not on the individual's driving but on the average capacity of the auto.

MASQUERADE SURPRISE FOR NEWLY MARRIED COUPLE

A pretty masquerade surprise party was tendered Friday evening to Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Laubin, at their new home at 145 Maple street, in honor of their recent marriage. A console table was presented to the bride and groom.

All guests arrived in costume, both comical and attractive. Henry Sebastian, as a human skeleton, created quite a sensation. The clowns were Mrs. Henry Sebastian and Orette Fournier. Robin Hood was impersonated by Richard Oat. Then the college sheik, Mary Prodell, fresh from the finishing school. The Spirit of '76 was portrayed by Kitty Kelley and Dot Smiley. Two European visitors, Belles from Barcelona, Edna Prodell and Josephine Tulka, were there. Captain Kidd, Anna Retkorske, and gypsy bride, Maud Wooley, brought along their family of three children, Elizabeth Toth, Mary Martin and Doris Gardner. Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Laubin, attired in complete Indian costume, entertained with weird dances and blood-curdling war whoops. Mrs. Arthur Lemoureux caused much laughter in her dress of frills and bustles and perch hat, especially when she did a mock scalp dance.

A halloween supper was served at midnight.

I Live in God

I live in God: my body forms
A cell in His vast frame,
And God who guards the universe
Will guard that cell the same.

I live in God: His mind inspires
My thirst for truth and light,
And He His intellect will share
As I shall earn the right.

I live in God: His spirit fills
My soul with joy and peace,
And as the hasting years go by
My faith and love increase.

I live in God: in life and death
And through eternal time
God is my home, my destiny,
My Paradise sublime.

—By Caleb W. Lawrence, M. A.

Up a Hill and a Hill

Up a hill and a hill there's a sudden orchard-slope,
And a little tawny field in the sun!
There's a gray wall that coils like a twist of frayed-out rope,
And grasses nodding news one to one.

Up a hill and a hill there's a windy place to stand,
And between the apple boughs to find the blue
Of the sleepy summer sea, past thee cliffs of orange sand,
With the white charmed ships sliding through.

Up a hill and a hill there's a little house as gray
As a stone that the glaciers scored and stained;
With a red rose by the door, and a tangled garden-way,
And a face at the window checkerpaned.

I could climb, I could climb, till the shoes fell off my feet,
Just to find that tawny field above the sea!
Up a hill and a hill,—oh, the honeysuckle's sweet!
And the eyes at the window watch for me!

SMITH SERENE, CONFIDENT ON THE EVE OF ELECTION

Sends Message of Confidence to His Running Mate, Senator Robinson—In Final Appeal to the Voters, the Democratic Nominee Assured Them That He Could "Enter Upon the Duties of the Greatest Office in the World Without Commitment to Anybody Except the American People."—Will Give the Best There is in Him to Bring About a Constructive and Progressive Administration.

NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—(AP)—Election eve found Alfred E. Smith expressing confidence as to the outcome of the voting tomorrow.

Several times recently he has declared that victory was "in the air" and one of his last acts today was to telerram his colleague in the campaign, Senator Joe T. Robinson, of Arkansas, that "We go together to victory tomorrow."

This message was wired by the governor to his running mate who has returned to Little Rock, Ark., to vote after completing one of the most extensive tours ever undertaken by a vice presidential nominee.

"Together we have laid before the people the fundamental issues of this campaign," the telegram read. "The people do not err. In the last analysis their decision will be right and we go together to victory tomorrow."

During the day, the governor delivered a final appeal to the farmers over a nation-wide hook-up. The address was from a studio of the National Broadcasting company and in this eleventh hour utterance, the nominee again rapped the position of Herbert Hoover, his rival for the presidency on the farm relief issue.

He said that in 1894, Mr. Hoover had declared that overproduction on the farm "can only be corrected by prices low enough to make production unprofitable" and demanded to know if the farmer desired to entrust solution of this problem to one holding such a view.

He declared Mr. Hoover spoke of stabilization corporations and a willingness to lend money to such organizations. He added that "our commodity prices are not made in America" and contended that Hoover in his St. Louis speech had declared they were made abroad.

"You can no more control or stabilize them," the governor continued, "by a corporation that has no power to lift the surplus over and out of the domestic market its nyoun can fight a fair fight with a man ten miles away."

The democratic nominee declared that Hoover had attacked the democratic program put forward for solution of the farm problem and added that Senator Norris of Nebraska, and Frank O. Lowden, former Illinois governor, and a farm group leader, were among those from whom he learned to approve the proposal which he now sponsored.

"In his speech at Madison Square Garden in New York Mr. Hoover branded this whole principle as state socialism," he added.

The text of the governor's farm speech was released during the day and with the exception of a final appeal for broadcasting over another radio hook-up tonight, wound up his campaign.

ABSTRACT OF GOV. SMITH'S FINAL APPEAL TO VOTERS

NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—(AP)—Turning to the radio to carry a final appeal to the voters of the nation, Alfred E. Smith declared tonight that he could "enter upon the duties of the greatest office in the world without commitment to anybody except the American people."

In his campaign valedictory specifically prepared for delivery through the microphone to an unseen audience, the democratic nominee first reviewed in detail his record in public life and then delivered what he described as "my last spoken word before the American people start in the morning to make their decision."

"It is this," he said. "At no time during my long public career in elective office did I ever trade a promise for a vote. I have made no promises to any man or to any group of men. Nobody was authorized to make any promises for me, and in fact, none has been made.

"I can enter upon the duties of the greatest office in the world without commitment to anybody except the American people. I can enter upon the duties of that great office with a mind single to the best interest of this country, and I promise you that in return for your vote of confidence tomorrow I shall give to the country the best that is in me to bring about a constructive, progressive and forward-looking administration."

The governor said that under the American form of government the citizens of the country "must assume an individual obligation to do their full share to keep the democratic government the success that it has been." He added that "their share" on election day was to be sure to vote.

"The declaration of the equality of man is never better exemplified," he continued, "than it is on election day, when the humblest man in the community is the equal of the president of the United States as he stands before the ballot box.

"A man or woman who is not sufficiently interested in the welfare of the country to take the trouble to cast a ballot cannot be said to be a very good citizen. It is almost as though they say in effect that they do not care what happens.

"The whole theory of democratic representative government is predicated on the belief that the citizens of the country are sufficiently interested in their government to determine for themselves who is to run it.

The governor then said he was "no stranger" to public office and recalled he had been a candidate for elective office 20 times and been successful upon every occasion but one.

Citing that many legislative proposals as well as constitutional amendments had been enacted during his administration, the governor declared many of these had been brought about as a result of his having made a direct appeal to the people of the state. He added that nearly every "constructive record" must be accompanied by law and this meant the executive must possess the traits of leadership that make "it possible for him to get along with the people."

"The American people will never stand for a dictator," he declared, "any more than they are today satisfied and contented with a policy of silence."

The nominee said during his campaigns for governor he had received "my strongest and most vigorous support from the women" of the state and declared they had fought side by side with him for many laws affecting women, children, pensions and factory workers.

SEN. ROBINSON SPOKE TO "HOME" GATHERING

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Nov. 5.—(AP)—On the front steps of the state capitol in which 16 years ago he was inaugurated governor and a short time later elected to the senate for the first time by the legislature, Senator Joe T. Robinson, democratic vice presidential nominee tonight made his final speech before the election to a crowd gathered from all parts of the state to celebrate his home coming.

Although he originally intended to make a non-political speech, he took advantage of the opportunity in addressing thousands of his fellow citizens on election eve again to praise his running mate, Governor Smith, and assail Herbert Hoover and the republican party.

He attacked the republican party on farm relief and other questions, declaring that Mr. Hoover's New York speech "characterized the principles of the McNary-Haugen bill as state socialism, sounds the doom of the hopes of all the millions dependent on farm production, shows Mr. Hoover's ticket triumph."

"The promise made a few days ago to call an extra session of congress to consider legislation on this subject, is comparable to a deathbed repentance," he said, "it carries no assurance that any measure the farmers want will be approved. Their supreme need is to elect a president who will sign and not veto the measure they desire."

The senator also devoted much of his speech to the so called "whispering campaign" and declared "it is a great mistake for ministers to attempt to dominate political affairs."

VILLAGE THREATENED BY LAVA FROM MOUNT ETNA

CATANIA, Sicily, Nov. 5.—(AP)—Streams of flaming lava rolling down from the crater of Mount Etna tonight were on the verge of overwhelming the small village of Masoali which nestles among vineyards at the foot of the volcano. The semi-fluid mass had reached a point a little more than a mile from the town and general evacuation of the inhabitants, which had been under way all day was being hastened.

On their way down the mountainside from the new mouth which opened today at Montenaci, the molten mass had wiped out rich hazelnut and chestnut groves which had been common property for years and also had destroyed many vineyards.

The flaming torrent, whose progress during the night could be watched from afar by its smoky light, had flowed steadily on in a stream about twenty meters wide.

POLITICAL SITUATION IN RUMANIA CHAOTIC

BUCHAREST, Rumania, Nov. 5.—(AP)—Still without a government and with all political conferences abortive, Rumania tonight was anxiously awaiting the arrival of Nicholas Titulescu, politically independent statesman, who it is hoped will solve the problems.

The plane used was furnished by the Atlantic Aircraft corporation, and Captain Haynes was a voluntary pilot, as a mark of respect to the Mexican people who treated him "so courteously" when he visited Mexico City. Miss Carranza was accompanied by a group of newspapermen and friends. They took off from Teterboro airport.

The province of Nueva Segovia, where many of Sandino's followers formerly lived, showed a larger conservative vote yesterday than in the last election.

Sandino did not make good his threats to create disturbances at the polls in the northern area.

Rothstein Shooting Story Of Underworld

Fleeced by Other Gamblers, Rothstein "Welches" His I O U, Calls for $200,000.

NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—(AP)—Arnold Rothstein, who won [illegible] thousands on the turn of a card or a stock fluctuation or a running horse, was at death's door tonight because he refused to play the shorn sheep for a trio of card-marking renegades of his own underworld profession.

They marked the cards on Rothstein and won $280,000, police were informed today. Knowing at last the game was crooked, but knowing also that if he said so then he would never leave the room alive, he turned over what he happened to have in his wallet, a matter of $130,000, and gave his I. O. U. for the rest.

And then, safely away, he sent word that for the first time in his eventful career he was going to "welch in his paper" and they could whistle up the wind for their money. "Tell them," he said, "they can go bite themselves to death."

He got a body guard and he was careful about where he went and who was with him. But last night a man who passed as his friend summoned him by telephone to a room in the Park Central hotel and when he went there he was confronted by the trio who had tried to fleece him. They had been drinking and Rothstein must have known that he was close to death.

But he refused to buy his life at the sharpers' terms and told them so in no uncertain words, as police reconstruct the case. There was a muffled explosion recalled later by an elevator operator, a scuttling away of the "creditors" who had called Rothstein to account, and Rothstein himself, shot through the abdomen, walked unsteadily to the hotel entrance and asked weakly for a cab.

The attendant called an ambulance instead and summoned police. Detective Patrick Flood of the squad that controls the Bright Light district that was Rothstein's haunt was first to arrive.

"Who shot you, Rothstein?" he asked, but the gambler only put his finger to his lips and shook his head.

"You know me better than that, Paddy," he said, and so they took him to the hospital refusing to violate the underworld code that forbids "squealing," even against a mortal enemy.

Rothstein was operated on today and afterwards doctors only reported that the operation was completed. They did not say it was successful. Later they announced the gambler's condition was "desperate" and his wife and intimates were given little hope that he would live.

Police revealed tonight the names of two men they were seeking in connection with the shooting of Rothstein. One was "Nigger Nathan" Raymond of San Francisco and the other was Tommy Meehan, who lives near the Park Central hotel.

Both were described by detectives as professional gamblers who recently had won large amounts playing against Rothstein. Raymond, they said, had been a frequent participant lately in games in which Rothstein played or which were backed by his money, and they understood he was planning to leave the city with about $225,000 he had won in these games. Meehan was said to have won $60,000 in the last game in which Rothstein played, the "marked card game," a contest which started as stud poker but which ended up in the four survivors cutting the pack at $10,000 a cut.

Detectives investigating the case found that the gambler himself maintained a suite in the Park Central in addition to his Park avenue home. In looking into the financial condition they received reports placing his fortune as high as $10,000,000.

THEORIES OF WRECK OF PLANE YANKEE DOODLE

PRESCOTT, Ariz., Nov. 5—(AP)—Aviators here today advanced the theory that the airplane Yankee Doodle, which crashed near here Saturday, killing Captain C. B. D. Collyer and Harry Tucker, was caught in a downward draft of mountain air currents, when it faltered with motor trouble and dashed against the sides of the canyon in which it fell.

Charles Goldtrap, who flew here from Phoenix, Ariz., yesterday, at the request of the Standard Air Lines, Inc., of Los Angeles, said he believed Collyer and Tucker undoubtedly were victims of unusual atmospheric conditions.

Guilty Of Fraudulent Over-Issues Of Stock

Former Officers of Julian Petroleum Corporation Sentenced in Los Angeles Yesterday.

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 5—(AP)—Sentences of seven years each to the Federal prison at McNeil Island, Puget Sound, and fines of $16,000 each were meted out in Federal district court here today to S. C. Lewis, former head of the Julian Petroleum corporation, and Jack Bennett, alias Jacob Berman, following conviction of fraudulent over-issues of stock in that concern.

C. O. Stepp, co-defendant with Lewis and Bennett, was sentenced to pay a fine of $1,000.

Charges against the men grew out of their asserted misuse of the mails in the sale of nearly $1,000,000 in gold bonds of the Lewis Oil company. Lewis and Bennett were sentenced to serve five years in Federal prison and fined $10,000 on the count of conspiracy.

John R. Aiken, the fourth defendant in the case, who entered a plea of guilty at the start of the trial, is to be sentenced Wednesday.

Motions for new trials and arrestment of judgment were made by the attorneys of the three convicted.

INVESTIGATING SLAYING OF TWO YOUNG MARRIED WOMEN

DALLAS, Tex., Nov. 5—(AP)—Arrest of a man they were seeking in Oklahoma was the lead on which police tonight pinned their hopes of solving the mysterious slaying of two young married women who were clubbed to death at a lonely spot near Dallas at midnight Saturday.

All clues, the investigators said, pointed toward this one man. Police said they had been informed he made threats against the life of Mrs. Bessie Lynch, 21, who with Mrs. Cleo Lieto, 19, was beaten to death shortly after the two young women had been seen at a dance.

Jealousy, officers said, was the probable motive of the crime and they expressed the belief that the man they were seeking in Oklahoma picked up the girls in his automobile after the dance, drove them to the lonely spot, clubbed one of them to death in a rage, and then struck the other down to seal her lips.

FORMER BOOTLEGGER NOW HELD AS A GUNMAN

CHICAGO, Nov. 5—(AP)—A reformed bootlegger who abandoned the "racket" to become a bond salesman, was held as a gunman today after shooting affray in South LaSalle street, heart of Chicago's money marts.

The man held is Abraham Cooper. He shot and perhaps fatally wounded Leo Mongoven, alleged robber and bootlegger, as he sat with two other men in his automobile in front of the Rookery building.

Cooper, seized by police immediatly after the shooting said Mongoven and his two companions were planning to "take him for a ride" when he got mad and started shooting." He said the trio sought to collect $5,000 from him for their defense fund at their trial for robbery. They were accused of stealing $14,000 in jewels from two Chicago women last week.

13 PERSONS WERE INJURED DURING REPUBLICAN PARADE IN WORCESTER

WORCESTER, Mass., Nov. 5 —(AP)—Thirteen persons, including a policeman were injured, 10,000 marchers were showered with bricks, eggs and refuse and women were manhandled here tonight in disturbances which developed during an "election eve" republican demonstration.

Patrolman Harry Hyde was beaten senseless and several of his teeth knocked out when he attempted to break up a fight and Mrs. Lloyd Byrd of this city was taken to the City hospital after a horn she was blowing had been shoved down her throat.

The police were unable to make any arrests as prisoners were torn from their grasp and the officers threatened by hundreds of men.

Most of the action took place in the "Meadows" district of the city, near East park, where the demonstration came to a close with a fire-works display. Several store and house windows in the district were shattered by stones during the fighting. Signs were torn from business houses and hurled into the lines of the marchers.

Police reported that most of the injuries were incurred during individual fights which took place at East park. The authorities had expected disturbances and all officers were ordered on duty.

The first sign of trouble came at city hall where crowds lining the side-walks pushed into the street and threatened the marchers. Mrs. Lloyd was in an automobile and was blowing a horn when a youth pushed it into her throat. She was taken to the police surgeon for emergency treatment and then sent to the hospital.

At Washington square, the place where both Herbert Hoover and Governor Alfred E. Smith were greeted during their recent visits to the city, the marchers were showered with eggs and refuse. They continued their march toward the park through a veritable barrage of bricks and eggs.

Mrs. Frank B. Hall, wife of a member of the republican state committee, was pulled from her place in the parade and manhandled by a group of the hecklers before she was rescued. As the parade entered East park a group of girls parading in automobile trucks as representatives of an industrial plant, were pulled from their seats and their clothes torn.

"Hoover" signs were torn from the marchers as they entered the park by men who used them as clubs. In the darkness of the park, the marchers formed into a square to witness the fireworks and they promptly became the targets for more eggs. Oil, in all forms, was heaved from the top of a cliff in the park down onto the heads of the singing republicans.

Policemen from all sections of the city were rushed to the scene and order restored.

The demonstration had been postponed from Saturday night because of rain. Sunday it was discovered that the signal wires on police boxes in the vicinity of East Park had been cut which would have prevented calls being transmitted to headquarters.

IN CALM OF HIS HOME HOOVER AWAITS VERDICT OF VOTERS

Republican Nominee's Final Plea to the Electorate Was in the Shape of an Appeal to the Citizens to Exercise Their Right of Ballot—Calls Upon All Freemen to Go to the Polls and "Vote Independently as Each of Your Own Individual Consciences Direct"—"Whatever the Conscience of America Determines, That Will Be Right."

PALO ALTO, Cal., Nov. 5—(AP)—Herbert Hoover left his campaign for the presidency in the hands of the voters tonight and sat down in the comfort of his Palo Alto home to await their decision.

With three months of work and almost 13,000 miles of traveling behind him, the republican nominee reached the end of his homeward path here late today and tomorrow he will join the great army of voters at the polls.

His final plea to the electorate was in the form of a 15-minute talk over the radio from the study of his home tonight. This was to be non-partisan in character, it was announced, and in the shape of an appeal to the citizens of the country to exercise their right of ballot.

The last stage of his home coming trip brought Hoover into the borders of his adopted state, where he was welcomed by its governor, C. C. Young, and acclaimed by thousands, not only at Palo Alto but at the various cities through which his special train passed.

In brief rear platform talks to each of these crowds, the nominee told them that the big job ahead now was to vote.

"You have arrived at your own convictions," he said at Sacramento, the state capitol. "You have yet to perform the greatest peace time obligation that an American citizen owes to his country—that is, to go to the polls and to vote independently as each of your own individual consciences direct.

"Whatever the conscience of America determines, that will be right."

With this note, he concluded a campaign which had carried him into twenty-nine states in every section of the country except the solid south. His three trips across the continent and four other political swings had sent him over approximately 12,500 miles to lay before the people his views of the issues he considered before them.

In his discussions, the candidate had dealt with a variety of subjects, but with chief stress laid upon agriculture, the tariff, prosperity, prohibition, labor, immigration and the cooperation of government and industry.

Early tomorrow, Hoover, Mrs. Hoover, their sons, Allan and Herbert, Jr., and Mrs. Herbert Hoover, Jr., will go to a polling booth on the campus of Stanford university to cast their ballots. The occasion will mark the first time that Allan has ever voted, he having attained his majority only several months ago.

Herbert, Jr., who had preceded his father to California several weeks ago, met his parents at the station where they were the center of one of the most tumultuous and spontaneous demonstrations Hoover has witnessed at any time during his hectic weeks of campaigning.

Several thousand persons, fellow townspeople and students of Stanford university, massed about the station as his train rolled in. The nominee and Mrs. Hoover posed for pictures while the university band played and the crowd cheered.

Then a group of policemen circled about him and pushed their way through the crowd to the automobile which bore the nominee and his family to their home atop San Juan hill on the university campus.

Thousands of persons joined in the mad scramble to get into a position from which they might get a glimpse of Hoover as his automobile moved away and the streets of the university town were cluttered with lines of automobiles moving in every direction in thorough disregard for traffic regulations.

At his home, the Hoovers were greeted by Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Hoover, the former dean of Stanford university and various others of their personal friends and well wishers from the town. Here again a crowd had gathered and the candidate was forced to stand in his doorway while the cameras clicked.

NOMINEE HOOVER'S FINAL APPEAL TO ELECTORATE

PALO ALTO, Cal., Nov. 5—(AP)—Herbert Hoover in his final utterance of the campaign tonight appealed to the electorate of the country to disregard sectional lines in balloting at the polls tomorrow.

"It is contrary to our national ideals that any party should represent any section of the country and this election more than any that has gone before gives hope for the breaking down of sectional lines," the republican presidential candidate said.

"There ought no longer to be any north, south, east or west in our national thought. Our ideals as Americans have been molded and welded under leadership of men and women from every section of our country. The greatest progress can come in advancement of our institutions, our ideas and our ideals by the common contribution of every section."

The address was made by the candidate from the study of his home on San Juan hill on the Stanford university campus within a few hours after his arrival here from Washington to vote. Gathered about him as he spoke into the microphone were Mrs. Hoover, their two sons, Allan and Herbert, Jr., and Mrs. Herbert, Jr., and a few personal friends.

The nominee welcomed the "millions of first voters" to the "common task of building a better and better social order and the welding of the idealism of youth into political life."

Pointing to the unparalleled registration for tomorrow's battle of ballots, Hoover said this to a great extent was due to the women "who are alive to the fact that the issues in national elections more seriously than ever before affect every home in our country."

"Women have achieved their rights at the ballot; they have now accepted their responsibilities," he added.

MESSAGE TO "HOME FOLK" BY SENATOR CURTIS

TOPEKA, Kansas, Nov. 5.—(AP)—Carrying out a custom of the last third of a century, Senator Charles Curtis, the republican vice presidential nominee, closed his campaign here tonight with a final message to his "home folk" in which he reviewed various issues and criticised the stand of Governor Alfred E. Smith on some of them.

Since he was first elected to congress from the old fourth Kansas district in 1892, the republican nominee has closed each of his campaign with an address in Topeka. Tonight he spoke to an audience of his fellow townspeople in the city auditorium.

Pointing out that it takes 36 states to amend the constitution, and that 46 of the 48 states had ratified the 18th amendment, Senator Curtis, in a prepared address, told his audience the republican platform "pledges the party to the faithful enforcement and vigorous execution of the 18th amendment to the constitution."

"Strict enforcement of the law, while it is a law," he said, "has always been my creed."

LINDBERGH HOME TO CAST VOTE FOR HOOVER

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 5—(AP)—Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh, flying a plane borrowed in Fort Worth, Texas, landed at Lambert-St. Louis field late today, returning from a hunting trip in Mexico in order to cast his vote here tomorrow. He has announced he is for Hoover for president.

MOTHER CONCEPCION PROTESTS HER INNOCENCE

SAN ANGEL, D. F., Mexico, Nov. 5—(AP)—The Mexican public today was abruptly cut off from the trial of Josephe Leon Toral for assassination of President-elect Obregon and of Mother Conception, alleged to have motivated him. The microphone which had carried the words of the witnesses and lawyers to the nation was removed from the small courtroom and requested not to publish comments on the trial.

Correa Nieto, the prosecutor, charged that the defense had taken advantage of the trial to spread seditious propaganda in aid of the "clerical rebellion". This brought a prompt denial from the defense attorneys, who pointed out that the government and not the defense had ordered the radio installed.

Mother Superior Concepcion Acevedo de la Llata, who faces a sentence of twenty years if convicted as "intellectual author" of the crime, occupied the witness stand most of the day. Protesting her innocence of knowledge of the intention of Leon Toral or of any domination over him, the nun said she offered herself willingly, although innocent, to suffer for her brother and sister Catholics.

She charged that it was solely because she was a Catholic nun that she had been brought to trial.

SEARCHING FOR CONVICTS IN THE WILDS OF TEXAS

FREEPORT, Texas, Nov. 5—(AP)—While more than a score of farm officials searched the wilds of the Brazoria county bottoms in search of 24 of the 31 men who sawed their way to freedom from the state prison farm near here last night, state prison authorities began an investigation designed to put a stop to such wholesale breaks that have occurred at frequent intervals in recent years. Seven of the escaped convicts were captured last night. Of those who remained at liberty, three were serving terms of 17 years or longer.

Last night's getaway occurred only half an hour after W. H. Mead of Houston, general manager of the state prison system, had concluded an inspection of the county farm. Mead said the farm lacked adequate safety in its housing of convicts and intimated that the state legislature would be asked to act in the matter of obtaining needed expenditures there.

While their companions allayed the normal suspicions of the two guards by banging guitars and singing, a few of the men within the walls cut a hole in a window sill and pried up an iron bar. Thirty one prisoners squeezed themselves through the opening thus formed while their 21 companions kept up the music until the last man was free. The break was discovered 15 minutes later.

JAPANESE WILL ACCLAIM THEIR NEW RULER TODAY

TOKYO, Nov. 5—(AP)—Japan, like America, tonight is on the eve of a great national event. While millions of Americans will march to the polls tomorrow to choose a new head of the state, millions of Japanese will acclaim a new ruler, Hirohito, 124th emperor of Japan, setting forth from the capital on his imperial progress to formal enthronement. The emperor will celebrate his formal accession to the "throne of a lineal descent unbroken for ages eternal".

Tokyo already bears the aspect of a celebration which comes once in a generation. At nightfall scores of thousands of lanterns of brilliant designs lining the main street were lighted and illuminated thousands of banners.

PARTY LEADERS MARSHALL FORCES FOR TODAY'S ELECTION

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Nov. 5—The stage is now set for Windham's contribution to the great state and national battle of ballots Tuesday. The polls will open at 6 a. m. and close at 5 p. m., and the results, to be compiled from eight voting machines set in the four districts of the town, will probably be announced by 8 o'clock or shortly afterwards. As the important event approached there appeared to be seeping through the bustle of preparations and anticipations a tension indicative of the deep interest in the ballot classic. Both republican and democratic party leaders today abandoned the rallying and conversation campaign today and with their respective committees settled down to marshalling their forces for the big drive on the polls.

Votes will be cast in the districts as follows: First district, electors residing west of the center of Walnut street vote in the town building, High street entrance. Second district, electors residing east of the center of Walnut street and west of the center of Jackson street, vote in the old town hall, Church street. Third district, electors residing east of the center of Jackson street and in Windham Center and North Windham vote at booth on Milk street, near railroad crossing. Fourth district, electors residing in the south side of the river and in South Windham vote at booth on Pleasant street near foot of South street.

George E. Gifford, moderator of the first district will also be moderator-in-chief and returns from Districts 2, 3 and 4 will be brought to the first district where the total results of the town vote will be compiled and announced. The other district moderators are: Second, John J. Sullivan; third, James F. Twomey and fourth, William A. Dawson. The voting machines have been sealed by Mechanics James J. Lee and Henry E. Card. The eight machines are located as follows: First district one; second district, three; third, two and fourth two. District headquarters of both parties have been established and workers will be on hand to instruct voters as to the operation of the machines. During the past few days there has been a wholesale hiring of automobiles and listing of the offer for use of private cars by both parties to convey voters to the polls, including many who reside out of the city.

There are 6,533 names on the increased voting list of the town and predictions are that at least 5,500 ballots will be cast. A special effort has been made to impress on residents of the three Windhams that those in Windham Center and North Windham vote in the third district on Milk street while those in South Windham vote in the fourth district on Pleasant street. The occasion will be the first in which voting machines are to be used in state and national elections. Four years ago, when the "Australian" ballot was in vogue the election returns in the town were not made known until 12.30 o'clock on the morning after election.

KILLINGLY IS ALL READY FOR RECORD VOTE TODAY

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Nov. 5—This was a day of setting up of voting booths, preparation of ballot boxes and attending to other pre-election details in Danielson, Dayville and East Killingly. There will be no delay in starting checking of voters and passing them through the processes of voting when the polls open promptly at 8 o'clock Tuesday morning. Likewise, the polls will close at exactly 5 p. m. It is held by party workers that there is no reason why every registered voter in Killingly will not have ample time to vote, if a sufficient number heed the oft-repeated warning to vote at the earliest possible moment.

Again today it was predicted that obtaining the final total of the vote in Killingly will be considerably delayed Tuesday night. There is every indication that there will be a heavy percentage of split tickets out of the total cast, and it is going to take time to count them and tabulate them, as the town will be voting by districts. Political leaders on both sides look for a hard, close contest in Killingly.

Outside work except for grading and the placing of concrete and curbing will be completed by the general contractors at the new Brooklyn Savings bank building this week. At the present time activity about the place is largely centered on the interior, where plasterers, steam-fitters, plumbers, electricians and carpenters are at work. Though the work is far advanced, it is not anticipated that the building will be ready for occupancy until sometime in late January or February.

The outside work remaining to be done includes the tearing out of the old sidewalks along the Main street frontage and the Academy street side of the building and the replacing of them with new walks and curbs, grading of the lawn space, building of a retaining wall along the north side of the site bordering on the Public Library property, and some minor details. The protruding corner of the site at the junction of Main and Academy street is to be rounded off to make a more attractive appearance at that point. On Tuesday the combined office building and stockhouse that has been on the site since last spring is to be torn down, further clearing the site for the outside work that remains to be done.

A THREE DAYS' COUGH IS YOUR DANGER SIGNAL

Coughs from colds may lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for coughs from colds and bronchial irritations. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs from colds, bronchitis and minor forms of bronchial irritations, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

DEMOCRATS CLAIM VICTORY IN PUTNAM TODAY

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Nov. 5—Democratic town committeemen today felt that the greatest political change in the town of Putnam would come at the close of the polls tomorrow evening and unquestionably Putnam would rest comfortably in the democratic column, due to the tremendous wave of Smith popularity in the city and town. Candidates on the democratic ticket have been making ready to close their campaign for state office since Saturday and today they felt that the great national tide would sweep them into office also. The democrats of the town had the last word of the campaign Sunday evening when 125 met in St. John's hall on Providence street to attend a "How to mark the ballot" class, and were surprised to find that the committee had at the last minute obtained two excellent French campaign speakers of wide reknown. Hon. Sylva C. Lachappelle, a Long Island attorney and acquaintance of Gov. Smith, was the first to speak. According to those of his tongue who heard him, he is one of the greatest French orators ever to speak in Putnam. Mr. Lachappelle began with the first shot of the campaign and outlined the issues to the end. Wilfred Cody of Fall River, Mass., well known Massachusetts democratic organizer was the second speaker. Mr. Cody urged all to exercise their power of voting by casting their ballots on Tuesday and debated other campaign issues.

Chairman of the democratic town committee, Edmund Dubois with a sample ballot described the proper methods of marking the ballot correctly. Mr. Dubois addressed the audience in French, and was followed by ex-Mayor John J. McGarry who repeated in English. The democrats today forecast a party victory in the town tomorrow, because of the Smith wave and the silent vote, which they place on their side. They also hope to benefit much by the split ticket vote.

There is a possibility that the location of the veterans hospital, slated for southern New England will be disclosed within a few days. Hope is held because the federal hospitalization board is now in session at Washington and has acted upon a veteran hospital for the middle Atlantic group of states, recommending that it be located in Newark, N. J. Congress has appropriated a sum of money for the institution of a similar hospital in southern New England and nearly every town and city within the radius are seeking the hospital. Putnam has appointed several committees and has submitted sites to be acted upon, but has heard nothing from the board in Washington. An Associated Press dispatch of Nov 2, contained information regarding the session and action upon the Middle Atlantic group. Final word and action was to have been passed in September, but some unexplained delays have kept the local committees uninformed as to when the site will be awarded.

The first "Friendly Evening" service of motion picture screenings was held last evening at the Congregational church when the motion picture "Barbed Wire" was shown. The church was filled to capacity. The service will continue each Sunday evening throughout the winter months. No admission is charged.

An automobile operated by Aurello Vandi of Mechanicsville collided Sunday evening at the corner of Alfa and Mechanics street with another car owned and operated by Henry Shippee of Woodstock avenue Putnam. Shippee was entering Mechanic street from Alfa, when Vandi failed to see him and crashed the car, slightly in-

"OVER THE COUNTER"

Dear Dot:

"You can judge a man by the cut of his clothes!" That's an old saw and likely it did not govern you in making up your mind as to whom you were going to vote for today. Nevertheless going to vote" SHRDLU HDMDFM going to vote for today. Nevertheless, I realize how deeply interested you are in your husband's appearance and also as to the fit and style of Jimmy's suits. And well you should be. It takes a woman to really appreciate just how greatly proper clothing play a part in creating that atmosphere of assurance, poise and satisfaction so essential in modern life.

So today I will try to draw your attention for a moment from the elections and give you a little message from the CHURCH-REED COMPANY. Men's Clothiers and Furnishers at the corner of Main and Church streets.

In this fine, up-to-date men's shop you will find that the suit styles for men are exclusively three-button coats with notch lapels. The color scheme favors the darker and more subdued shades of heather mixtures and grays. Vests are single breasted and cut with five and six buttons. Trousers are cuffed and average 18 inches at the bottom.

The suit styles for young men are two and three-button coats, the former with the peak lapels and the latter with notch lapels. They are most attractive in tones of tan and brown, together with Oxford gray, the predominating colors of the season. Some of the smarter or more extreme styles carry double-breasted vests this season. Jimmy would very likely choose this natty outfit. Trousers are cuffed and 19 inches wide at the bottom.

Overcoat styles for both men and young men favor the conservative double-brasted box model. While there are some single-breasted coats and some raglans being shown, the double-breasted box style is by far and away the big leader.

Manager Walter S. Barnes said to me today, "Many of our friends have adopted the idea of giving a suit or overcoat for Christmas. We are glad to work with folks on such an idea and will assist in any way possible to make the selection of clothing easy and successful."

That Christmas thought struck me as very timely. "If "Hubby" and Jimmy do not buy before the holidays you have the chance of making yourself "the best little woman in the world" with such a suitable gift as a suit or overcoat. Manager Barnes will see that your selection is the right one. And will such a gift be appreciated??????

Your friendly advisor,

JANE.

DO YOU JUDGE VALUE BY QUALITY OR PRICE?

How many people are there who know their own business as well as they should?

How many people are there who know the other fellow's business better than he does?

How many people are there who understand the value of merchandise in any other line than their own, well enough to place a value on it without some price mark on it as a guide.

You may ask what we are driving at, and here it is.

Business is based almost wholly upon confidence.

A garment may not be worth $50.00 because there is a $50.00 price tag on it; someone may have made a mistake.

The value establisher the price, rather than the price establishing the value.

Our garments are guaranteed by the maker; we guarantee their guarantee, and the bank will guarantee our guarantee of the maker's guarantee; it is always safe to buy here where prices are the same to everybody.

PUTNAM

during his wife, and causing considerable damage to both cars. Officer Alpherie Spooney of the Putnam police made an investigation of the collision. Neither of the drivers was held by the police.

Grove street and Killingly avenue intersection was the scene of a collision early Sunday morning, when a Chevrolet sedan, driven by Joseph Hurst of Pascoag, R. I., struck a post at this point, damaging the car and slightly injuring the driver. Officer Edward Benoit of the local police was called to the scene to make an investigation of the wreck. Hurst told the officer that he did not see the post, through the dense fog that prevailed. Hurst was allowed to continue.

A third early hour Sunday morning automobile mishap occurred at the intersection of Marshall and Woodstock avenues when a Maxwell coupe driven by Raymond Racine of Pomfret went out of control of the driver, jumped a curb stone and attempted an acrobatic stunt on a lawn on Woodstock ave. The rear wheel of the car was broken and two tires burst open as the car hit the curbing. Glass in one of the doors shattered and cut the driver about the face and hands. Sergt. Liard of the Putnam police investigated. Racine told the police official that another car cut in ahead of him as he was rounding the corner onto Woodstock avenue, causing him to lose control of his car. The wreckage was hauled off and Racine continued to his home.

PUTNAM POLLS READY FOR HEAVY VOTE TODAY

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Nov. 5—Polling officials in a statement this afternoon said that the conditions of voting will be the same in Putnam Tuesday as it has been in past years. The polls will open promptly at six o'clock in the morning when the voting will begin. This is for the benefit of those who are employed in the factories that commence operations at early early hour. Balloting will continue throughout the day until six o'clock in the evening. Those in line at six o'clock will not be turned away, according to announcement today, but will be hustled through. The voters have been urged to make an early turnout so the votes may be counted at an early hour and the returns given.

The republican and democratic town committee have engaged the services of several cars and drivers who will carry voters to the polls. To insure every voter an opportunity to cast his or her ballot, the committees have urged that they be notified as to the location of voters working outside the town, so they may direct cars to call for them. Names may be sent to A. Macdonald, Jr., chairman of the republican town committee or to Edmund Dubois chairman of the democratic committee.

A meeting of the Child Study group of the Parent Teachers association will be held on Wednesday afternoon in the opportunity room of the Israel Putnam school, Nov. 7. The first talk will be on "Habits." The association urges all mothers interested in child training to make an effort to attend these series of meetings. There is no admission charge.

Mrs. Minnie Gannon MacDonald and Mrs. J. Dyer Potter of the Anselm Mayotte, post of the American Legion auxiliary were in Rockville Sunday attending a district meeting of the American Legion of this district. Members from the surrounding towns of Danielson and North Grosvenordale were also in attendance.

Ebert E. Woodis of Walnut street has entered the employ of the Slater Manufacturing company in Webster as a draftsman.

Arthur Cudsworth, a clerk at the Putnam Inn has resigned his position and has entered business in Boston.

Ernest Bousquet of Walnut street and Miss Lila Coates also of Putnam were married this morning at a nuptial high mass at St. Mary's church.

Betting on the outcome of Tuesday's election was not displayed heavily in Putnam today. There were no large stakes, excepting a few small money bets, the rest were verbal agreements between the mentioned parties to forfeit cigars, drinks, etc., if their party should lose.

THE VOTERS' DUTY TODAY

Following a long and strenuous campaign, the voters of this country will go to the polls today and elect a president of the United States to serve for the next four years commencing the fourth of March.

It is a grave responsibility that confronts the voters. They must select the head of the nation, upon whose shoulders will fall the great task of directing national affairs and dealing with all problems that arise at home and abroad which concern this country. That calls for a man of training, a man who is accustomed to face and solve big problems, a man who has an understanding of foreign as well as domestic affairs and a man who is equipped to bring the best possible judgment to bear in time of peace or in emergencies. Such a person is Herbert C. Hoover, whose record shows him to be especially fitted for the great office of president. That was the guiding influence that brought about his nomination at the Kansas City convention, and it should be equally influential in bringing about his election as president today.

Vote for Hoover and Curtis today, or the electors who are pledged to them, because of their qualifications for the office, because of the policies for which they stand and because they assure the country of the continuance of the Coolidge policies, sound business conditions and prosperity.

Vote for Frederic C. Walcott for United States senator today because he is a man of sound policies and in the senate can be relied upon to give Mr. Hoover the utmost support. He is a man of ability who understands Connecticut's needs and whose representation in Washington would be a credit to this commonwealth. He is in full sympathy with the platform and policies of the party which stands for protection for our industries and prosperity for the people.

Vote for Richard P. Freeman for re-election to the United States congress from this district. Such is deserved as an endorsement of his faithful work as congressman and the persistency with which he has dealt with district problems. He is likewise certain to be an aid to a republican administration from which this district and state have obtained so many benefits in the past and upon which they should place their full reliance now.

Vote for John H. Trumbull for governor. If ever a governor deserved re-election Governor Trumbull does. He has worked diligently for the best interests of the state. His record is an open book. His accomplishments are many and important. Connecticut has repeatedly experienced the benefit of his policies and his service to the state is the best recommendation for his return to that office.

Vote for the republican state officers because they have been picked for their fitness and experience. They insure the support to the governor that is needed and desired. They mean the continuance of good state government.

Vote for John F. Richardson for state senator for the 19th district. Norwich should weigh well the importance of having a republican senator in a republican legislature. The election of Mr. Richardson means a senator of the majority party in the next general assembly. That means the most effective and efficient district representation.

Vote for Messrs. Beausoleil and Greenstein for town representatives because they can obtain as members of the party that will control the next legislature advantages for the town that would not be possible for minority representatives to do. Norwich will have matters before the legislature which will stand a far better chance of success if entrusted to republican legislators.

We want a state senator and town representatives who will be able to get results in the next general assembly. Elect the republicans and a big advantage will date from that time.

Pull the republican lever today or vote the republican ticket today and rest assured you are doing your duty to nation and state.

WELL DESERVED PROMOTION

Serving 45 years in one pastorate is permitted to but few clergymen. It not only points to the masterly and conscientious service that has been rendered during that period but to the appreciation that has prevailed on the part of the changing congregation.

During the years that Dr. Samuel H. Howe has been pastor of Park Congregational church he has been a great leader. His sermons have been an inspiration to large numbers and he has been a most successful head of the activities of a steadily growing parish.

In being promoted to pastor emeritus Dr. Howe richly deserves the honor that has been conferred upon him. Throughout his long pastorate he has not only been a valuable leader of his church but a conepicuous influence for good in the community. Not only the church but the community may well expect that that influence will continue to be shed for many years to come.

VOTE EARLY

In Connecticut it is expected that there will be a half million more votes cast than at any previous presidential election. There promises to be a smaller number who will stay at home. It has not been a campaign to create apathy. New voters in large numbers are ready to cast their ballots. Connecticut doesn't differ from other states in this respect. Throughout the country there will be an unusually large vote.

This means, if it means anything, that voters should make an effort to vote as early as they can. The polls being open at 6 a. m. will accommodate the early risers. They should take advantage of the opportunity and avoid interferring with those who cannot vote until later. In the same way throughout the day all voters should not only insist upon voting but upon doing it early.

By all means so arrange your time for voting that you will not be contributing to the congestion at hours when congestion can be anticipated, if it can be avoided.

Furthermore do not delay your duty so long that you will be found in line when the hour of six strikes in the afternoon. That is too late, it is next to neglecting to exercise your right to vote.

Good judgment calls for the keeping of the machines busy throughout the day. Make an effort to utilize the morning hours. Keep out of the rush by voting early. This applies to both the men and women.

This is the day for getting out the republican vote in full volume. All who are able should get or be gotten to the polls for the support of candidates who by their records and achievements insure sound government in both nation and state.

OUR SERVICE TO NICARAGUA

Nicaragua has held its election. It was held under the supervision of United States officials and from all accounts it passed off with a minimum of trouble and accomplished the choice of president quite in contrast to other times.

Getting the returns from the various states in Nicaragua is not as easy as compiling the results in this country. From such returns as have been received the indications are that the liberal candidate General Moncada has won by a substantial majority. That means, if the remainder of the returns do not change it, that he has won because the majority of the voters of that country desire it, not that he possessed the necessary military strength to overpower his adversary.

Nicaragua has been experiencing a decided change in the method of selecting a president. Where bullets were freely used in the past and where voters were afraid to go to the ballot box unless they cast their votes in a certain way, a free and open ballot box prevailed this month. This was because of the supervision that was so efficiently carried out under the direction of General Frank R. McCoy.

Nicaragua has been shown the advantage of fair and peaceful elections. Whether the demonstration will serve to establish a guide for the future remains to be seen but there cannot fail to be satisfaction on the part of this country that it was able to contribute to such a commendable result. If the people of that republic stop to compare the methods that formerly prevailed with those that were in operation this year, there ought to be no question as to what will be demanded in the future. The service of the United States to Nicaragua will be more and more appreciated as time goes on and better conditions prevail.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Pull the top lever for a straight republican vote.

Don't leave the voting to some one else, get out and do your own voting.

November can, if it will, be one of the really delightful months of the year.

There's work for the republican voters today. Go early to the polls and vote and help to get out as big a vote as possible.

Must we expect a large number of stowaway cases just because of the success of Clarence Terhune on the Graf Zeppelin?

The man on the corner says: It will not be long now before you will get the answer to the much debated question.

The perils of the highway are many and bob up before the unsuspecting from all directions calling for additional caution.

Those who pull the republican lever will cast a vote for the best possible government for the next four years at Washington and for a continuance of the successful administration of state affairs.

HE IS LIKE A GOLD FISH

"And tomorrow," gloated the widow across the divan toward McTavish, "is my birthday."

"Noo-o? You don't say now!" Mr. McTavish's long, bony face registered astonishment but hardly delight. "Humph, if it's your birthday, ma'am," he announced heavily, "something must be done about it." Yet twenty minutes later, as he entered an elevator and whirled from the widow's cosy little suite on the second to his own gloomy bachelor quarters on the sixth, he was still in doubt as to what that something was.

A birthday required a birthday gift; there was no gainsaying that. And a gift suitable for a woman! Was ever a bachelor with fifty-three years of inexperience behind him confronted by such a task? Had fate predestined that he encounter such a situation only to fall short in the eyes of his beloved and watch hated rivals outdistance him?

At 5 o'clock next evening Mr. McTavish left the bank where he acted as cashier and strode disconsolately down State street. He dared not return to his hotel empty handed and still he was no nearer the solution of his problem. A present for a lady? Mr. McTavish groaned.

And then, like manna from heaven came inspiration, as his eye caught a sign in the window of a pet shop: "Special sale. Bowl and two goldfish, $1.45."

Goldfish! Now, there was a gift for a lady. Mr. McTavish hurried into the store and gave his order. In a few moments the clerk returned with two unwieldly packages.

"The bowl," she snapped, dumping a great round something into Mr. Tavish's right hand and, "the fish," she repeated, thrusting what appeared to be a tin bucket, wrapped in brown paper, into his left. Mr. McTavish was tranped before he realized it.

"But I want them sent out," he protested helplessly.

"Sorry; we don't deliver."

So with the globe clutched to his chest with one hand and the fish bucket dangling limply from the other, Mr. McTavish gathered the shreds of his shattered dignity about him and stalked out. The street was crowded and the pavement icy-slick, and, jostled and elbowed by the rush-hour throngs, he barely managed to stagger up the "L" stairs and take his place in the long line before the ticket window.

"Hi, there, frozen face, you're losin' your moonshine!" A brazen urchin lurched against him from behind and sent his derby hat skidding down over one eye. Mr. McTavish lifted a frantic hand to adjust it when—slosh—splash—drip! The water from the leaky fish bucket came trickling down over his collar and coat. Crimson faced, the harased man flung his fare on the ticket counter and bolted out on the platform, followed by jeers and sizzles.

The advent of his train brought temporary relief and he found a seat beside a plump housewife, evidently absorbed in her newspaper. Mr. McTavish deposited the fish bucket between his feet and glanced over her shoulder at the headlines: "Bomb Throwers Sought by Police!"

The woman beside him quivered nervously, her rolling eyes took swift survey of the packed car, then fell to the door McTavish, and that bulging suspiciously round package on his knees. With the squeak of a frightened rabbit, the lady leaped to her feet and stumbled past him. "That man looks like an anarchist," she exclaimed in a voice that all could hear.

Safe in his rooms at last, the harassed lover undid the paper wrappings and was at last able to admire his purchases in peace. Now, except for the agonizing moments when he filled the bowl in his wash basin and almost lost a fish down the drain, all went well. The glittering fish swam to and fro in their glassy palace with an elegant nonchalance. McTavish stood there enraptured, his heart swelled, and, for a prideful moment, it almost seemed as if his soul must burst forth in song.

"My love is loke a gold, gold fish,
"Swish—swish—swish!"

Somehow, he couldn't think of a third line.

Half an hour later, the widow received her gift with a shriek of ecstasy.

"Oh, Mr. McTavish, how sweet of you," she cooed. "And to think you went to all that trouble for little me!"

"Trouble?" said Mr. McTavish, with at all."—Chicago News.

London's Historic Street Signs

LONDON, (AP)—The American visitor to England who walks along the streets with head held high and eyes looking up sees one of the most colorful and picturesque bits of English life.

Some few feet over his head, rank upon rank of them, the visitor spies the bright signs of inns and taverns spelling out in pictures rather than in letters the name of the house.

There's the Bear and the Lion, the Jolly Friar, the Duke of Cumberland, the Unicorn, the Three Coaches, the Boar's Head, the White Rabbit, and a wide variety of others.

The writer even had the privilege last summer, when covering the story of the total solar eclipse at Giggleswick, in the Pennine mountains of western Yorkshire, of seeing a tavern named Ye Olde Naked Man. And, true enough, there was a sign of an ancient, sans clothing, hanging from the inn.

Many of the London inn signs have artistic merit. American visitors to Fleet street usually notice the gilded metal cock outside a tavern, of which the original is said to have been carved by Grinling Gibbons. Another house in the neighborhood attracts notice for its representation of a gigantic episcopal head-dress.

There are many quaint signs in Chelsea, London's Bohemian quarter, such as that of a goat wearing a pair of Cromwellian boots, and The Man in the Moon.

Here and there in London the American visitor may feel a bot homesick on seeing an Indian chief outside an old-fashioned cigar store—or tobacconist's, as it is called here. The more usual sign today is a wooden tobacco roll suspended outside the shop, and sometimes a wooden Highlander has superseded the Indian chief.

Signs of all kinds were in general use by tradesmen of all classes in the days when the greater part of the population could not read or write. Some of these may still be found in odd corners of London, such as the three sugar loaves, indicating a grocer's shop, and the brass dog with his head in a pot, indicating a hardware store, or ironmonger's, as it is called here.

In the days before house numbers, which did not come into use in England until the 18th century, most houses were designated by signs. Sometimes a man indicated his own name in the sign, as, for instance, two cocks represented a man named Cox. Tradesmen indicated their shops by signs depicting the tools of their trade. Others honored the neighboring nobleman by putting his coat-of-arms or face on their signs.

In the 14th century there was a law in England forcing publicans, or the proprietors of saloons, to exhibit signs.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Nov. 5 — It's a tough proposition for any judge to undertake consideration of a case which involves technical scientific questions of fact rather than of law.

Lawyers and judges cannot very well be deeply learned in all the sciences as well as the law. Yet they are constantly being called upon in patent suits, for instance, to cram up in a matter of weeks or months on most abstruse scientific questions sufficiently to present an argument or to decide an issue of fact as to priority of patent rights between claimants.

Static in Court

No scientific development of recent times has been more prolific of terminology perplexing to a layman in science than radio. Vast sums of money are involved in paent suits as to radio's evolution and even the distinguished lawyers who compose the United States supreme court cannot escape locking horns at times with problems that involve for them a reasonable degree of understanding of the mysteries of alternating and direct currents, regenerative phenomena, heterodyning effect, high and low frequency circuits, and all the rest of it.

The so-called "feed back" circuit patent fight now before the supreme court is a case in point. Incidentally, also, it gave Charles Evans Hughes as counsel for one side an opportunity to exhibit in presenting his argument what seemed to the Bystander an amazing grasp of the general principles and theories of radio.

Hughes Explaining Radio

It was his role to defend a patent already granted, which is, no doubt, an advantage. His opponent had displayed before the bench on an easel a "hook-up" chart or a feed-back circuit in contending that the idea had originated not with the present patent holder but with the scientist from whom his client drew their rights. His explanation involved a technical description of just what a feed-back circuit is; what happens within the tube where it is produced and why it is a fundamental element in modern radio reception.

Chief Justice Taft and his colleagues listened with considerable evidence that it was very deep stuff even for them. At one point, counsel was asked from the bench, rather pathetically, if there was not some law question on which the issue could be decided. The lawyer thought not.

When Mr. Hughes arose he virtually ignored the chart and spoke from notes rather than manuscript. His argument dealt rather with the legal record on the case, which involves about a dozen big volumes of testimony, but whenever he had occasion to touch on radio technicalities he did it in an offhand way, without reference to his notes that implied he knew exactly what he was talking about.

At one point he volunteeded an explanation of "heterodyning effect," the words having occurred in an excerpt of testimony he was reading. He defined it in one sentence without using any of the accented technical terms of radio. Court attaches glanced about to catch each other's eyes and nod smilingly. Evidently they had expected it of Hughes.

As Lincoln Said

The following letter appeared in the New York Herald Tribune of Monday:

To the New York Herald Tribune:

Some six months ago, when Mr. Hoover was a candidate for the republican nomination for president, I suggested to him that it might be well to answer some of the silly lies then being put in circulation about him.

The following was his reply, which I do not believe he would object to me making public at this time. It might serve to prevent any one being misled by the same old yarns being again circulated at the last minute—an old political trick schemingly calculated to deceive well meaning voters the day before election:

"Washington, D. C., April 30, 1928

"Mr. Franklin Brooks,

"341 Madison avenue, New York.

"My dear Brooks:

"Perhaps you recollect an old quotation of Abraham Lincoln's to the effect that ten thousand angels would not have the time to deny the number of lies that have been put in circulation in the last two months. I certainly have not the time to bother with them.

"All these things have been answered time and again by various persons and the answers appear in innumerable public documents—so what's the use? It isn't worth while worrying about them.

"As for yourself, I was glad to hear from you again and I deeply appreciate your kind expressions. Yours faithfully,

HERBERT HOOVER

One very shrewd political leader in this city once told me that a statement, however false, given out the day before election when there was not time to answer it and prove it false, would change 10 per cent. of the votes on the following day.

I hope all last-minute statements of such a nature will prove boomerangs to those who stoop so low as to circulate them. More especially do I hope that such a thing will not occur in the closing days of the present campaign.

YOUR HEALTH

DIPHTHERIA THE SCOURGE OF CHILDHOOD

By William H. Slaughter, M. D., Cleveland, Ohio.

Diphtheria is pre-eminently a disease of young children, although infant and adult are not entirely free from attack. In a study of diphtheria statistics it is found that the children of the age group between one year and ten years contribute most largely to the number of cases of the disease and to the deaths from it.

Notwithstanding the fact that science has placed diphtheria antitoxin (perhaps the most effective curative agent known in medicine) in the hands of physicians to combat diphtheria, the disease continues to exact its toll in deaths. In the registration area of the United States the death rate from diphtheria per 100,000 population was 43 in 1900 and 15.5 in 1917. According to McCollom, a very high authority on diphtheria in the Boston City hospital, the death rate in 1892 and 1893 was nearly 50 per cent. Following the introduction of diphtheria antitoxin, the death rate from 1895 to 1912 has been below 15 per cent., and in 6,030 cases of more recent date the death rate was 7.8 per cent.

The continued ravages of the disease may be ascribed to three things: First, the physician is not called early enough, and sometimes is not called at all. Secondly, the physician may mistake the disease at first for some milder affection, and thus delay in administering the only known remedy for the cure of the disease, namely, diphtheria antitoxin. To yield its maximum results, antitoxin must not only be given early in the attack, but must be given in full dosage. Thirdly, a large part of the population, especially children, is susceptible to diphtheria.

To prevent diphtheria, however, is an easier and surer method to control it than to attempt to cure it. In no other disease is the old adage "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure" more applicable, save possibly in vaccination for smallpox.

Not all children exposed to diphtheria will contract the disease. Some children are susceptible, the younger ones especially, while others are non-susceptible. By the use of the Schick test, it is now possible to determine whether or not a child is susceptible. This test is performed by having a physician inject a few drops of the test solution with a fine needle into the skin of the arm. The test is harmless and simple, and the injection causes no more discomfort than the prick of a pin. If a red spot develops at the point of injection in a day or two, the child is susceptible and is likely to get diphtheria if exposed to it. If a red spot does not appear, the child is non-susceptible and safe from an attack.

It has been found that those who are susceptible to diphtheria may be rendered immune by three hypodermic injections of toxin-antitoxin mixture, given by the physician at weekly intervals. This procedure confers immunity in about 90 per cent. of susceptible individuals, and immunity thus conferred may be lasting during the period of the child's greatest susceptibility, or at least for several years.

The report of the American Public Health association on the control of communicable disease, which report is approved and accepted by the United States public health service, recommends "active immunization of all children by the end of the first year without prior Schick testing," "active immunization of school children with or without prior use of the Schick test."

The active immunization of children with toxin-antitoxin mixture, as above outlined, is the main sheet anchor in the preservation of child life against the ravages of diphtheria.

The polls in Norwich will be open in all districts today from 6 a. m. to 6 p. m.

DECLINES TO ACCEPT CONTINUANCE BY COURT

William Jakem, 36, of 2 Valley street refused to accept a continuance of six months in his case in the city court Monday morning where he was presented on the charge of distributing religious literature without having a peddlers license. Judge Arthur F. Libby then fined him $10 and an appeal to the common pleas court was taken by his counsel, Charles L. Stewart.

It is understood the case will serve as a test of Jakem's contention that a section of the constitution of the United States referring to religious freedom gives him the right to distribute such literature without applying for a peddler's license.

The polls in Norwich will be open in all districts today from 6 a. m. to 6 p. m.

COUNCIL VOTES APPROVAL OF RATES FOR MILK DEALERS LICENSES

Gennaro Ladone was elected a member of the supernumerary police force, the milk license fee was increased from 50 cents a year to $2 a year, two claims were ordered paid, and monthly reports and bills were received and approved at the November meeting of the court of common council, Monday evening at the council chamber. Mayor Lee Roy Robbins called the council to order at 8:20 o'clock, with all members present. The minutes of the previous meeting were accepted without reading, according to custom.

City Clerk Weston C. Pullen read certificates of publication on the recent change in the traffic ordinances and of the hearing on the milk ordinance changing the annual license fee from 50 cents to $2. Mayor Robbins announced that he had received a communication from George L. Cosgrave and stated that it would be placed on file for the reference of the council members.

Action On Claims

One claim was received. It was from John Jordan asking an abatement of $20.63 in taxes. Mr. Jordan stated in his claim that in October, 1927, he gave the city assessors his tax list which included $750 for goods in his grocery store. He sold the store and went out of business shortly afterwards. He claims he shouldn't be taxed the $20.63 for the goods, as he did not have them, owing to the fact that he went out of business last December. The claim was referred to the claims committee and corporation counsel.

Claims were ordered paid as follows: $125 to Edwin W. Higgins, attorney for Harriet C. Potter, in settlement of claim for injury from a fall sustained by her on Carter avenue, on Aug. 9, 1928.

$530 to Brown & James, attorneys for Disco Bros., in settlement of claims arising out of the flowing of water from Main street, then under repair, into the cellar of Disco Bros., on Aug. 14, 1927, for which Disco Bros. brought a suit claiming $2,500 damages. The suit is to be withdrawn.

The assessment of sewer benefits on Maple street, payable July 15, 1925, against Julia E. Hafner, for $112.50 was reduced to $80, it appearing that the difference between $112.50 and $80 was an excessive assessment, and the mayor was authorized to discharge the lien upon her payment of $80.

Gennaro Ladone was then appointed a member of the supernumerary police force after which Mayor Robbins declared the hearing on the milk license fee open. There was no one who wished to be heard, and after the hearing had been closed, the council adopted the new fee rate, $2.

The police committee reported that they had granted two petitions for electric lights, one on Peck street extension and the other on Hammond avenue.

On recommendation of the police committee, Charles E. Ellis, superintendent of the almshouse was appointed a special city constable.

Invitation For Armistice Sunday

The council accepted an invitation from Rev. A. N. Foster, chairman of the local Armistice day committee, to attend the Armistice day celebration Sunday afternoon at the Broadway theatre.

Mayor Robbins called the attention of the council to the fact that Tuesday is election day and also to the fact that, as the result of communications between him and the board of gas and electric commissioners, he has called a special city meeting for Thursday evening, in regard to the new schedule of electric rates. The mayor requested the members of the council to attend the meeting.

The quarterly audit of the accounts of the cashier of the water department, the quarterly report of the chief of police, the monthly report of the street commissioner and the monthly report of the city treasurer, were received and accepted. Department bills were approved as follows: Park department, $716.92; public works department, $20,564.86; recreation commission, $54.55; cemetery department, $868.88; fire department, $7,477.66; police department, $7,120.08; street lights, $3,041.50; police pension fund, $1,500; gas and electric department, $91,453.54; water department, $7,078.16; Deep River reservoir, $1,225.90; finance department, $86,501.83; firemen's pension fund, $1,500.

The council adjourned about 9 o'clock.

ENTHUSIASTIC ORGANIZATION BY NORWICH INN BUILDERS

Enthusiasm ran high at the first meeting of the team captains of the Norwich Inn Builders Limited, at campaign headquarters Monday night when the nine captains made their selection of team workers from lists of available material that includes many of the best men and women of Norwich. From this time forth until the end of the money raising campaign, Norwich Inn Builders will assume duties and titles that will make them subject to the scrutiny of walking delegates in all the building trades for they are to become all manner of artisans and mechanics working under the hard and fast rules of the union subject to the stern control of general foremen, foremen and assistant foremen, who will see that the job is done and no workman loafs on the job on pain of being docked.

As the Norwich Builders Limited is now constituted, William G. Park is the architect, without the rake off that architects are careful to receive. Arthur M. Brown is the general contractor, and will never supervise a better structure nor one more welcome to Norwich business interests than the Norwich Inn. Joseph C. Worth, as construction superintendent, will be the hard boss who sits in the unenviable position of being responsible for a job to be done within the term of the contract period. But Joe always delivers the goods so his job is safe.

He has a strong force to supplement his efforts in the person of three general foremen, F. Russell Smith of Union 99, T. N. T., Charles W. Taggart of Union 23, I. W. W. and Ernest O. Rodier, Union 13, A. F. of L. These three hold the whip over a group of high grade foremen heading the various tradesmen working under their direction. These include Henry Lyon of the plasterers, S. B. Palmer of the electricians, Earl Mathewson, excavators; Harold Robbins, plumbers; C. E. Fitch, painters, Clifford Nay, bricklayers; H. D. Johnson, masons; H. D. Larrabee, carpenters and Arthur Peale, steel workers.

This organization has agreed to work strictly union hours, with double pay for overtime and triple pay for holidays and Sunday work. Monday night they spent several profitable hours running up a bill for overtime while they selected the high grade workmen they are hiring for some of the heavy work of the building season. Already complete units of skilled workers are in the process of formation so that the complete organization will be ready to begin the actual process of excavation and construction within the next two weeks. Once started, the completion of the financial structure will go forward to a successful finish. Nothing else is within the pale of possibility with the masterly corps of workmen tied in to the enterprise.

There is always work for the technical experts, so Chief Engineer R. W. Perkins is stepping into the breach with an engineering corps that for once outrivals his high grade organization in the Eastern Connecticut Power company. One does not wonder at this when we find his associates include such financial engineers and campaign experts as Arthur M. Brown, N. A. Gibbs, C. Royce Ross, Nelson J. Ayling and Aurin T. Payson. They will have the particular job of laying the financial groundwork in the shape of large subscriptions. Chief Perkins and his corps plan to be early on the job so there may be no delay in excavation or construction when the union laborers are ready to start.

WILL BE SPEAKER TO NORWICH BUSINESS MEN

Colvin B. Brown, manager of the commercial organization department of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, who is to be the speaker before the Norwich Rotary club on Wednesday, is to arrive in this city Tuesday as the guest of the chamber of commerce and at noon will address a meeting of the directors of the chamber.

Mr. Brown is one of the foremost authorities of the country on cooperation in industrial and commercial activities. His subject before the Rotary club will be Your City and Your Business, an exposition of the manner in which intereats of the individual business man are involved in the development of the community in which he lives and the industry in which he is engaged and affected by the collective action of the commercial groups represented by the chamber of commerce and the trade association.

Mr. Brown in his official capacity travels an average of 50,000 miles annually, visiting all sections of the country, and is consulted by executive officers of commercial organizations in the largest cities, and the smallest towns and in every variety of industry.

As a result of his broad observation he expresses the conviction that the commercial organization and trade association have hardly passed beyond the formative stage and that the cooperative method of meeting and solving the larger problems of business is on the threshold of marked expansion and development. This, he believes, is due to the widening radius of activity which extends beyond the limitations of the individual business man or even the single industry.

UZCUDUN BEATS VON PORAT IN BLOODY TEN ROUND BATTLE

MADISON SQUARE GARDEN, New York, Nov. 5—(AP)—Otto Von Porat deadly punching Norwegian heavyweight who now calls Chicago home, came back to the ring where he made his professional debut tonight and lost a vicious bloody ten round battle to Paulino Uzcudun, squat Spaniard from the Basque country.

Twice, in the first and fifth rounds, the lanky Norwegian was nailed with left and right hooks to the chin that floored him for counts of seven. Both times Otto got up while the 15,000 spectators cheered.

Each time, as he wavered under Uzcudun's swarming wild-swinging attack, it seemed as though the cattle was over, but at the end of the match, his face a smear of blood, it was Von Porat who was fighting the hardest, punching the cleanest, with Paulino wavering under a storm of right hand punches that threatened to tear his concrete chin apart.

Von Porat, a marvel of gameness, won the crowd in the very first round when he ran afoul of an overhand right that carried every ounce of Paulino's 198 pounds behind it. The Norwegian dropped and rose in a daze at the count of seven to endure a savage attack that smashed about his head and body until the bell saved him.

Again in the fifth round, when the Norwegian appeared about to swing the tide of battle his way with short, crushing right hand punches that smeared Paulino's face with blood, he ran into another left hook and went down for another count of seven.

It took the Norwegian until the last round to recuperate from that blow. Then he opened up with the right hand punches that had won him a dozen fights in the middle west. Paulino, never hurt before in a New York ring, wavered under the attack, tried to clinch, and then took the full fury of Otto's belting power for at least a half round. He refused to go down but his legs did most peculiar things in holding him up.

Although the crowd booed the decision, hoping that Von Porat might gain a draw, the Associated Press score card gave the Norwegian only the fourth, and tenth sessions. Paulino won the eight other rounds by wide margins, on Porat scaled 191 1-2 pounds and Uzcudun 198.

Arthur DeKuh, giant New York Italian, made short work of "Tiny" Roebuck, Choctaw Indian from Kansas City, in a ten round semi-final. DeKuh knocked the Haskell Institute football star down once for a count of nine and then finished him in two minutes, 46 seconds of the first round. A short right hook to the chin was the final wallop. DeKuh weighed 215, Roebuck 243.

Con O'Kelley, straight from Ireland, displayed astonishing boxing ability for a 194 pounder in his American debut with Al Friedman, Boston heavyweight winning an easy ten round decision. O'Kelley, a bull-necked Irishman, boxed with the speed and precision of a lightweight, handed Friedman a terrific lacing, but could not put him down. Friedman weighed 180 1-2.

Jack Shaw, of Union City, N. J., won a four-round decision over Marco Polo, of Pittsburgh, in a heavyweight festival at Madison Square Garden tonight. Shaw was down twice for short counts in the first round but floored Polo for counts of two and eight in the third. Polo weighed 189 1-4, Shaw 194 1-2.

Marvin Schecter, 171 1-2, of Boston, fought a four-round draw with Bill Bronze, 175 3-4, of New York and Jack Saunders, 196 1-2, of New York, knocked out Joe Jeanette, 196 pound Negro, of Hot Springs, Ark., in the second round.

NEBO WINS FROM DUNDEE IN ABBREVIATED BOUT

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 5—(AP)—Pete Nebo, Seminole Indian from Florida, won in three rounds from Mike Dundee, Rock Island, Ill., tonight when the referee stopped the fight, scheduled for 10 rounds.

In the third round Dundee received a cut over the eye and a cut on the mouth. His seconds were unable to stop the flow of blood during the intermission and fearing that Dundee might be injured seriously if he continued, the referee stopped the bout and awarded Nebo the decision.

Each weighed 130.

Babe McCorgary, Oklahoma, 165 knocked out Theodore (Kid) Snowden, Oxford, Pa., 162, in the first round of another ten rounder.

During recent months Snowden had scored 23 knockouts.

FOOTBALL FANS RUIN LOS ANGELES HOTEL

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 5.—(AP)—Officers of the Biltmore hotel here said today that reverby football fans in the rooms of that hostelry after the Stanford- University of Southern California gridiron battle Saturday resulted in thousands of dollars in damage.

Expensive arm chairs, divans and other furniture were broken and tossed out the windows. Tapestries and curtains were cut and torn from their hangings. Mirrors were smashed, plants and shrubbery uprooted and strewn about and empty bottles and paper bags filled with water were hurled around in an all-night carousal, according to the hotel managers.

The Biltmore is one of the largest hotels in the city. No arrests have been reported.

YALE SQUAD DUE FOR STIFF WORK THIS WEEK

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 5.—(AP)—Not satisfied with the work of his Yale team against Dartmouth, Coach Stevens said today that he would hold stiff practice sessions throughout the week in preparation for Maryland. All of the Blue squad reported today and those who did not get into the contest against the Green, were put through a hard scrimmage that lasted for 30 minutes.

Defects that cropped out in the play against Dartmouth were pointed out by Stevens after which the squad was broken up into groups and further talks were given by the coaches. Three scrimmages are carded for the week the first of which will be held tomorrow against the freshmen. The same second string backfield that proved more than a match for Dartmouth will likely take the field against Maryland, Stevens said.

HARVARD IN PERFECT SHAPE FOR PENN GAME

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 5.—(AP)—Harvard started its drive for next Saturday's Pennsylvania game today, with every regular in perfect physical shape and, what pleased the coaching staff even more, a dozen capable replacements who were thoroughly tested in the Lehigh game.

Head Coach Arnold Horween who returned here this morning from Chicago, where he scouted Pennsylvania Saturday, gave the varsity squad a long workout this afternoon and laid great stress on long forward passes. He had Dave Guarnaccia hurling 20 and 30 yard aerials in a prolonged offensive drill.

RUTH UNRECOGNIZED AS HE TAKES OUT LICENSE

NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—(AP)—A big fellow, whose name was on every sport fans' lips three short weeks ago lined up unrecognized today at the license window of the city clerk. When it came to his turn to receive a resident hunting and fishing license he gave his name as "George Herman Ruth."

He said he was six feet two inches tall and weighed 228 pounds and hurried away before he said where he plans to hunt and fish. On his own initiative, City Clerk Michael J. Cruse added, "ball player" to the description.

Delgada Beats Acceta

FALL RIVER, Mass., Nov. 5—(AP)—In the eight round feature bout of a boxing card here tonight, Al Delgada, New York welterweight, won a decision over Joe Acceta of Providence. In the semi-final six round bout Johnny Wilson, New Bedford, won a decision over Battling Brousseau of Fall River.

In the six round preliminaries, Jimmie Picardi, Boston won from Tiny Burbio of Providence, R. I.; Walter Oliver of Fall River won from the Patent Leather Kid of New Bedford, and Sailor Joe Gibbs, Fall River won on a technical knockout over Battling Keeler of Fall River, in the first round.

Britton Signed for Bout

BOSTON, Nov. 5—(AP)—The newly organized Sharkey A. A., recently granted a charter to conduct boxing shows in Boston, today announced it had signed Larry Brignolia, Cambridge welterweight, and the veteran Jack Britton for a ten round feature bout in Mechanics building on November 14.

AGGIES HAMPERED BY LOSS OF GROAT

(Special to The Bulletin.)

STORRS, Nov. 6.—Due to the fact that the members of the Connecticut Aggie football squad will have a day off tomorrow on account of the national election, Head Coach Sumner A. Dole called a regular drill session this afternoon for the first time on a Monday since the college has been entered in collegiate competition this fall. The purpose of the early practice session is to get the men in condition in as many days as possible for the objective New Hampshire university contest at Durham next Saturday.

Coach Dole worked with the backs this afternoon in drilling the men passes and interference while Assistant Coach Paul E. Bitgood drilled the linemen on blocking and tackling. Each week it has been the policy of the Nutmeg coaching staff to give some attention to the work of the linemen who have been one of the greatest factors in the success of the varsity to date this year. The varsity line has been able to function as one unit and with great effectiveness due mostly to the fact that there are five seniors centered in the middle of the forward wall. They are Knaut center, Gilman and Colacurcio guards, and Captain Savera and Wilson, tackles. All these men have been going at a great pace all season and their loss next year will be keenly felt.

The Connecticut Aggies to date have gone through five contests thout a clean slate and are now holding a record of not being scored upon by any opponent. Last Saturday they easily downed the Coast Guard Academy eleven by a score of 20-0. In the five games two of which were scoreless ties, the Nutmeggers scored 59 points.

The hardest blow to fall upon the Connecticut Aggies thus far this season is the loss of Robert Groat of Niles, Michigan, to the team as a result of a sprained back that he got in the Coast Guard game. Groat, while with the Blue and White in the past two years was the fastest man on the squad and one of the best and shiftiest ball carriers to wear a Nutmeg uniform. His loss will be keenly felt since the Nutmeg coaches were banking on him for the next three games on the schedule with New Hampshire, Rhode Island and Boston College. The Nutmeg back is now in the college infirmary where a cast is being placed on his back to cure a fractured transverse process of the lumbar vertebra.

The polls in Norwich will be open in all districts today from 6 a. m. to 6 p. m.

HIGH SCHOOL SPORTS

Hartford High's visit Saturday will be is first since 1917.

Chapman Tech can be given one of those "moral" victories in its 6-6 tilt with Stonington Saturday. The previous Saturday Stonington trounced Chapman 20 to 0.

Of the three games played in Eastern Connecticut last Saturday two were distinct upsets. Stonington was supposed to have it easy with Chapman Tech and so was the Academy with Windham. Results—Stonington 6, Chapman 6; Academy 6, Windham 7. Hartford High beat Bulkeley in New London in the other game as was expected but Hartford's margin was not figured to have been as narrow as 14 to 0.

3,500 fans saw Naugatuck beat Torrington last Saturday.

The grid sport now starts down the home stretch and it won't be long thereafter before we have signs of the basketball season, it's going to be quite a hectic season, from most reports.

Demons Win

The Demons defeated Mathew's All Stars at the Academy campus Monday afternoon, 26 to 0. Agnew and Mullen made touchdowns by line plunges, Geer scored after receiving a long pass from Mullen, while Wetherbee intercepted a pass and raced 40 yards for a touchdown. The lineup for winners was Disco and Wetherbee ends; Agnew and Rip tackles; D Shields and W. Geer, guards; Schwartz, center; J. Shields, quarterback; Lavarge, left halfback; Mullen, right halfback; F. Geer, fullback.

Hanson To Coach Syracuse.

Both appointments are expected to be ratified by the athletic governing board at a meeting on November 13.

Broadway Wins.

The Broadway eleven defeated the Greeneville school team Monday afternoon, 6 to 0, in a fast game at Chelsea parade. The stars for the winners were Lambert, Rosenberg, Sturvour, Niece. Rosenberg played a nice defensive game making many tackles. Neice made the touchdown for the winners.

College Soccer.

VOLUNTOWN

SALE OF BRIGGS PROPERTY KEEPS TOWN CLERK BUSY

The property of the Briggs Mfg. company which had not been sold previously by private sale, was put up at auction on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of last week. This property included the four mills, which have been idle for the past three years a number of mill tenements and several parcels of land. A large number of interested parties were in town as prospective purchasers and many as interested spectators.

The No. 1 mill known as Beachdale and its splendid water privilege was sold to Mrs. Stanton and Shaw of Glasgo, as was also the No. 4 or Stone Mill. Nos. 2 and 3 mills were sold to Norwich parties. It is hoped by the townspeople that the new owners will be able to put the plants in operation at an early date. The sale of tenements and other property of the company drew a large share of interest. A number of local people purchased homes. Other homes were bought by parties from Uxbridge, Mass., Westerly and Greenwood, R. I., Norwich, Taftville, Jewett City Glasgow and Canterbury, Conn. Some of the properties have been purchased as an investment and others have been purchased as homes and it is expected that the new owners will become residents. So the old order changeth. And while all regret the passing out of the old company which made Voluntown a thriving village for many years all welcome the new owners and hope their coming will lead to a still brighter future.

Town Clerk Howard E. James has been busy recently recording deeds for property that has changed hands.

William Liberty of Jewett City has moved into his new home on Main street, recently purchased from the Briges Mfg. Co.

Today is election day. Voters are expected to vote early. Walter E. Tanner has been appointed Moderator and George A. McGuire checker. On the voting list there are 247 electors and it is expected that most of them will be on hand. The polls will be open from 9 a. m. until 5 p. m.

Thursday, Nov. 1, All Saints' day, there was mass at St. Thomas' church at 5:30 a. m. and Friday, Nov. 2, All Souls' day masses for deceased members of the parish were at 5:30 a. m. and 8 a. m. by Rev. Fr. John J. Carey.

A Hallowe'en dance and masquerade was held in Union hall, which was prettily decorated. Morey's orchestra of Jewett City furnished music.

Work is progressing rapidly on the new store building being erected on Union square by Jeremiah Magrey of Jewett City.

Much of the equipment of the local mills, recently owned by the Briggs Mfg. Co., is being taken away by parties who purchased the same at last week's auction.

Miss Irene M. Bitgood, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Bitgood of this village and Leo Robinson of Jewett City, were married Saturday by the Rev. Goodenough at the Congregational parsonage in Jewett City. They were attended by Mr. and Mrs. Otis Littlefield of New London.

DUWELLS TO STAGE AMATEURS NOV. 23

After a lapse of nearly two months, during which the Duwells confined their efforts to other fields of athletic endeavor, preparations were begun last night by the local club for the opening of the amateur boxing season. This action was taken following the receipt of word from A. A. U. headquarters that the body would continue to sanction shows as presented by the Norwich organization.

According to the sanction as received yesterday, the Duwells will be permitted to conduct shows on or after November 23. With the receipt of the necessary permission, the boxing committee of the Duwell club began to look about Monday for a place to conduct the winter bouts and should a site be secured within the next few days, the opening show will be presented on Friday night, November 23. An effort is being made to secure the state armory, the same site as was used a year ago. The armory is about the only available place in the city where the Duwells can keep within their policy of staging a card of ten bouts and at the same time limit the price to the reach of the average boxing fan. Last winter, at the armory, seats to accommodate between 1200 and 1500 fans were set up and on each occasion every available bit of space was taken.

Although nothing definite had been decided as to the talent that will be selected for the opening bill of the indoor season, it is expected that at least one prominent out of state club will be brought in to compete with the boys of Norwich and vicinity. Entry blanks for the opening show will be printed and distributed within the next few days. As in the past only boxers registered or eligible to be registered with the A. A. U. will be allowed to compete in the bouts.

Since the Conn. association of the A. A. U. was suspended early last spring, following charges of professionalism the local club has been the only one in the state, allowed to conduct amateur boxing under the sanction of the national body.

MANY TRADES EXPECTED AT LEAGUE MEETINGS TO BE HELD IN DECEMBER

By Brian Bell
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK, Nov. 5—(AP)—Baseball clubs owners of the National league will play a one-night stand at their annual meeting this year. The presidents and other officials will meet in New York, Tuesday, December 11 and hop off the next day at noon for Chicago to attend the joint meeting of the National and American leagues Thursday.

At both National and American league meetings, relations with the minors will be discussed fully. The major leaguers expect to have a proposal from the minors for action on the question of the draft.

The minors leagues meet at Toronto the week before the majors assemble and they will find an emphatic request from the majors that some plan be presented about which an argument can be built.

At both the National league gathering in New York and that of the American league at Chicago, trades of players seem likely, with more activity indicated in the eastern than the western mart.

Presidents William L. Veeck, of Chicago and Emil E. Fuchs of Boston, may formally announce the trade many observers believe has been made by which Rogers Hornsby will return to the west.

President Samuel Breadon may have something to say about the managerial status of the Cardinals. The St. Louis president has paid no attention to stories that he was about to change managers by promoting Frank Snyder, who won a pennant for the Houston Cardinals in the absence of a denial from St. Louis the prospective deposing of Bill McKechnie has been given serious credence.

The National League champions are regarded as committed to a wholesale revision of the infield. Only Jim Bottomley remains a fixture. Frankie Frisch is expected to move over to play third base with the shortstop and second base assignments going to Gelbert and Selph, outstanding stars on the minors this year.

Gelbert, who will succeed Rabbit Maranville at short, is the athletic son of an athletic father. Gelbert, Sr., was a magic name at the University of Pennsylvania and his son has followed in his father's footsteps. With Rochester the youthful Gelbert, who will be the youngest major league infielder, hit for many extra bases and fielded sensationally.

Selph did not compile a .300 batting average for Houston in the Texas league but his second base play was of a high order and he comes to the Cardinals stamped as one of the most aggressive performers in the business.

The Cardinals, smarting yet under their defeat in the world series in four straight games, may also shake up the outfield to make a place for Orsatti and if the injured Roettger is himself again he may get a place.

Pittsburgh, the other member of the lodge of those who have been defeated with a minimum of effort by the New York Yanks, may send its bargainers to the meeting in a trading humor.

The Braves and the Phillies will be glad to acquire additional talent but will have difficulty in finding the other half of the other two necessary to make a trade.

After a warning from Commissioner Landis against tampering with players the club owners may adopt a baseball equivalent of the golf rule that a ball is not lost until it stops rolling. The commissioner is understood to have been plain spoken in decreeing that the rules must be rigidly followed in regard to baseball property rights.

HANOVER

Mr. and Mrs. William G. Park attended a special musical entertainment at Hartford on a recent Sunday.

The Hanover church was represented at the semi-annual meeting of the Congregational churches and ministers of New London county at Stonington borough by the pastor and Mrs. Myron Allen and Mrs. Henry B. Hazen as delegates. Others present were Mrs. Stone, Misses Caroline and Jennie Gallup, Miss Margaret Eadie, Mrs. Frank Crombie, and Mrs. Roger C. Peck.

Mrs. William G. Park and Miss Helen Eadie spent part of last week in Boston.

Mrs. Frank Still, who returned from Backus hospital, Norwich, early last week, is improving very satisfactorily.

The open meeting of the League of Women Voters held at the parish house Monday evening was an unusually interesting one, presenting a rare treat to the members and guests.

The Y. P. S. C. E. of the Congregational church gave a Hallowe'en social in the vestry which was greatly enjoyed.

Miss Margaret Tucker of Boston is visiting at the home of her father, J. C. Tucker.

Francis McShane of the Newport Training school, who has been visiting home during his furlough of ten days, has returned to his ship in New York.

Harlan Harrison underwent a minor operation recently and has been quite ill but is rapidly recovering. Annie Zemeida has been kept from school for a number of days on account of dental trouble.

The Daughters of the Covenant met with Miss Helen Eadie Friday evening.

Mrs. Dwight C. Stone entertained the Northfield club at the parsonage by-the-Pines recently at which time the club heard a very illuminating address given by George S. Palmer of New London.

Burgess Bedtime Story

Rusty Despairs.

'Tis those alone who greatly dare
Who ne'er give way to grim despair.
—Old Mother Nature.

Rusty the Fox Squirrel was in a tight place. Rusty had started on a long journey. He had left the Green Forest, for there were no nuts there. He had headed south, for he intended to keep on going until he should reach a place where there was food for a hungry squirrel—food enough to last him all winter. Now, a long journey means adventure, Rusty had found this out at once. Before he was across the Green Meadows the sharp eyes of Redtail the Hawk had discovered him and Rusty had been obliged to seek safety among some bushes along a fence that crossed the Green Meadows just there.

Those bushes had saved Rusty from Redtail. But now Rusty didn't know what to do next. He couldn't see Redtail, for the latter had flown away, but he felt certain that Redtail was sitting where those wonderful eyes of his could keep watch of the Green Meadows and that old fence. To reach the nearest woodland, Rusty would have to cross some open meadow. There was no way out of it. And that was going to be very risky. If he waited until night, Hooty the Owl might discover him. Rusty felt that he was in a tight place.

Rusty climbed up on a fence-post in order that he might see better. He had been there only a moment or two when he discovered a hunter coming upon along the fence. He was on the ground, working back and forth through the bushes. Who do you think that hunter was? It was Reddy Fox. Rusty's heart seemed to give an extra flop when he discovered that. Now he was in a tight place and that tight place was becoming tighter. There was a little tree growing beside the fence just a little way beyond. In that tree he would be safe enough from Reddy. But supposing Redtail should discover him up in that little tree! Rusty shivered when he thought of that.

Rusty ran along the fence to the little tree. Then he sat on a fence-post close by the little tree to wait. Perhaps Reddy Fox might not discover him after all. Nearer and nearer came Reddy. He sniffed here and he sniffed there among the bushes along the old fence. Sometimes he would trot a short distance without sniffing.

"I hope he'll do that when he reaches the place where I was," thought Rusty.

But Reddy didn't. Rusty saw him stop abruptly and then begin to sniff around with great interest. Once he ran out on the Green Meadows a little way with his nose to the ground. He was taking the back track of Rusty. But he soon discovered that it was a back track and once more hastened over to the fence. So it was that in a moment or two he discovered Rusty sitting on the top of that fence-post close to the little tree.

Reddy grinned and came hurrying over to the foot of that post. Rusty didn't wait for him to get there before climbing up in that little tree. "My, my, see who's here!" exclaimed Reddy, in a very pleased tone of voice. "What are you doing so far from the Green Forest?"

To this Rusty made no reply. He merely glared down at Reddy. Reddy seemed to be very pleased.

"Won't you come down and shake hands?" said Reddy, and chuckled. "My, my, how fine you look! I don't know when I have been so glad to see any one. I never have been very well acquainted with you, Rusty, but I feel it in my bones that we are going to become better acquainted very shortly."

Rusty threw a hasty glance over his shoulder. There was a spot in the sky. It was Redtail the Hawk!

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Palace Theatre

"The Singing Fool," Al Jolson's second special Warner Bros.' picture, is drawing capacity houses at the Broadway theatre where it closes its engagement Saturday next.

"The Jazz Singer" seemed the last word in Jolsonian magic, but it is the consensus of opinion that this later story of the loves and losses of a singing waiter is even more universally appealing.

The glamor of the life of Big Town cabarets and theatres is created with startling naturalness. The photography is a triumph for that veteran of the camera, Byron Haskin, and Lloyd Bacon, son of the famous author and star of "Lightnin'" has outdone even himself, in his direction. If "one touch of nature makes the whole world kin," that touch is surely found in the simple, touching story of "The Singing Fool."

No heart story could be more compelling. Al is seen first as a singing waiter, in love with a heartless entertainer, whom he helps to fame by selling songs he has dedicated to her and getting her to introduce them. The two marry. She later deserts him and it is only when their little boy is at the point of death, that they meet again.

The tears are well balanced by the smiles, however, and peace comes at last to the troubled soul of the singing fool, in the love of another woman, a cigarette girl at the cabaret.

The cast includes Betty Bronson, Josephine Dunn, Ed Martindel, Arthur Housman, Reed Howes, David Lee and Robert Emmett O'Connor. Leslie S. Barrows did the directing.

The polls in Norwich will be open in all districts today from 6 a. m. to 6 p. m.

(Special to The Bulletin)

JEWETT CITY, Nov. 5—The Ashland Cotton company's mill whistle blew an alarm at 7:15 o'clock this evening for a fire in the paint shop of the company. An alarm was later run in from the telephone office, bringing out the hose company, which laid a line of hose in addition to that used by the Ashland employees. The cause of the fire is unknown, but it is believed that the blaze started in one corner of the building, evidently from spontaneous combustion. The building is of brick, and the damage was to the contents, including paint and about 1,000 rolls of wall paper. The damage is covered by insurance.

Deprived of Full Credit

All day Monday Rev. John J. McCabe was receiving congratulations from residents of the borough and out of town friends for the success of Sunday's ceremonies. An omitted line in The Bulletin's notice of the day seemed to deprive the hard working pastor of St. Mary's parish of some of the credit due him. The item should have read: "To Rev. J. J. McCabe, who was a curate here when Rev. J. H. Fitzmaurice was pastor, and then 14 years ago was appointed pastor of the parish, is due the credit of rebuilding the school and rebuilding the convent."

MASEL VOSE CHAPMAN DEAD— EXPERT DAHLIA GROWER

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WESTERLY, R. I., Nov. 5—Mrs. Mabel Vose Chapman, 61, well-known Westerly dahlia grower and for the past few years a floral decorator at Watch Hill summer places, died at 12:15 Monday afternoon at the home of her mother, Mrs. Susan Vose, 10 Chester avenue. Her death followed an illness extending over a period of time which compelled her to cease active work at the beginning of the past summer.

Mrs. Chapman was born in Westerly the daughter of Susan Thompson and the late Horace Vose and during her father's life was greatly interested in horses and cattle. She attended the public schools and was graduated from the Westerly high school, class of 1896. Soon after graduation she was united in marriage with a classmate, Otis P. Chapman, Jr., whose death occurred a number of years ago. During the declining health of her husband she began a small garden on Quarry Hill which later developed into "Hillcrest Gardens" an exceptionally beautiful spot devoted to the growing of dahlias. She attended the First Baptist church, Westerly.

Besides her mother, Mrs. Susan Vose, she is survived by an older brother Charles Vose, both residing at 10 Chester avenue.

POLICE TO HAVE GAS GUN ALSO UP TO DATE RIOT GUN

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, Nov. 5—Brigands should give Westerly a wide berth, for the Westerly town council in November session Monday voted to instruct the police committee of the council to purchase nearly $150 worth of up-to-date firearms equipment for Chief of Westerly Police Thomas E. Brown. The equipment of Savage firearms will consist of a riot gun with 20 inch barrel of .12 gauge with brass shells with a load of six or 7 shot with a spread of 15 feet at 100 yards, of type similar to that used by the department of Rhode Island state police. The equipment includes a modern gas gun similar to a pistol with large bore with six shells which will shoot a liquid compound that immediately becomes a gas and will put out of commission for two hours a man in the room where it is fired.

A steel protection booth at a cost of $375 is to be placed on the sidewalk in Dixon square for the protection of the police officer on duty there in stormy weather and to contain the control for the signal traffic light and police telephone. The booth is to be 7 feet in height and 42 inches square and equipped with the necessary windows.

Chief Brown with Demonstrator Foote appeared before the council and expressed his satisfaction with the equipment supplied his department. At the adjournment of the council fathers a view was taken by them of the Seidner's Mayonaise plant where Contractor Peter Nardone in behalf of Proprietor Otto Seidner had asked for an exception of building code ordinance for the building of a shed adjoining the Friendship drive factory where galvanized iron siding with wooden studding was desired for a protection in the unloading of freight cars. Building Inspector Thomas Wills also at the council, recommended that only a top be constructed to eliminate any fire hazard which might follow the sidewall construction.

Absentee councilmen were Farquhar Smith and Joseph Fraser.

A bill was voted paid for the destruction of fowl by dogs, the property of Francis M. Johnson. The dog discussion brought out that there were 660 licensed dogs in Westerly, the largest number in its history.

The council voted acceptance of the invitation of the veteran bodies of Westerly to review the Armistice day parade at 10 a. m. from the Colonial club. The council fathers also voted themselves their year's salary of $100 plus $2 for each board of canvassers meeting attended by them.

In relation to the last canvass the names of Anita Zanelli, Earl Barber, George E. Chapman, William W. Pike, Agnes York and John A. Berry, William J. Carney, Joseph Duprey, George Manfredi, Herbert L. Pellett, Henry A. Sheffield, Alice E. Stedman and Joe Stedman, were stricken from the voting list.

The council passed the amendment to the zoning ordinance fixing the front lines in the residential districts from the property line to the front of the piazza instead of the main building.

Thomas Wills, building inspector, reported that 72 applications had been received during the past month, 47 for alterations. Sixty-five permits were granted. Thirty-seven inspections were made by the inspector.

Chief of Police Thomas E. Brown reported 12 arrests for the month, and Dr. Samuel C. Webster, health officer, reported two contagious cases, one of pneumonia and one of ophthalmia neonatorum. A milk license was granted Smith Brothers of Hinckley Hill roadstorum.

Plans showing proposed alterations to the Andrea hotel at Misquamicut, owned by Mrs. Alice Bicknell, were presented to the council. Building Inspector Wills stated that it is proposed to excavate the cellar beneath the hotel and place the kitchen beneath the present kitchen. The plan is to enlarge the dining room. The matter was referred to the zoning board, as the proposed alterations will require an addition which will exceed the area of 1,000 feet under the zoning law.

Councilman Horace E. Burdick brought up the matter of marking intersections of highways about town. Councilman Rogers E. Trainer stated that the state is to place a traffic signal at Dunn's Corners.

STOCK MARKET SHOWED CONFIDENCE IN FUTURE ON EVE OF NATIONAL ELECTION

NEW YORK, Nov. 5—(AP)—What Wall street has fallen into the habit of calling the "Coolidge market" made history on its dying day today. Bullish operations were pushed vigorously forward, with scarcely an indication of thoughts of the morrow. The oldest operators could not recall such a demonstration of complete confidence in the future on the eve of a national election.

There was considerable confusion of opinion as to what sort of a market Wednesday may bring forth, but commission houses were more inclined to advocate caution on the grounds of the market's technical position rather than on any possible effect of the election. The fact that the market is heavily margined was a reassuring factor.

A wide assortment of oils, coppers, utilities, rails and specialties climbed 1 to 12 points in trading of good volume, sales exceeding 3,800,000 shares. A drop in the call money rate from 7 to 6 per cent, the lowest rate in nearly a fortnight gave impetus to buying and wiped out signs of nervousness apparent in the early transactions. Save for two days late in October, call money has not been at 6 per cent since September. There was also an easing in time money rates.

Oils were in heavy demand, as further developments in plans of controlling production were announced, accompanied by a varied assortment of unconfirmed merger rumors. Barnsdall A made an extreme gain of about 4 points and Pan American Petroleum B stepped up 3 points to a new high price for the year. Standards of California and New Jersey also went to new highs, up a point and more. Indian Refining, however, sagged more than a point.

The strength of the utilities, which developed last week, was carried over the week end. American and Foreign Power climbed about 4 points to a new top, while Brooklyn Union Gas jumped more than 3 points. Columbia Gas and Electric, Consolidated Gas, Detroit Edison, Electric Power and Light preferred, and Pacific Gas and Electric advanced 2 to 5 points.

The rails joined the upward movement when Atchison forged ahead on announcement of rights to subscribe to a $30,000,000 convertible 4 1-2 per cent bond issue at par in the Radio of $100 in bonds for each eight shares of common. The conversion feature will constitute an 8-year call on the common at 166 2-3. The stock went ahead about 4 points, followed by gains of about 2 to 4 points in Canadian Pacific, Kansas City Southern, and Pere Marquette. Buffalo and Susquehanna sold up about 7 points to another new high.

General Motors jumped about 6 points, crossing its previous high, but later cancelled most of its gain in a heavy turnover. Adams and American Express shot up 10 to 15 points, while National Tea skyrocketed 26 points to a new peak at 364. Aero shares were strong on reports of rapidly expanding business. Curtiss and Wright shooting up 10 and 12 points.

Simmons and Timken Roller Bearing climbed 6 and 5 points to new peaks, and Kennecott Copper touched a new high price, up more than 3 points. American Bank Note, American Smelting, Briggs Manufacturing, Chrysler Motor, Goty. Motor Products, Radio, United Electric Coal, and Ward Baking preferred pushed up 2 to 3 points.

Merchandising shares displayed group strength. First National Stores touched a new peak and Montgomery Ward, Macy, Kroger, and Sears-Roebuck made good gains. Woolworth soared 7 points to a new record price.

The number of pet losses was small. Rossia Insurance and Gotham Silk Hosiery preferred falling nearly 6 points, while American Linseed preferred, American Locomotive preferred, American Beet Sugar preferred, Derby and Reynolds, Industrial Rayon, and U. S. Tobacco, receded about 3 to 5 points.

In the commodity markets, cotton was generally heavy, selling down almost $3 a bale in liquidation in anticipation of the government's crop report Thursday. Grains held generally steady and transactions were largely of a pre-holiday evening up nature.

Foreign exchanges were quiet, most leading currencies holding firm. Japanese yen, however, dropped 15 points to 46.60 cents.

The polls in Norwich will be open in all districts today from 6 a. m. to 5 p. m.

NEW LONDON CITY COUNCIL VOTES $1,000 FOR ARMISTICE DAY FUND

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 6—At the meeting of the city council this evening, $1,000 was appropriated to assist in defraying expenses in the Armistice day celebration. M. B. Paine, appearing for the American Legion, represented that the sum of $610 was needed for decorations and entertainment at the armory. He said that $3,500 was the total set up in the budget by the legion for the celebration and tht $2,600 had been collected or agreed to be contributed. It then turned out that $300 would be needed for the entertainment for the governor and distinguished citizens of the state and nation who will be there. Councilor Twomey was not in favor of making the appropriation, spending the taxpayers' money in a way that the council had no right to spend it. He said the councilmen were only agents of the city and he thought some other way could be devised of clearing up the expense involved.

Director of Law Troland said that this was not an undertaking of the American Legion, but of the municipality. He said that five years ago we appropriated $1,000 for the celebration of Armistice day and last year made an appropriation. He said that New London was one of the conspicuous places in the state for such a celebration, having the coast guard academy, the submarine base and military stations here. It was shown that the city of Manchester had appropriated $6,000 for a similar celebration. Councilor Twomey said he had no objection to the appropriation provided the citizens approved, but he did not think the council had the authority to spend the people's money that way.

A provision for laying of sewer in the Riverside section was made. Under the original plans the cost would be $25,800; but a second plan was presented tonight, which would bring the cost to $22,800. This is accomplished by getting right of way over private property.

A proposition to take care of the surplus flow in lower Shaws cove was reported on by the city manager. Two plans were proposed at a cost of $20,000. The matter went to the public works committee for further consideration and report.

Councilor Fox expressed the opinion that there would be a tremendous crush at the polls tomorrow and asked that police supervision be provided, so that a passage could be kept open for the automobiles to the polling places. The city manager said that he had already taken care of that contingency in the second and third wards and would do so in the other wards.

A dozen building permits were granted. It was found that a temporary steel frame fruit stand, corner of Tilley and Bank street, was erected without permission and that will be removed.

Antonio Heneault, 33, a machinist residing at 175 Howard street, was charged with reckless driving, evasion of responsibility, driving while his license is under suspension and resisting an officer. The case was not ready to be tried so a continuance was granted to the 17th inst. Heneault was driving his car on Bank street Saturday night and it collided with an auto owned by Edward F. Murray, Jefferson avenue. Instead of stopping, Heneault attempted to drive away, but was intercepted by Patrolman Walter O'Neill. It then developed that Heneault's license had been suspended and when the officer placed Heneault under arrest the latter attacked O'Neill, much to his sorrow.

John Livingstone and Augustus Nevers, both of 108 Howard street, were charged with breach of the peace and intoxication. Each was fined $5 and costs.

Joseph Wterkowski, 154 Hunter avenue, Norwich, was charged with violation of the city's traffic ordinances in parking in restricted area and when he failed to present himself in court his bond of $2 was declared forfeited.

Mrs. Tarnapol, 90, mother of Jacob Tarnapol, 930 Bank street, died in Boston yesterday and last night the body was brought to New London. Today the funeral was held from the residence of her son. Burial was in the Hebrew cemetery, Jordan.

HIT-AND-RUN DRIVER CAUSE OF TIMOTHY KELLEY'S DEATH

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 5—Timothy Kelley, 3, of North Waterford, died at Lawrence Memorial hospital last night as a result of injuries sustained Saturday night when struck by an automobile, the driver of which is of the heartless "hit and run" type. Kelley was walking on Williams street, near the grounds of Connecticut college. He was walking close to the edge of the concrete and was on his way to his home. When an automobile traveling in a northerly direction approached the man believed he was out of danger, but he was struck by the automobile and left beside the road. The driver did not stop to assist Mr. Kelley, but continued toward Norwich at a high rate of speed. A few minutes later Palmer Griswold, driving to his home in Waterford, observed the man lying beside the road. Griswold alighted and as Mr. Kelley was conscious, his residence, which was with his brother, was easily determined. Griswold assisted the injured man to his home, where he remained during the night suffering great pain. He was attended by a physician Sunday and when it was found that he was seriously injured the state police were informed of the accident, after which Mr. Kelley was taken to the hospital where it was discovered that he had a fractured pelvic bone. He was suffering greatly from shock and but little hope for his recovery was held out. He died during the night. The investigation by the police failed to result in a clue being obtained that might lead to the arrest of the driver.

BODY OF TUDISCO TAKEN TO STEAMER BOUND FOR ITALY

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 5—The body of Raffaele Tudisco, of Pawcatuck, which was found floating in the Mystic river two weeks ago and which has been lying in state in Facisti hall, Shaw street, since the funeral last Friday, was forwarded to New York on the train leaving New London at 11:06 o'clock this morning. Tomorrow it will be taken aboard a liner en route for Tudisco's former residence in Italy. The body was accompanied to New York by several members of the Facisti and a delegation accompanied the body from the hall to the railroad station. The belief is general among the members of the facisti that Tudisco was slain by anti-facistis and his body thrown into the river, although the authorities do not agree with that supposition. Tudisco was to have been a witness against six anti-facistis, charged with inciting to riot, which resulted in the six men being held for trial in the superior court. Tudisco was one of several of the facistis beaten in a mob fight prior to the starting of the Columbus day parade here last month.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Broadway Theatre

William Haines, whose last starring picture "Excess Baggage", now showing for the last times today at the Palace theatre, brings an entirely new personality to the screen in this production. Haines was born at Stanton, Virginia, the son of a stock broker, and entered motion pictures through a new faces contest conducted by the old Goldwyn company in 1921.

He was sent immediately to the west coast where he began his career with a small part in "Three Weeks". He followed this role with other pictures and with "Brown of Harvard" scored such a great success as a wise-cracking son of the rich that it was decided to star him.

He was first starred in "Slide, Kelly, Slide" and achieved sensational praise. His late pictures include "Tell It to The Marines," "Spring Fever," "West Point," "The Smart Set" and "Telling the World."

"Loves of an Actress" is the most dramatic and spectacular production Pola Negri has ever made, despite the success of "Passion" and other big pictures.

"Loves of an Actress" provides Miss Negri with a great role, a role that calls for real acting ability," Lee says "When you consider that Rachel was one of the great figures of all time on the stage, a celebrated French tragedienne, whose life and loves were full o ftragedy and poignant drama, you can realize the necessity for an able portrayer in the picture version of her story.

Lee is credited with the continuity, and Miss Negri assisted him, providing data she herself obtained while in France last year. The picture showing today for the last times at the Palace theatre is a knockout!

ALL YOUNGSTERS NEED CEREALS
Sugar as a flavor makes these healthful foods enjoyable
Growing bones and teeth require the health-giving minerals and vitamins that are freely found in grain cereals and breakfast foods. Grains are nature's foods and they supply elements necessary to growth and nutrition. They are excellent in connection with milk, but is it sometimes hard to get children to eat them?
A judicious and reasonable amount of sugar added to these foods will work wonders in making them palatable, tasteful and enjoyable. No ingredient adds so much to the taste appeal of other foods. Sugar adds to the enjoyment of all kinds of fresh fruits and vegetables, so valuable in the diet of growing children. Use sugar as a condiment in making healthful foods acceptable to the palate. Sweetness, as the perfect flavor in foods, stimulates the flow of saliva and of gastric juice, thereby aiding digestion, as well as enjoyment.
Medical authorities warn parents to guard the nutrition of their children. See that your children eat regularly of varied, nutritious foods —thereby being safeguarded against such diseases as tuberculosis. Far better that your child be slightly overweight for its height and age than a single pound underweight. Sound nutrition is absolutely necessary to health and proper development. The Sugar Institute.

Collecting From Mutual Policy Holders

Norwich fire insurance agents are interested in the following from an insurance paper published in Boston:

Massachusetts has plenty to worry about in the alleged impairment of one of its mutual automobile casualty companies but its trouble are nothing as compared with Syracuse, N. Y. Last week Friday a representative of the state insurance department went to that city and opened a temporary office. It was for the purpose of collecting assessments from former policy holders of recently defunct mutual casualty companies. And it was not one company which had failed, but twelve, in even dozen. The insurance department had fixed upon something like $35,000 as being due from policy holders resident in Syracuse alone and had gone there to collect. Sums slightly under $50 were collectible from over 200 citizens of that city to help pay the bills of the defunct companies. Already 100 policy holders had paid and court actions against 149 others are on file.

The polls in Norwich will be open in all districts today from 6 a. m. to 6 p. m.

MANY NEW CONTRIBUTORS IN SALVATION ARMY APPEAL

The Salvation Army mail campaign to raise the $3,000 maintenance fund with which to carry on the service of the organization in Norwich is progressing satisfactorily. John R. Tarrant, treasurer of the appeal, reports that the donations received during the first week of the campaign amount to $2,000. The appeal committee is pleased with the results so far attained, in view of the fact that in all mail campaigns it takes fully a week before the larger number of returns begin to come in.

In tabulating the returns, Campaign Secretary E. J. McCabe said that the outstanding fact in the present mail appeal is the number of donations which comes in from citizens who have not contributed to the Salvation Army in former years. Arthur M. Brown, chairman of the appeal committee, is highly gratified with the new friends who come to the assistance of the Salvation Army maintenance fund, and he feels satisfied that during this week the greater part of the goal set by the organization will be attained.

Y. M. C. A. SUNDAY SERVICE WITH LARGE ATTENDANCE

Notwithstanding the inclement weather Sunday the service at the Norwich Y. M. C. A. in the afternoon was largely attended.

After the singing of America the second part of the historic moving picture, "Griffiths America" was shown, and it proved to be most impressive, portraying as it did the many sacrifices made by those who determined to stand by the ideals of true liberty.

During the service, Secretary Edwin Hill gave a brief talk and he spoke in part as follows: "The picture story being shown should make everyone of us more patriotic and more determined to count for the most possible in the interests of the high ideals upon which our country is founded. The coming Tuesday brings to all those who have the priceless privilege of casting a ballot, a great and a grave responsibility. We hear much in these days about platforms. Each party believes that its platform is the best, and doubtless there are good ideas in them all. We are to determine which contributes most to the maintenance of all that is best in American life. None of these platforms nor all of them together are comparable to that platform laid by Jesus Christ when he said, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart and thy neighbor as thyself . . ." We need to think very carefully before we cast the ballot on Tuesday; we need to pray about it, and then vote as you believe God would like you to vote. Whomever you vote for, be sure he is in your judgment the man of God's choosing; the man who will come nearest to maintaining the ideals for which those who have lived before us sacrificed so much."

POULTNEY BIGELOW HONORED BY REPUBLIC OF FRANCE

Poultney Bigelow, graduate in 1873 of the Academy (Norwich) has been, by the president of the French republic selected as a Chevalier de la Legion d'Honneur for his literary and historical achievements.

The announcement of this signal honor will interest not only all N. F. A. alumni but all Yale men, since Mr. Bigelow was graduated with the class of '79 at Yale.

Mr. Bigelow came back to Norwich to address an annual meeting of the Academy when the late Corporation Counsel Joseph T. Fanning was president of the alumni association. With all his honors from foreign countries and at foreign courts he retains the most affectionate regard for his alma mater and frequently refers to the enjoyment of his boyhood years spent as a student in Norwich.

Although Mr. Bigelow has a long list of books of astounding cleverness and erudition to his credit, beginning with his four-volume "History of the German Struggle for Liberty," books on colonial and political problems in Russia, Germany, Africa and the Far East, down to his "Seventy Summers" published in 1926, to nine-tenths of the world he is still remembered best as the school friend and frank pal of the Kaiser.

At Malden-on-Hudson, the ancestral acres, he lives the life of a gentleman farmer—but honors continue to seek him out, as, for example, this latest from the republic of France.

HOOVER WAS ELECTED PRESIDENT OF U.S. BY A DECISIVE MAJORITY

Latest Returns Show Hoover Leading in Every Eastern, Western and Border State Except Massachusetts, Virginia, Florida and Texas—That Would Leave Smith With Less Than 100 Electoral Votes—Gov. Smith and Raskob Have Congratulated Hoover.

By FIELD BRITTLE
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

With east and west and even a part of the solid south rolling in majorities for Herbert Hoover, his election to the presidency was conceded today by Chairman Raskob of the democratic national committee.

At the same time Gov. Alfred E. Smith made public a congratulatory message to his republican opponent.

"I congratulate you heartily on your victory," he said, "and extend to you my sincere good wishes for your health and happiness and for the success of your administration."

The democratic concession of victory was announced shortly before 1 a. m. At that hour the returns showed Hoover leading in every eastern, western and border state, except Massachusetts, and in Virginia, Florida and Texas. Should these majorities be sustained until the count is completed, Smith would have less than 100 electoral votes out of a total of 531.

Although throughout the night Smith had faced the loss of Virginia and Florida, the democratic crisis gained first importance when Hoover swept out of the upper New York counties with so great a lead that it overrode Smith's New York city advantage.

Tennessee and Maryland of the border group, after giving encouragement to the Smith forces early last night, turned to Hoover and Curtis. Others of the border, West Virginia, Kentucky and Oklahoma, rolled up substantial republican majorities. Missouri alone still showed signs of a close race, Hoover's lead being subject to the great vote of St. Louis.

A similar situation developed in Massachusetts where Smith began to cut into his opponent's advantage as the Boston vote was tabulated. Rhode Island, where democrats were optimistic, likewise gave Hoover a slight margin. Elsewhere in New England the republican majorities held.

The farmer, middle west, the northwest and the Rocky Mountain country returned early Hoover leads as the late closing polls there turned in their ballots.

WALSH IS LEADING YOUNG IN MASSACHUSTTS

BOSTON, Nov. 6.—(AP)—Senator David I. Walsh, democrat jumped into a lead of 16,000 over Benjamin Loring Young, republican, on returns from 383 of the state's 1905 precincts. Hoover's early lead was cut down on these returns to 7200 over Smith while Allen republican, was leading Cole, democrat, for governor by 12,000

G. O. P. MAY INCREASE MAJORITY IN SENATE

(By RAYMOND P. HENLE, A. P. Press Staff Writer.)

Prospects that the republicans would increase their present meager plurality of votes in the senate and retain a working majority in the house were evident at midnight as returns from the election slowly followed the presidential results.

At that time one upset in favor of the democrats had been registered for the house but it was offset by the election of a republican to a seat now held by a democrat.

Of the twenty democratic senate seats involved in the election the republican candidate was ahead in five states. These included the seats now held by Bayard of Delaware, Edwards of New Jersey, Neely of West Virginia, Gerry of Rhode Island, and Locher of Ohio, the latter is not up for re-election.

Four other democrats, however, King of Utah, Bruce of Maryland, Walsh of Massachusetts, and Pittman of Nevada were ahead on the early returns.

In the case of most of the 13 republican seats, the candidates of that party were leading their democratic opponents.

Representative Tilson of Connecticut, the republican leader in the house, was among the first whose election was assured. Two other republican stalwarts of the house, Snell of New York, chairman of the rules committee, and Dempsey of New York, chairman of the house rivers and harbors committee, also were re-elected.

COOLIDGE VOTED AND RETURNED TO WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6.—(AP)—President Coolidge voted in Northampton, Massachusetts, today and hastened back to Washington to receive the first election returns.

The chief executive, accompanied by Mrs. Coolidge, spent two hours in his old home town during which, in addition to voting, he also visited Mrs. Lemira Goodhue, Mrs. Coolidge's mother, who is ill in a hospital, and supervised the storing of some personal belongings brought from the White House to his home on Massasoit street.

At the white house preparations had been made for the president to receive the election returns by radio.

AVALANCHE OF VOTES IN CENTRAL STATES

(By C. E. HONCE)
(A. P. Central States New Editor)

An avalanche of votes was under assay tonight as sundown closed the most extraordinary presidential voting day in mid-western history.

From the start of a perfect Indian summer day until evening, polling booths throughout the farm belt, not only in the vast cities but in the country areas as well, saw a stream of men and women voters such as had never turned out before.

From every state reports had come of heavy balloting that cast into the limbo of forgotten things previous registrations and previous votes.

The woman vote was noticeably heavy. In some parts of the middle west it approached that cast by the men. In the urban centers housewives and women office workers appeared in great numbers in the early hours.

Outside of a few minor disorders in Indianapolis and Chicago, the day was remarkably free of violence.

HEAVY VOTE CAST IN SOUTHERN STATES

(By W. F. CALDWELL)
(A. P. Southern News Editor)

From the Potomac to the Rio Grande voters of the south in overwhelming numbers today expressed their preference for president

Reports from each of the ten states comprising the "Solid South," told of long lines of voters and intense activity on the part of party leaders in this unusual turnout at the ballot box in this section.

Fair weather prevailed over the greater part of the area except in sections of Texas, Louisiana and Mississippi where rain and lowering clouds prevailed.

Extra newspaper editions containing first returns were snatched by the voters as they left the polls. They saw a report from Marion, Arkansas, that the eleven votes in the first precinct of Crittenden county were cast unanimously for Governor Smith and Senator Robinson, Arkansas' native son.

HOOVER HAS LEAD OF 2,855 ON DEMOCRATS TEXAS

DALLAS, Texas, Nov. 6.—(AP)—The possibility that a republican presidential candidate might carry Texas for the first time in history loomed late tonight as Herbert Hoover, for the third time during the tabulation of the vote forged into the lead.

The 11 o'clock tabulation of the Texas election bureau showed the republican candidate ahead by 2,855 votes, with more than half of the ballots counted. It was the largest lead either candidate had gained in the nip and tuck race. Hoover's total, as computed by the bureau, was 206,415, Smith's 205,560.

Smith supporters had expected that the early returns from large cities in the state would give Hoover a slight lead early in the evening, but they were surprised when he held the advantage later while rural returns were pouring in.

RURAL NEW ENGLAND STRONG FOR HOOVER

BOSTON, Nov. 6.—(AP)—Three of New England's six states appeared definitely settled in the Hoover column late tonight as the mounting totals of returns piled up.

Maine and Vermont held true to tradition and remained in the republican column by what appeared likely to be record-breaking majorities. New Hampshire seemed assured for Hoover while Connecticut likewise, showed a margin for the republican candidate.

Massachusetts and Rhode Island, upon which the supporters of both Hoover and Smith centered their attack, remained in the doubtful column.

Maine, with only 15 scattered precincts missing out of 633 in the state showed a lead for Hoover of approximately 97,000. Vermont, birthplace of President Coolidge, showed a lead for Hoover of more than 27,600 with only 22 of its 248 precincts missing and New Hampshire with 44 precincts out of 294 still to be heard from, showed a Hoover plurality of more than 29,000 in Connecticut. Hoover had a lead of more than 22,000 in 123 towns out of 169.

In Massachusetts alone Smith was in the lead With slightly more than a third of the state reported he was more than 18,000 ahead of Hoover. These figures included 255 of the 349 precincts in the city of Boston. These Boston districts returned a Smith majority of about 83,500 and democratic leaders pinned their hopes of carrying the state upon the vote in this city.

Hoover maintained a lead in Rhode Island which was cut down somewhat as the totals increased. With 116 of the 196 precincts out, the Hoover lead stood at 4393.

Smith's strength, outside of the normally democratic communities which in most cases recorded unprecedented totals, appeared the greatest in the industrial sections of the New England states although he made inroads in some of the smaller towns in Massachusetts, Hoover's vote was heavy in nearly all of the rural sections.

ALBANY GAVE SMITH A MAJORITY OF 14,268

ALBANY, N. Y., Nov. 6.—(AP)—This city, which has known Alfred E. Smith for eight years as governor of New York state, gave him a majority of 14,268 over Herbert Hoover, his republican opponent in the presidential race.

The complete city vote for president: Smith 42,312, Hoover 28,044.

HOW HOOVER FAMILY CAST THEIR BALLOTS

PALO ALTO, Cal., Nov. 6.—(AP)—Resting his cause in the hands of the American people at the polls, Herbert Hoover, waited to see if it is their will that he should become the nation's chief executive.

After exercising his own right of ballot, the republican presidential candidate spent the day in the quiet comfort of his home atop San Juan Hill on the Stanford University campus, surrounded by members of his family and a few personal friends.

The confidence that he has expressed several times during the past several weeks appeared undiminished as the day dragged past, but he watched with interest the weather reports from the middle west and upstate New York and read with avidity the returns that slowly began to trickle into his home during the early afternoon over the wires of the Associated Press.

He made only two brief excursions from his home during the day, the first to go with the four other voting members of his family to a polling precincts on the Stanford University campus. There, while university students scrambled for a view and cameras clicked, the nominee faced a battery of Klieg lights to vote.

Hoover came first under the glare of the lights, recording his name and marking his ballot in the privacy of a canvas booth. Mrs. Hoover followed him and behind them in order came Mrs. Herbert Hoover, Jr., her husband, and Allan Hoover. Although the last of the family to enter the booth, Allan dropped his first ballot in the box immediately after his father had deposited the yellow sheet in the container.

CHIEF JUSTICE AND MRS. TAFT DEPRIVED OF VOTE

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6—(AP)—The chief justice of the United States, William Howard Taft, today was one of thousands of citizens of the nation in Washington who could not cast a ballot in the presidential election.

While a drum corp attracted attention to a locked ballot box in a downtown street as a protest of Washington citizens against having a vote, the chief justice explained at his home he had given up his voting privilege in Connecticut. He said that when appointed to head the supreme court he felt that he was coming to Washington to make it his permanent home. Because of this he gave up his residence in Connecticut and today neither the chief justice nor Mrs. Taft, who is visiting in New Haven, could vote.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Nov. 6—(AP)—Fire swept a warehouse on the Buffalo water front this afternoon while firemen, summoned by three alarms, sought to prevent it from spreading in the face of a strong wind off Lake Erie.

For a time it was feared the blaze would spread to the Crystal beach steamer dock, near where the warehouse is located, but it was thought at 2 o'clock that the danger had passed. No estimate of the damage was available.

ANGLO-FRENCH NAVAL COMPROMISE CRITICISED

LONDON, Nov. 6 —(AP)— Ramsay MacDonald, labor party leader, beginning debate on the address in reply to the speech from the throne with which King George opened parliament today, was strongly critical of government's action with regard to the Anglo-French naval compromise.

The king had begun his address with a statement that his relations with foreign powers continue to be friendly and expressed his satisfaction at the signing of the Kellogg-Briand pact renouncing war.

Mr. MacDonald charged the government with hampering the activities of the league of nations while professing to co-operate and with putting obstacles in the way of disarmament while terming it "assisting the league to formulate plans for general reductions of armaments."

Of the pact with France he said, "it was not an agreement to limit armaments; it was an agreement not to limit armaments. It sacrificed the most elementary considerations of Britain's safety except upon one sole consideration, that there would always be pooling of our navy and the navy of the country across the channel."

POWERS INVESTED IN FASCIST GRAND COUNCIL

ROME, Nov. 6—(AP)—Premier Mussolini presented to the senate today a bill dealing with the functions and powers of the Fascist Grand Council. This body last September approved a measure giving to itself a legal and constitutional status as an element of the government.

The new measure provides that the Fascist Grand Council shall be the supreme body which shall coordinate all the activities of the regime and give advice on all matters submitted by the government.

The premier will be the president of the council, which will be made up of the presidents of the senate and chamber of deputies, the ministry, the commander of the militia, various undersecretaries and representatives of the confederations of workers, farmers and industrials. Meetings of this body are to be secret and the members serve without pay.

ALARMED BY FLOW OF LAVA FROM MT. ETNA

ROME, Nov. 6—(AP)—Fears that the lava flow from Mt. Etna may cut the railroad line between Catania and Messina are voiced in a special dispatch from Catania to the Giornale D'Italia, as well as the telephone and telegraph lines.

Details from the scene of the eruption describe the great flow of lava made up the union of minor streams with the principal one, rolling through the Mortoio toward Mascali.

Villagers are moving in procession to places of safety headed by women and priests bearing relics of St. Vitus and the image of St. Leonard, while automobiles and carts are aiding in the evacuation of the inhabitants of Mascali and other threatened places.

Another crater has opened near Monte Stornello.

MEASURES TO PROMOTE BRITISH EXPORT TRADE

LONDON, Nov. 6—(AP)— Measures for encouraging agriculture and industry in Britain especially directed to revival of strong export trade are foremost among the domestic legislation to be placed before parliament in the session opened today, the last before a new general election.

The most important measure is that for reform of local government taxation, under which full municipal taxes would be removed from agricultural land and buildings, and three-quarters of the present levy taken off industrial and transportation properties, in return the government plans to compensate the municipalities from the treasury.

Briand May Form New French Ministry

Poincare Cabinet Resigned Following Resignation of Four Radical Socialist Ministers.

PARIS, Nov. 6—(AP)—Almost at the moment of the reconvening of the French parliament, Premier Poincare's ministry resigned office today. Four radical socialist ministers previously had proferred their resignation to the premier, explaining that their party's program made continued collaboration with the national union cabinet impossible.

The premier immediately put into effect his warning to the members of the ministry that in the event of any minister or ministers resigning he would forthwith submit the resignation of the cabinet as a body to President Doumergue.

The socialist ministers involved were Albert Sarraut, interior; Edouard Herriot, education; Henri Quieille, agriculture, and Leon Perrier, colonie. The action of the radicals was the outcome of the radical congress recently held at Angers, when the party demanded changes in the governmental program, with particular reference to the budget, which M. Poincare was not prepared to grant. A resolution was adopted at this conference requiring that the radical ministers should retire unless the government consented to the organization of government functionaries in trade unions, unless appropriations for national defense were reduced and the demands for the budget changes were agreed to.

Thus came the downfall of the ministry under M. Poincare which checked the slump in the franc in 1926 and during the two and one-half years of its existence balanced the budget and stabilized the franc. It was a fraction of the radical party which itself is only a fraction of the chamber of deputies, which brought about this far-reaching result.

The chamber and senate met this afternoon in regular sessions, but because of the government's resignation adjourned immediately after Presidents Bouisson and Doumer delivered orations paying tribute to the members who had died during recess.

M. Briand, who has held the premiership many times, is favored to succeed M. Poincare, with M. Painleve second choice and M. Tardieu third.

"Any person who believes in popular government must of necessity be satisfied when so large a proportion of the qualified voters definitely express their views. The percentage of votes this year is so great that nobody has any right to complain of the result due to a lack of interest.

WHAT SENATOR HIRAM BINGHAM HAS TO SAY

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 6—(AP)—U. S. Senator Hiram Bingham, republican issued the following statement tonight:

"The result of the election in Connecticut is a tribute to the common sense and good judgment of the great mass of voters. Never before have so many people had an opportunity to hear repeatedly, the voices of their candidates and to listen to their actual speeches. Connecticut citizens do not admire cheap sarcasm, wise cracks, and fluent misrepresentation. But they have listened with deep satisfaction to the sound political philosophy and constructive statesmanship of Herbert Hoover. His life, character and achievements have made an irresistible appeal.

"So far as the state ticket is concerned, our citizens like thoughtful stockholders have been glad to re-elect officers and directors who have run their business carefully and well. Nearly every one of the republican candidates had already made a record in the service of the state. It is a great pleasure to see that this faithful public service has been rewarded.

"In the country at large, the average voter outside of the great cities apparently has agreed with Connecticut's view of Herbert Hoover."

It was a hard battle and every vote counted. Gov. Smith made a gallant fight and proved himself to be a great vote getter. The result in this district and throughout the state however, is an endorsement of the republican record of the past eight years—an endorsement given after one of the hardest fights in the state's history. ## DEMOCRATS SWEEP TO VICTORY IN WINDHAM

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Nov. 6—In the tremendous upheaval of the "silent" vote the cause of Alfred E. Smith, democratic standard bearer of the national ticket Windham swept into the democratic legion today every candidate of the national, state and district without exception. The unprecedented interest in the national tickets and a wide demonstrated adherence that has stopped at nothing, the great campaign fight which was proved the Nemesis of the republican party. Substantial majorities ranging from Valentine L. Murphy's 146 majority of 254 over Judge Thomas Johnson, present incumbent, for judge of probate to splendid majority of 423 given to Frank P. Fenton, candidate for lieutenant-governor, were maintained through the entire city. The most pessimistic checking of the lists by republican officials during the day were shattered when three of the four districts of the town, including the normally republican first district, were swept clean by the democratic tide. The single exception was the second district where the G. O. P. forces fought their way into majorities. George Daly Fenton ran ahead of the local ticket again in this district, however, his opponent, Ernest E. Rogers gaining a majority of but 59.

Reports from Scotland which, with Windham, forms the Windham-Scotland probate district gave Robinson a majority of 108 in that town where there are 181 electors on the check list. This cut Murphy's total majority for the district to 146, although his election was assured soon after preliminary announcements began to filter in from the Windham districts.

Windham today joined the ranks of the towns and cities of the nations in which record total votes were cast. The revised lists gave the town 6,351 electors and the total vote cast was 5,527, or over 87 per cent. the greatest exercise of franchise ever displayed here. Many of these voters had been made since the beginning of the campaign while many others came from other cities far and near to cast their ballot. The socialist party also played a small part in today's elections giving their candidates an average of 15 votes, while the socialist labor recorded one vote for each candidate and the workers failed to register at all.

The balloting was heavy throughout the day with almost a continuous procession to the polls from 6 a. m. to 5 p. m. Eight voting machines were in use. After the first hour of voting there had been 170 votes cast in the first district; 280 in the second; 160 in the third and 200 in the fourth, a total of 810. The average during the 11 hours of voting was maintained at a little over 550 per hour. Workers of both parties worked like mad until shortly before 4 o'clock in the afternoon when both parties had virtually exhausted their party lists and the checking came to a halt as party-men turned their efforts to ferreting out electors who might possibly have been overlooked on the lists. At one o'clock 4,020 votes had been cast and at 2:45 o'clock the figure had climbed to 4,910, which was the total vote of the entire day in the national elections in 1924.

The detail vote follows:

COL. BULLIS ADDRESSED THE WOMAN'S CLUB

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Nov. 6—Col. H. Edmund Bullis of Washington, D. C., outlined the interesting background of calendar history and explained the advantages claimed for the simplified calendar in his lecture given Tuesday afternoon before the local Woman's club on the subject, "The Romance of the Calendar." The talk was given under the auspices of the national committee on calendar simplification, whose chairman is George Eastman of Rochester, N. Y. Some of the calendar changes advocated by Colonel Bullis are as follows: Every holiday in the year except Good Friday and Easter would be arbitrarily placed on Mondays. Easter would be stabilized at a date, probably April 15, to be selected by the interested church bodies. Every month of 28 days, exactly four weeks long, would start on Sunday and end on Saturday. A 13th month would be placed between June and July. A holiday having no week day name would occur between Saturday, Dec. 28, and Sunday, Jan. 1. Leap day would be transferred from Feb. 29 to a holiday having no week name, between Saturday, June 28, and the first day of the month.

A number of persons passing along High street to vote in the first district in Tuesday's election were amused when it appeared for a time that the republican district handpainters was going "3-to-1" for Hoover and Smith. On both sides of the entrance to the house, a four-tenement structure, were placards reading "Republican Headquarters," the exact location being in the tenement on the south side of the house. Across the hallway the windows of the north tenement were decorated with pictures of Smith and Robinson. This fact was called to the attention of the republican town committee and two large lithographs of Hoover and Curtis were hung on both sides of the placard displayed by the Smith-Robinson admirer. Not to be outdone, the latter procured a few more Smith lithographs which he added to the collection already on display.

REPUBLICANS MAKE CLEAN SWEEP OF THE ELECTION

(Special to The Bulletin.)

DANIELSON, Nov. 6—By the narrowest margin in a generation and in the most difficult situation for the party in this section of eastern Windham county for time out of memory the republican party achieved victory today over the most militant and agressive democratic opposition that it has had to face in many years. The republicans not only turned in a majority for the presidential candidate but also elected both candidates for representative and gave a majority for the candidate for state senator of their party from this district. The detail of the vote is as follows:

Hall, d, 1327; justices of the peace—Wm. Fenner Woodward, r, 1560; Sabin S. Russell, r, 1563; E. L. Darble, r, 1562; Louis A. Wolsard, r, 1563; Charles S. Francis, r, 1561; George W. ### DANIELSON VOTERS WENT TO THE POLLS EARLY

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Nov. 6—Details of the election in Killingly will be found elsewhere in this issue today. That report shows that the expected record vote of the town was cast, all previous figures being surpassed, and that there was the intense interest aroused by one of the most lively and aggressive campaigns in a generation.

In this town the advice to vote early was heeded in all districts. The bulk of the town's vote was in the ballot boxes by one o'clock this afternoon, and approximately 1,040 votes had been cast here up to the noon hour. Notwithstanding the rapidity with which the vote was being cast all through the morning hours there was no rush at the polling places—just a steady stream of voters who were evidently well decided as to what they wanted to do, for they spent very little time in the booths preparing their ballots.

It is a pleasant thing to record that none of the bitterness that has been in evidence in the campaign in many sections of the nation was manifest here. The election proceedings here were as quiet and decorous as one could wish, and is regarded as reflecting the balanced judgment of the electorate.

As the hour for closing the polls approached this afternoon interest in the outcome of the balloting here was intensified, and there gathered about groups to await the opening of the boxes and the beginning of the count. There were those who hoped to get a line on the final results of the election in town by learning how the first two or three hundred ballots counted showed the strength of the opposing candidates for the presidency.

It was remarked by election workers today that less difficulty was being experienced to get people to come to the polls than is regularly the case. The great majority appeared not only willing but anxious to go on record with their choice. The republicans appeared to have a more nearly perfect system for getting out the voters and checking on who had voted than the democrats, though the latter were better organized than ever before and put in a strenuous and effective day's work.

DEACON A. C. GREENE, 99, CASTS VOTE AT KILLINGLY

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Nov. 6—Killingly had the distinction today of having among the voters who came to the polls one of the oldest men in the United States exercising his right of franchise in the election. That man is Deacon Albert C. Greene, who passed his 99th birthday last September. Deacon Greene, now without the use of his legs, was brought to the polling place in the town hall building in an automobile, was assisted into his wheel chair and checked through like any of the hundreds of other voters that took part in the balloting here.

Deacon Greene said that the first vote he ever cast for a presidential candidate was for Franklin Pierce, who qualified for office in 1853. At that time Mr. Greene was employed in Boston. President Pierce was the first and only democratic candidate for the presidency for whom Deacon Greene has voted. During the Pierce administration the slavery question became paramount and with it the growth of republicanism—and after that the Civil war, in which Deacon Greene served honorably as a member of the Union armies. He has ever since been a strong republican. Deacon Greene was greeted by numbers of friends today at the town hall.

Operations for the construction of three miles of state-aid highway have begun in the town of Canterbury. John Arborio of New Haven, the contractor who completed the new Providence route cut-off here, has undertaken the work. This job is on the Canterbury-Lisbon route and is another link to a route that will give a hard-surfaced highway eventually from Norwich northward to the Massachusetts line via Canterbury, Brooklyn, Pomfret and Woodstock through a beautiful section of eastern Connecticut that is almost exclusively rural. Canterbury will invest $50,000 in the project, being reimbursed for much of this expenditure by the state, which eventually bear the major burden of the cost. The rough grading and digging now underway will continue, it is understood, so long as weather conditions permit. Canterbury's part of the road will be completed, it is expected, sometime during the summer of 1929.

Miss Theda Ray of the Killingly high school faculty announced this afternoon that on Friday and Saturday of this week at F. E. Bitgood's there is to be a display of dresses, aprons and underwear made by the sophomore and freshmen classes that are under her direction. This display is intended merely to demonstrate to the public the progress the girls of these sewing classes are making with their work.

The dresses are of woolen materials. Before cutting the material and making

WEARS BROWN DERBY TO CAST VOTE FOR SMITH

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Nov. 6—Joseph Michel of Grove street, leading Putnam business man was the only person in democracy's ranks to make a public manifestation of his political faith. "Joe", as he is known to nearly every one in the city, appeared before the municipal building attired in the "Al Smith" head dress, a brown derby. He was hailed by the local democratic officials as he left the polls.

The sudden increase in the volume of traffic passing the intersection of Church and Bridge streets today, in the west side of the city, necessitated the placing of a traffic policeman there. Captain Jarvis detailed Officers Sponcey and Benoit, who directed the movement of automobiles at this point throughout the day and maintained a watch during the early hours of the evening.

Former residents who made the trip to Putnam from distant points to cast their votes today were: Rev. W. Arthur Routhier, pastor of St. Anthony's church in Bridgeport. Father Routhier was formerly assistant at St. Mary's in Putnam, Michael J. Daigle of Hartford, William Blake of Noroton, Conn., Dr. James B. Kent of Laramont, N. Y., Samuel Fields of Providence, Miss Katherine Byrne of Hartford, all former Putnam residents. During the Underwear in the exhibit has been made by the members of the freshman class, they also making the cooking aprons that are to be shown. Some tea aprons made by members of the sophomore class also will be included in the exhibit.

The displaying of a large flag on the town hall building today and the setting up of the holiday display of flags on both sides of the street at the town hall building was a pretty and patriotic feature of today's election in Danielson.

Mrs. S. Gingras of Reynolds street is to enter St. Francis' hospital at Hartford this week for observation.

An increased force of telephone operators was on duty far into the night tonight at the Danielson central office to handle the rush of election business.

Miss Madelyn Cronin, student at the college of Mt. St. Vincent on the Hudson was a visitor at her home here today.

While hundreds were voting for him here today as a candidate for representatives on the democratic ticket, John W. Gallup was a patient at the Peter Bent Brigham hospital in Boston recovering from a surgical operation. Mr. Gallup is progressing satisfactorily and is expected to be able to return to his home here in from two to three weeks.

In the general exchange of pastors in eastern Windham county on Sunday, November 18, Rev. Harding W. Gaylord of the Westfield Congregational church of Danielson will preach at the Baptist church in Putnam.

Claude Moran was the moderator in the third election district of the town at Paine's hall in East Killingly today. As elsewhere in the town, the vote there was heavy, approximately two-thirds of the total number registered in the district having voted by the noon hour.

Tonight at Kum-Along-Inn on the West Side an election dance was held, with a large number in attendance. Returns from the nation-wide balloting were given out through the course of the evening.

Students of Killingly high school participated in a mock election today, and the matter seemed of very general interest to the student body. The result of the vote had not been announced up to mid-afternoon, when the count was still underway.

Thursday evening of this week there is to be a meeting at the Methodist Episcopal church to name a delegate and an alternate to attend the annual Lay Electorial conference to be held in New London.

Mrs. George Cook of Danielson and Mrs. Edward Moran of the Bush Hill section of the town of Brooklyn have gone to Atlanta, Ga., for a visit.

Stop Bad Breath

People afflicted with bad breath find quick relief through Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. The pleasant, sugar-coated tablets are taken for bad breath by all who know them.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets act gently but firmly on the bowels and liver, stimulating them to natural action, clearing the blood and gently purifying the entire system. They do that which dangerous calomel does without any of the bad after effects.

Olive Tablets bring no griping, pain or any disagreeable effects.

Dr. F. M. Edwards discovered the formula after 20 years of practice among patients afflicted with bowel and liver complaint with the attendant bad breath.

Olive Tablets are purely a vegetable compound mixed with olive oil; you will know them by their olive color. Take nightly for a week and note the effect. 15c, 30c, 60c.

CATHOLIC WOMEN PRESENT SUCCESSFUL MINSTRELS

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Nov. 6—Diversion from politics on the eve of election was had by nearly four hundred who gathered in St. Mary's hall Monday evening to see the Putnam council of Catholic Women, "Gloom Chasers," who presented their "minstrel revue." There was an abundance of song and dance and chuckles were prevailing among the audience from the first lift to the last drop of the curtain.

The scene opened with the setting being laid in a metropolitan night club its patrons, forming the chorus were seated at the prettily decorated tables and were being served by three waiters, George Lajeunesse, Edgar Lucier and Wilfred Martineau, who comprised the "dish-toted" comedians.

John M. Hogan, was excellent as master of ceremonies and as proprietor of the club, brought the rollicking slams to the townsfolk from his three assistants. Hector Lucier was in charge of the musical review and was accompanied by Miss Eleanor Irving, clolinist.

Putnam's foremost juvenile dancing artist, Miss Emily Jarvis, daughter of Frank Jarvis of Grove street furnished her audience with her novelty fancy dances. For her efforts she was presented with a large bouquet of roses as well as being applauded.

The chorus consisted of Estelle Beaudeault, Edmaer Guy, Mrs. Armand Lizotte, Mrs. Lanzon, Cecille Bonneville, Rolande Cartier, Bernadette Cartier, Agnes Mathieu, Juliette Brodeur, Mrs. Henry Vadnais, Elenor Irving, Gertrude Remillard, Sybil Gilman, Leonie Daigle, Edgar Lucier, George Lajeunesse, Wilfred Martineau, Davis Breault, Lawrence Phaneuf, Michael White, Lionel Berthiaume, Leonide Tatro, John Hogan, Arthur Brodeur, Joseph Bove. The following programme was presented: "Dawn of Tomorrow," Estelle Beaudreault; "That's My Weakness Now," George Lajeunesse; "Rose of Yesterday," Lionel Berthiaume; Dance Specialty, Edmaer Guy; "Jeanine", Mrs. Henry Vadnais; "That Funny Melody," Edgar Lucier; "My Window of Dreams", Leonide Tatro; "Angela Mia", Arthur Brodeur; "Mr. Hoover and Mr. Smith," John Hogan and Lawrence Phaneuf; "Hello Montreal", Wilfred Martineau.

Part 2, "Sweet Mystery of Life", David Breault; Fancy Dance, Emily Jarvis; "Indian Love Call" Mrs. Lanzon; Song Specialty, Edmaer Guy, Edgar Lucier.

A novelty political number was presented by a leading Putnam impersonator, Joseph Bove who in the role of Professor Jacob Levinsky of the University of Warsaw brought the listeners to a "Whoopee" with his Yiddish remarks. Prof. Levinsky is a candidate for Putnam's "fifth ward" and his first public appearance last evening doubtless to say will net him a victory and make him a public servant.

The closing number was a one act farce presented by a number of members of the chorus and was entitled "S. O S.". The nautical cast included John Hogan, Lawrence Phaneuf, George Lajeunesse, Sybil Gilman and Gertrude Remillard. The scene was laid in the salon of a steamship.

The minstrels were socially successful and were the first of the season to be presented in Putnam and their success will mean a bright Christmas for many of the needy families of Putnam, as all financial returns are to be devoted to charity within the city.

Much credit is due the cast who spent many tedious hours in the rehearsals, yet an unseen group contributed much to the apparent success of the presentation and should be given mention. They are the minstrel committee consisting of Marietta Gordon, Mary Mason, May Montville, Louise Maheu, Marion Robillard, Beatrice Menard and Catherine Lizotte. General Chairman Ada E. Maynard. Ticket Committee, Catherine Lizotte. Programme Committee Bernice Delaney, and Evelyn Cain. Publicity committee Marguerite O'Brien.

Captain William J. Jarvis of the Putnam police said this morning that the state highway commission is soon to erect signs for the direction of tourists at lover the city and town of Putnam in an effort to attain a more efficient system in this line. Captain Jarvis had as his guest yesterday Engineer Stark of the highway commission who produced drawings of the locations of the new indicators. New signs will be a much needed improvement in the city and will serve much towards removing the ancient eyesores now in use.

Engineer Stark has also been devising a scheme, whereby the fire lane on Main street may be maintained. The Connecticut company, owners of the trolley poles to which the signs are soon to remove them, since the busses are now in operation. Capt. Jarvis said today that he has been advised by Mr. Stark to induce the city to purchase the poles which now support the "no parking-fire lane" signs. This recommendation will be made to the common council at their next meeting.

Because of it being election night, as well as the first Tuesday of the month, Mayor Richard adjourned the regular meeting of the common council for one week.

The Masons and Elks met again in tournament Monday evening at the Elks club and increased their lead over the "Brother Bills" to two games by reason of an 8-6 defeat handed the Elks. The Masons won the opener of last week and with this inspiration maintained a lead over the Elks throughout the evening. It will be remembered that the Masons failed to win a victory until many weeks had passed in the 1927 tournament.

Supt. of Fire Alarm Charles T. Thayer, accompanied by a few fire officials made a test of the newly installed box at the head of Main street near the Belding Heminway Silk company Monday evening. The box was devised and installed by Supt. Thayer for protection to the residents of Eastern Providence street while the bridge is under repair. It should be used for the calling of the department in the event of a conflagration east of the Quinebaug. The alarm struck perfectly first ringing out 3 strokes followed by 1 and closing with 2 strokes.

A efature of American Education week, now being observed in the schools of Putnam will be a night session of the public and high schools Wednesday evening, for all pupils above the fourth grade. There will be no schools during the day, but the pupils will be required to be present at 6.45 p. m., to begin the studies for the day. Sessions will be carried on until 9.15 p. m. Superintendent of Schools Leon M Farrin has arranged this schedule for the benefit of the parents of the children and urges that all make an effort to attend. An opportunity will be afforded each parent to consult the teacher as to the scholarship records of the pupil. An extra attraction to be furnished as a part of the evening will be a recital rendered by the music club of the school and girls basket ball practice, both of which will be at Putnam high school.

Two Norwich residents were thankful today that Hoover and Smith were contesting their strength for the office of president of the nation as Judge Geissler of the city court was too interested in the outcome of the election in the town to hold a session of court and ordered the police to put the two residents of the city "Rose of New England" out of the city jail and start them on their way.

Both were arrested by Officer Joseph Page of the local police Monday evening. They were booked as violators of the 18th and a jail sentence was staring them in the face, but were saved this morning by the judge's paramount interest in the secret contained in the ballot boxes in the municipal building.

Horace Hayes of Grove street, this city struck Gene Pelitier of 61 Combs street, Southbridge, Sunday while passing through that city. Hayes claimed that Pelitier jumped in the path of his car and he was unable to avoid striking him. The young man was rushed to a hospital in Southbridge where he was treated for the injuries received from the crash. A Southbridge police officer made an investigation of the accident and allowed Mr. Hayes to continue to Putnam after relieving him of any blame.

A HOOVER VICTORY

With reports at midnight causing the supporters of Alfred E. Smith to concede the election of Herbert C. Hoover there simply remains the task of completing the tabulations and determining the exact number of votes in the electoral college and the popular vote of the country. It is a rousing Hoover victory.

Mr. Hoover by the voice of the people will be the next president. This is an endorsement of the present administration and its policies which Mr. Hoover has promised to continue. It is likewise an endorsement of the position which has been taken by Mr. Hoover upon the issues of the campaign and the manner in which he has presented them to the nation. So decisive and strong has been the support of the republican candidate that he was able to carry the state of New York, the state which elected Mr Smith governor four times. It has likewise gained an unusual vote from the southern states where republican candidates have hitherto had no chance.

Connecticut is to be found, as was expected, in the Hoover column, and in addition to giving its electoral votes to Mr. Hoover insisted upon electing a republican senator and five republican members in the next congress. This means the kind of support which the new administration will need, and unless present indications fail it is certain to get a decisive majority in both houses.

Likewise in returning to office the republican state officials Connecticut has acted wisely and well. It is action in keeping with the record of the past and will operate for the best interests of the commonwealth.

Norwich in going democratic sends to the legislature democratic representatives and a democratic senator, the latter by a narrow margin. This gives Norwich the minority representations which insures it no advantage in the next general assembly.

NORWICH SHOULD GET BUSY

Last week the prediction was made by Senator Hiram Bingham that within three years every first class city in the country would have an airport. Senator Bingham is an authority on aviation. He has made a study of it on both sides of the Atlantic. What he says is in keeping with the developments which have taken place and the interest that is being manifested.

Throughout the country facilities are being provided for the convenience of the patrons of air travel and for the benefit of business which depends upon the quick handling of mail through the air and the transportation of certain commodities which are needed in a hurry.

If there is going to be air service there must be landing fields. The city which has no landing field must expect to experience delays. It is perfectly obvious that cities must take the same interest in encouraging airplanes to come to them that communities do in attracting steamship lines. If there were not channels and piers, steamships would pay no attention to ports which are now visited. If there are no airports there will be a denial of the benefits of air navigation. Speedy service will be forced to experience delays.

It was not long ago that the declaration was made that cities which did not have airports would be out of date. From the progress which has been made in keeping up to date and the plans that are being made, there is no intention on the part of cities in this country to neglect their opportunities.

This is, of course, as it should be. It is the attitude that should be taken right here in Norwich. While we do not rank with the largest cities we know the advantage of air service and if passenger, mail or freight carrying service is to be obtained here, or if passengers, mail or freight are to be brought here there must be a place for the planes to land. There could be no thought of rivaling the big flying fields but a field that would meet requirements should be obtained and made ready for use as an inducement to those who travel in planes.

RIVER POLLUTION

River pollution is a problem that is getting more attention in states where slight attention has been paid to it in the past. The river has been looked upon as the natural outlet for sewage systems, the handiest place for disposing of waste from factories. Up to a certain point such pollution was taken care of by the flowage of the streams but with increases in population and added and expanded industrial activity the situation has gotten to a point where pollution needs to be checked if streams are to be anything more than open sewers.

There are many conspicuous examples to demonstrate this. It is in those places that the start needs to be made for cleaning up those conditions. It is not the easiest thing to accomplish. It is not an undertaking in which there is an eagerness to comply or cooperate. It involves much expense, whether it means the changing over of a city's sewage system, or whether it concerns the construction of a disposal plant for a manufacturing establishment.

It has been recently stated by the Philadelphia Bulletin that there are not more than 5,000 miles of strictly pure running water in the streams of Pennsylvania which boasts of 100,000 miles of running water. We do not know just how much of the running water in Connecticut could be accepted as strictly pure, but there is no mistaking the fact that our rivers are polluted to the point where it needs to be stopped. Such an observation is by no means new. Connecticut has long since made a move to bring about improvement, to obtain a check upon the new pollution that is taking place and to steadily bring about a reduction in that of long standing. This can be and is being done by the construction of filter beds for cities or factories so that future development can be cared for in this manner.

When we stop to realize what is being done by such cities as New Orleans in purifying the water from the dirty Mississippi river for drinking purposes, where tests show it to be the fourth purest in the country, we are bound to be amazed, but there are streams which are worse and look worse than the Mississippi and when it comes to dealing with pollution there it is prevention that is sorely needed.

D. C. RESIDENTS HUMILIATED

While the people throughout the country were going to the polls on Tuesday to cast their votes for the president, those in the District of Columbia were manifesting their disapproval over the fact that they were deprived of such a right.

It was possible for those who maintain a residence in some other state to go home and vote and a great many of the government employes did so but there are a half million in the district who were unable to express their preference as to the successor to President Coolidge.

This is of course nothing new, but the feeling has grown that it should be changed and agitation finds plenty of backers. That there is a discrimination against those residents is evident. There is a penalty for becoming a resident of the district and there can be no surprise if those people desire a change. They cannot understand why they should be deprived of their franchise.

In making their demonstrations on what they regard as their day of humiliation there are calling attention to a situation which will not be changed so long as it is possible to maintain that the residents of the district are satisfied. Such an attitude may be inferred unless they remonstrate. When they enter their protests in a sane and convincing manner they are paving the way for attention. When they ask for a voice in the choice of a president and in the selection of a congress to rule them and make the laws which they must obey they appear to be making a legitimate claim. They seek to be treated like the other citizens of the United States and they are bound to get much sympathy in the fight they are making.

CARING FOR THE AGED

In the care of the aged there are various problems which arise to bother. There is the care that is afforded in homes and there is the care that is provided by the towns. In too many instances the aim seems to be to furnish a comfortable home with good food and shelter. That is of course what is desired, but in many instances there could and should be something more.

Those who are homeless are not always incapacitated. They may be forced to accept institutional life but in many cases they would be glad of something to do. Sitting about with folded hands may be regarded by the hard workers as something desirable, but it soon becomes monotonous. Many of these men are still clever in their respective trades. They long for something to do, something to occupy their hands and minds, something to take up their time.

In recognition of this fact workshops have been established in some cities for the purpose of giving employment to aged persons for such hours as they are able to work each day and it has been found that the sale of the goods produced makes them self supporting. This must make its appeal to the industrious fellows who have experienced the slowing up due to age but who are not ready or willing to stop working. They are permitted to work when they can and provided with a means of paying their way. Instead of being crowded out and into a discouraging period of idleness and disinterestedness, they are encouraged to maintain their independence even though they cannot keep up with the competition that is furnished by the younger men. For those who are physically fit, the importance of keeping the mental and physical faculties active cannot be too greatly emphasized. It is beneficial to those within and a Godsend to those without institutional walls.

As Maine went so went the nation.

Now that election is over there will be more time for football.

The day after an election always affords a big time for the I-told-you-so crowd.

With the democrats conceding a Hoover victory there is surprise, Mr. Smith's plan calls for the naming of a commission to find out about it.

LOOK PLEASANT, PLEASE

"Bob, what on earth are you doing?"

Dot was thoroughly vexed. Ten minutes ago he had said, "Yes, go ahead and fry the eggs." After what seemed an aeon of waiting, a familiar plunk, plunk sounded on the stairs.

"My goodness," grumbled Dot, "you are certainly putting into a dreadful habit. Every morning the breakfast is ruined because you're so slow. How long do you think an egg stays hot, anyway?"

"For the love of Mike!" Bob threw up both hands in protest. "I'd rather have a cold egg any day than all this fuss."

"The eggs were not the outstanding reason for my wanting you to hurry this morning," Dot added frankly. "You remember mother's Aunt Emmaline, out west? She's never seen you and she has written asking for a picture of the man I married."

"See here, Twinkies, you can't draw me to any photographer's studio."

"I've no ambition to draw you anywhere. I'm going to crash now myself, out on the front steps," said Dot.

After she had dictated at length just how he should stand, she looked him over critically.

"You know," she observed, "Aunt Emmaline is very particular about appearances. I think you had better turn your head a little this way so the bump on your nose won't be quite so prominent. And can't you do something with your arms? You look positively stiff. Be natural, Bob.

"Oh, now you've turned your head back, and there is the bump on your nose again. Well there now, that's a little better. Don't stare at the camera. Be casual. Do something with your eyes. Examine a branch on that shrubbery. Lean over a little. No, not that way. I do want Aunt Emmaline to be pleased. Now, hold that pose. One, two, three."

Later, to the gentleman behind the counter, Dot said: "You must have given me the wrong folder; this is not my husband's picture."

"Madam," replied the clerk, "I can't say whose husband it is, but the films are the ones you left to be developed."

"Perhaps you are right," murmured Dot apologetically, scrutinizing the negative more closely. "The steps and the shrubbery look familiar, but surely would recognize Mr. Perkins. He looks like a cartoon of himself, and I did try so hard. I wanted the picture to turn out especially nice."

"Possibly," offered the clerk, "you would like to read one of these pamphlets on amateur photography," and he handed her a small booklet.

Dot dug into its contents with determination. "Never," it stated "focus the attention of the subject on his defects. Rather, play upon his pleasing possibilities. To obtain the best results, create an atmosphere of ease and amiability."

The bacon was crisped and Dot paused with an egg in her hand.

"He said ten minutes ago that he was ready. I really should call him," she thought, but for some reason she did not obey her impulse, nor did she fry the egg. She waited silently, endlessly, it seemed. At last there was a familiar plunk, plunk upon the stairs. She broke the egg into the smoking fat.

"Ho, ho," laughed Bob from the doorway. "That's once I beat you, Twinkies." Dot raised him a smile which might have meant anything and said, "Dearest, you are just in time."

"Gosh, but, these eggs are easy to eat," commended Bob.

"They are good, aren't they?" Then, after a pause she said, "I made an awful bungle of that picture for Aunt Emmaline. You look so full of pep this morning. I wonder if you'd pose again?"

"Do I glue my eyes on the same old bush?" Bob inquired a few minutes later, as Dot led him outside.

"Forget that bush" laughed Dot. "By the way, did I tell you the noses of your tulips are beginning to show through the ground?" Bob's eyes danced, and he began to rake meticulously with one foot among the dried leaves at the base of the shrubbery.

Dot gave an exclamation of delight as the clerk handed her the proof of her second endeavor.

"I must thank you again for that little took," she told him. "I tried out the idea, and it worked admirably—both photographically and otherwise!"

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON Nov. 6—The unfinished condition of the tomb at Arlington National cemetery of the Unknown Soldier created an incident during the visit to Washington of Dr Eckener and his officers of the great German commercial trans-Atlantic air liner Graf Zeppelin which seemed for a time to be destined to cast a cloud on the atmosphere of international good will.

In the hurry and unfamiliar bustle of his visit to the tomb to place a wreath upon it the airship commander inadvertently stepped on the tomb itself. It looks more like the base of a projected but uncompleted monument than a tomb in its present state and this no doubt played a part in what happened.

Embassy and government officials were quick to move in correction. A hasty conference with press and news reel photographers resulted in almost all pictures being stricken out. Dr. Eckener came back and went through the ceremony again in order that a proper film record might be made. Some of the camera men even went so far as to break their original plates.

Eckener at Mount Vernon

As to Dr. Eckener's personal attitude toward the ideals and traditions American reverence there can be no doubt. During that same visit to Washington he demonstrated his respect in a way that had nothing to do with publicity or news reels.

He was very tired after a constant round of receptions from the time he landed, still under the strain of the amazing air voyage where major responsibility rested on his shoulders. Dr. Kelp, German charge d'affaires, saw this and maneuvered to give the airship commander a chance for rest, slipping him away for an automobile ride with Mrs. Kelp.

And by wish of Dr. Eckener himself, the car stopped at a florists's and then sped to Mount Vernon where unrecognized by the thronging tourists, he laid a floral tribute on the tomb of George Washington.

Tomb Guard Necessary

Ultimately there will be a fitting monument of some sort to mark the tomb of the Unknown. Congress has granted the authority and made appropriations and the study of a suitable completion of this memorial to American dead in the World war is progressing. Against the wish of army authorities to avoid stationing a special military guard on the terrace of the Memorial Amphitheatre where the Unknown lies, however, such precautions have been necessary.

An armed sentry is posted there through all daylight hours when the cemetery is open to the public. A canvas head-shade protects him a little from the sun glare and a sentry box, marring the beauty of the classic architecture the terrace rail, affords a storm shelter. In no other way has it been possible to prevent desecration of the tomb by the hundreds of tourists who visit the shrine.

Memory Pictures.

Mr. Editor: Today as I look across the hills I cannot help but think how cheerless every thing looks with the rain coming down and the trees gradually losing their foliage and the sun hid behind the lowering clouds. It's just the kind of a day to make one become a dreamer, and have a thought of other days. Why is it as we grow old we become reminiscent and think the old days were the best? I cannot answer the question and this usually applies to others for I find my case in not an exceptional one.

I thought at this time of some of the old days that we spent along the banks of the Shetucket river, where in early days it was teeming with fish and any one could go and get whatever he thought was sufficient for his needs. At the Greeneville dam was a great fishing ground. That is to say, on the apron of the old dam you could fish without any restrictions as to what you got. For in those days you did not need a license either for fishing or hunting. Do some of you older ones recall a man named Trent, who came down from Hartford every spring to catch lamprey eels and how he would spread out a large tarpaulin over the rocks and there he would hook them on and throw them upon the canvas. I have often thought, did he sell them for the silver kind? Just below the dam some two or three hundred feet was a great spot for drawing a seine for some of the finest shad. This was the stamping ground for Powers Bros. and Chapman, who had a market down in Rose alley. They also had a fine fishing place almost opposite to where is now located the Norwich gas and electric plant. I don't believe at this time that there are any fish in the river. I may be wrong, but that is as it appears to me today.

Yes, the river was full of all kinds of fish in those early days and that is only a short time ago, some 60 odd years, for we could get perch, shad, buckeyes, eels, and this was a boon for the poor people for it helped out on their living expenses. Many would take enough to salt down for a long winter. Perhaps some of the old timers can remember this, but all these things have passed and gone. Still we love to think of them, for this is the prerogative that is the heritage of age. Still I would rather be 70 years young than 40 years old.

Still as we think of the Shetucket as of today we can realize it was not always the same peaceful and silent stream that we see as we cross the Preston bridge, for long before my time it is recorded where during a rise of the waters there was a freshet that rose even to the second story windows of some of the houses on Franklin and East Main streets. This may seem like a fairy tale but it is a matter of record on the books of the "Rose of New England." A great many bridges have been carried away by the freshets in the years that have passed and gone.

Among some of the others was the old covered toll bridge that came into East Main street, Norwich. This covered bridge I told you about in a letter of May 6th. This bridge belonged jointly to the towns of Norwich and Preston. I have now in my possession a picture of this old covered bridge, that was given to me by my beloved teacher, Miss S. A. Armstrong, whom you will recall is living in the Johnson home at Norwich Town, and I as one of her scholars render to her my thanks for having laid down the foundation of an education that has served me all the years that have passed and gone, but while life lasts and I carry on, will never be forgotten.

In these letters from time to time I have tried to avoid any literary pyrotechnics and tell what I have to say in as plain words as possible to convey a meaning. I have only scratched the surface for Norwich and the vicinity is rich in legends and stories of early days and they only need to be ferreted out and told to the ones who love their homes and native place. As Lord Byron said:

"Words are things; and a small drop of ink, falling like dew, upon a thought, produces that which makes thousands, perhaps millions think."

And so it is with words as with summeans; the more they are condensed the deeper they burn.

And to you, Mr. Editor, I wish to extend my most sincere thanks for having given to me the space in your esteemed paper to reach those older ones who love to travel back along life's highway and recall the happiest years of their lives, their youth with its school days and school mates. And after all is said and done we are ever moving on.

These struggling tides of life, that seem in wayward aimless course to tend, Are eddies of the mighty stream, That rolls to fathomless end.

Special Hearing On Electric Rates.

Mr. Editor: Our mayor has called a special city meeting to give us citizens of Norwich an opportunity to discuss and vote on the new electric rates which the commissioners of the city of Norwich gas and electric department have put into effect. I understand that the electrical engineer who represented the gas and electric department at the meeting at the Community house admitted they had made a mistake in the commercial rates, and that they were working on a new rate for the merchants. If they admit they have made a mistake in the commercial rates isn't it possible they have made a mistake in the residential rate? The same men worked out both rates.

Let's all attend the city meeting, Thursday, November 8th, at 8 o'clock at the town hall and show the mayor by vote that the people of Norwich want to pay for the electricity they use, or buy the same as we do for other commodities, and that the gas and electric department is a plant owned by the citizens, rich and poor alike, and is not maintained to help some people and work a hardship on others.

The present method of operation at this plant has been going on for some time and its about time something was done about it. Let's do it Thursday night.

ANOTHER INTERESTED ONE.

Norwich, Nov. 6, 1928.

Wants Facts Thursday Night.

Mr. Editor: I know you have heard a lot about the new electric rates and we hope to hear something more on Thursday evening. We hope that the gas and electric commissioners will be there and give us some information which many have been looking for for a long time. Besides the important matters, there are things of minor interest to us all.

Last summer the gas and electric commissioners entertained the employes of the department at a 12 hour party at Ashland park, Jewett City, at a cost of several hundred dollars, and many had a good time but I understand that some of the girls were disappointed as Miss Norwich could not go in swimming. Other years outings have been held near the salt water where all sports could be enjoyed. It is rumored that the water department, the public works department, the park department and possibly the finance department are to have like outings this coming season but some of us taxpayers wonder where a stop will be made as the city's debt now is about the limit.

The general manager now is getting only $8,000 a year with a Cadillac touring car furnished, but we do not know why the city ordinance which requires the nurse of the city on all automobiles owned by the city has been violated. But these are only minor things and of the more important ones are covered I suppose it is all we can expect for one evening. Yours for MORE INFORMATION.

Misrepresenting The Cow.

Mr. Editor: Will you kindly inform me why the Y. M. C. A. of Norwich resort to an untruth for an advertisement? Their ad. reads: "A cow doesn't like to exercise, but who wants to be a cow?" And there is pictured a broken backed, crooked legged cow. Why not proclaim the truth that cows love to exercise and keep fit by so doing? Ask any real farmer he knows.

YOUR HEALTH

IS "CATARRH" CURABLE?

(By T. J. Williams, M. D., Chicago)

A patient occasionally informs us that he has had but one cold in his life—it began the day he was born, and still continues.

While most of the nasal infections are air borne, by no means are all infections carried into the nose in this manner. Children are prone to gastritis and various other gastro-intestinal afflictions which result in vomiting, the vomitus often being forcibly projected into the choana and sinuses, and it is not at all infrequent in a couple of days to find a well developed head cold. The parents may believe the head cold to be the primary infection and cause of the disturbance, whereas it is really secondary to the infected vomitus. It is much the same as where the vomitus is forced up through suppurative ear disease in children. In children, too, we have a lack of establishment of the lymph glands and lymph chains. It is true that these guardians against systemic infections soon become established and effective, but during early life their resistance, together with the tardiness of the ciliated epithelium of the sinus to function, make these protective barriers less effective than they are after the first decade. The important role of diet, sunshine and other newer hygienic knowledge is almost common knowledge now.

In spite of our better knowledge children are still subject to frequent head colds; however, and one head cold too often is the beginning of a series. The cars having once become infected, the suppuration may continue indefinitely and it is not infrequent that the pus discharging back through the Eustachian tube again invades the nasal mucosa and causes a sinus infection. Coughing contributes to this, of course, so that here again we may have pulmonary or tonsillar infections coughed back up into the nasal, sinus and other cavities.

Another source of sinus infection is in the predilection of children to put their fingers and other foreign bodies in the nose and thus convey infection. We must also recall that owing to the rule of mortality, there are always relatively more children than adults also there are more delicate children than there are delicate adults. Our present day care of the delicate child prolonging and sometimes saving its life grants us also a relatively higher number of sinus infections than would otherwise be the case.

At any rate, the important consideration of sinus diseases in children resolves itself into the prevention and cure of the common persistent head colds. Thus, frequent or persistent head colds makes it imperative that the parents take their children immediately to a nose and throat specialist or to any adequate medical advisor to protect the child against chronic infections of the nasal accessory sinuses which, long continued, produce what is commonly known as "chronic catarrh." We daily see such cases of chronic sinus infection with their accompanying headaches and other symptoms in the adult that could easily have been avoided by the proper care of the ordinary head cold during childhood. Fortunately, our present knowledge permits us to cure practically every case of so called "chronic nasal catarrh."

WORKING WOMEN SELDOM LOSE A DAY'S PAY NOW
Strengthened by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

MRS. R. C. HAZLETT
Station G., R. No. 3, Columbus, Ohio

Eastwood, Ohio.—"I first took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for a weak, nervous, run-down condition, seven years ago, after my baby was born. Some of the girls in the factory where I worked when I was able, advised me to take it. I got one bottle and that helped me so much that I took one after another until I had taken nine in all. But now I just get a bottle when I begin to feel badly, for I must say the medicine sure helped me and I am able to work every day. I will answer any questions anyone asks me, for I think your medicines are fine."—Mrs. R. C. Hazlett, Station G., R. No. 3, Columbus, Ohio.

Recommends the Compound

Los Angeles, Cal.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound because I was working in a factory and I was always on my feet, being the supervisor there. This caused my health to fail and I really was run-down very badly as I had no appetite at all and could not eat enough. I am taking the Vegetable Compound and also the Pills for Constipation. I have recommended them for several years and am safe in saying that probably 25 women have been helped through taking my advice. I am glad for you to use these facts as a testimonial."—Mrs. E. A. Francher, 1261 Cypress Avenue, Los Angeles, California.

COLVIN M. BROWN ENDORSES NORWICH INN PROJECT

Development of the Norwich inn project is going on at high speed and Norwich is being rapidly educated in the objectives of the enterprise and the value this new hotel project will be to our city and surrounding territory.

Following Robert W. Perkins' address before the Business and Professional Women's club at noon on Tuesday, Colvin M. Brown, chief of the organization service of the chamber of commerce of the United States, heartily endorsed the plan when he spoke before the Woman's City club at their dinner at the Wauregan hotel in the evening. Mr. Brown, who has traveled over 90,000 miles in the United States during the present year and who has visited practically every community of the United States during his occupancy of the office he graces so well, pointed out the value of up-to-date modern hotels and their value to the cities which possess them. He cited the particular instance of the Francis Scott Key hotel in Frederic, Maryland, where a much-needed hotel was developed on the same general plan that will establish the Norwich Inn in the environs of Norwich.

His firm conviction that a new hotel will spread the fame of Norwich found a ready acceptance in the minds of his hearers, nearly 200 of the leading women of our city. Mr. Brown expressed the belief that success would follow the effort to establish the new hotel, as that has been the experience in many other cities. His knowledge of Treadway Inns enabled him to give assurance that the new inn would be a structure of charm and simplicity which would afford opportunity for Norwich organizations such as the Woman's club to enjoy facilities for entertainment on a larger scale than is possible with the present available facilities.

Mrs. Charles Gilbert, president of the club, called attention to a display of views of other New England inns operating under Treadway management, which were on display and were inspected with a great show of interest. Judging from the enthusiasm with which Mr. Brown's remarks were received there is no doubt of the interest of Norwich women in the new enterprise.

Bernard Wunderlich was chairman of the committee in charge.

The Duwell club also held open house election night, receiving the returns by radio.

Another local club that had a special programme for the evening was the Elks club at their headquarters on Main street. The election returns were received by radio until a late hour. The returns were also received by radio at th headquarters of Hourigan post, No. 594, Veterans of Foreign Wars, on Water street.

DEMOCRATS SWEEP NORWICH WITH LEAD OF 463 VOTES FOR SMITH

Norwich made a complete switch into the democratic column in the election and state elections Tuesday. Governor Smith of New York, democratic candidate for president, had a majority of 463 over Herbert Hoover, the republican candidate, and Charles G. Morris, democrat, led John H. Trumbull, republican, in the contest for governor by 430 votes.

The total vote for Smith was 5,739, for Hoover 5,326. On the vote for governor Mr. Morris got 5,775 and Mr. Trumbull 5,345. Augustine Lonegan, democratic candidate for United States senator, led Frederick C. Walcott, republican, by 5,767 to 5,352, and Congressman Richard P. Freeman of New London, running for re-election had to concede a lead in the balloting to William M. Citron of Middletown, 5,784 to 5,334.

Four years ago, Norwich gave a republican majority of 1,950 over Davis, the democratic candidate, but the smashing democratic victory of Tuesday was scored in a marvelous outpouring of voters as between 80 and 90 per cent. of those in the town qualified to vote went to the polls and exercised their franchise. The total registration in the town, men and women, is 12,347 and of this number 11,260 voted, a record breaking participation for all time in elections in the town.

The flood of democratic ballots carried defeat also to the candidates in the local political field as Albert W. Lillibridge, of Norwich, democratic candidate for state senator in the 19th district, led his republican opponent, John F. Richardson, of Preston, by 5,791 to 5,328 and the two republican candidates for representatives in the state legislature, Henry P. Beausoliel and Josiah Greenstein, with 5,819 and 5,376 votes respectively, were defeated by Charles S. Avery and Patrick T. Connell of Norwich, democrats, who had 5,792 and 5,581 votes respectively.

Three Districts Republican.

Out of the wreck of republican hopes, three districts of the town offered some consolation to the party workers, for Norwich Town, the West Side and the East Side stayed in the republican column. All the rest were democratic and the usually reliable central district, which is counted on to overcome possible democratic figures in other parts of the town, gave a majority of 177 for Smith over Hoover.

Norwich Town gave a republican majority of 382, the West Side section was republican by 59 and the East Side district by 93. Overcoming these figures were the democratic majority of 177 in the central district, 322 in the Greeneville district and 518 in the Taftville district.

For days before the election the public had been warned of the big registration and urged to vote early. The warning was effective and in the earlier hours of the day there were long lines of men and women formed at most of the polling places at different times. So generally did the voters take the advice to get to the polls early that the afternoon was comparatively quiet and in some of the districts almost three-quarters of the vote had been polled by 1 o'clock in the afternoon.

In the first district 2,390 men and women had voted by 1 o'clock, in the second district, 1,872, in the third, 1,447, in the fourth, 1,007, in the fifth, 1,023, and in the sixth 649.

The great response on the part of the voters is shown by the following tabulation of voters registered and voting:

| First District— | Men | Women. | Total |
|---|---|---|---|
| Registered | 2668 | 2299 | 4967 |
| Voting | 2243 | 2141 | 4384 |
| Second District— | | | |
| Registered | 1289 | 950 | 2239 |
| Voting | 1104 | 856 | 1960 |
| Third District— | | | |
| Registered | 981 | 829 | 1810 |
| Voting | 902 | 781 | 1683 |
| Fourth District— | | | |
| Registered | 663 | 656 | 1319 |
| Voting | 592 | 606 | 1198 |
| Fifth District— | | | |
| Registered | 918 | 477 | 1395 |
| Voting | 810 | 461 | 1261 |
| Sixth District— | | | |
| Registered | 455 | 362 | 817 |
| Voting | 436 | 339 | 774 |

The weather was favorable to getting out a large vote, a smart shower for about half an hour about 11 o'clock being the only thing to keep people home, but the rest of the day was fair.

William F. Hill, a former tax collector of the city, was the first person to vote in the central district and Henrietta B. Steinkamp was the first woman. From 8 to 10 o'clock were the rush hours in this district and according to a tabulation kept by Registrar Cornelius J. Downes there were 635 persons voting between 8 and 9 o'clock and 639 between 9 and 10 o'clock. From then on there were fewer each hour and in the final hour of the day, from 5 to 6 o'clock, there were only 51 who voted. The following was the record by hours in this district where four voting machines were in use:

First hour 435; second hour 515; third hour 635; fourth hour 639; fifth hour 513; sixth hour 419; seventh hour 244; eighth hour 358; ninth hour 259; tenth hour 170; eleventh hour 149; twelfth hour 51; a total of 4,375.

In the West Side district the first woman voter was Celia M. Charbonneau and the first man George C. Moore. There were 304 voting in the first hour. Two machines were in use.

In the Greeneville district, where there were two machines, there were times when the voting went on at a rate of 7 to 8 per minute, 296 voting in the first hour. Harold O. Johndrow and Agnes McCracken were the first two voters.

At Norwich Town there were 748 votes up to 10:15, James R. Moran and Ida M. Beebe being the first to vote.

The Taftville district had two machines for the voters to use and the first to vote were Blanche Molleur and Raymond Benoit. There were 648 votes up to 10:25 o'clock.

In the East Side district there were 35 votes in the first 15 minutes and 123 in the first hour.

Counting the Vote

For fifteen minutes before the closing hour of 6 o'clock arrived at the central district poling place in the police court room at the court house, there had been no one to vote and when the town clock struck 6 Moderator Jensen promptly declared the polls closed.

With the assistance of Town Clerk Harold S. Burt and Registrars Tyler D. Guy and Cornelius J. Downes, the moderator then proceeded to take the vote from the four machines. A crowd of about 300 men and women watched the proceedings with intense interest, standing on chairs and benches in order to look over each others heads and catch the figures as Mr. Jensen announced them for tabulation.

The first machine read, on which 1,325 votes had been cast, showed a democratic lead of 327 to 534 on the vote for president. The second machine recorded 1,096 votes and with a democratic lead of 580 to 502. On the third machine there were 1,140 votes in which the democrats had a lead of 600 to 541, and on the fourth there were 915 votes, in which the republicans had a lead of 452 to 449.

By the time the vote from the four machines had been taken onto the tally sheets, the votes from the other districts began to come in and the complete vote was assembled as quickly as possible, but this was a long task, even with the use of an adding machine and it was not until 3:50 that the final figures were completed.

THE BULLETIN SWAMPED BY TELEPHONE CALLS

So intense was the interest in the outcome of the national and state election that The Bulletin editorial rooms were literally swamped by telephone calls from 6 o'clock in the evening until midnight. The several telephones in the office were busy throughout the night answering inquiries regarding the election. The first call came in about 4:15 from some woman who asked who was elected? When told that the polls didn't close in this city until 6 o'clock, and that no returns would be available until after that time, she said she thought it was queer that The Bulletin didn't know what the results were up to the time she called. They have been voting all day, she said, and I don't see why you haven't kept a count of the voters.

Several calls were received between 5 and 5:30 o'clock asking for the results of the local, state and national vote in Norwich. These inquirers evidently were under the impression that the polls closed in Norwich at 5 o'clock, instead of 6 o'clock.

"If you tell me what time I can call and get the final results on the Hoover-Smith vote, I won't have to bother you any more until then," said one woman who called shortly before six o'clock.

There were all kinds of queer questions to be answered. For instance one person called up about midnight, and asked "Is the election over?" Another person called up about 7:30 o'clock and asked if he could get the vote for the entire country by states.

From 7 o'clock until late at night The Bulletin megaphoned the election results as fast as they were received to a large crowd in front of The Bulletin building on Franklin street. Women and children seemed as much interested in the results as the men.

COLVIN M. BROWN ADDRESSED OFFICIALS OF CHAMBER

The six retiring directors and the new board of directors of the Norwich chamber of commerce held a joint meeting Tuesday noon at the Wauregan hotel. Present also were the newly elected treasurer, Henry D. Johnson and James L. Case, national councillor, representing Norwich in the U. S. chamber, and a former president of the local chamber. A special chicken dinner was served and President Joseph C. Worth presided.

President Worth welcomed Mr. Case and then called on Arthur M. Brown, who in brief remarks, emphasized the valuable service rendered by Harold D. Larrabee, president of the chamber, the past year. Secretary Walter M. Pilcher introduced the speaker, Colvin M. Brown, manager of the commercial organization department of the United States chamber. Mr. Brown who spoke principally on chamber operations, said in part:

"To succeed the chamber of commerce must be organized and conducted on business lines. All projects and policies must be determined on the basis of full information. The secretary is the chief administrative officer of the chamber. His position is similar to that of general manager of a corporation. He carries out the policies and directs the activities determined upon by the board. He is not the chamber, but the one who makes a working organization out of the chamber. When the secretary is burdened with duties outside of the main program of achievement, he lessens his effectiveness. Chamber of commerce like corporations should never undertake more than they can accomplish. This means that all programs should be short, definite and practical. A manufacturing plant would not accept an order in excess of its ability to deliver. No more should a chamber of commerce. If the secretary receives the right support from his directors and membership, he is in a position to direct activities along main channels and produce results. Any scattering of efforts will weaken the organization. As long as there is a margin between what a city is and what it may be made to be there is work for a chamber of commerce. The field of activity is within this margin, no matter what certain individuals or groups of individuals may think should be undertaken in their special interests.

Mr. Brown will address the members of the Norwich Rotary club at their meeting this (Wednesday) noon.
